Chapter 1071 What if She Only Loves Your Money?

"No way! We have to go now!" They could wait, but Marigold's baby couldn't.

If they were to get married, they had to do it early; otherwise, finding a suitable wedding dress would be difficult as her stomach grew bigger.

After hanging up, Jenny took a taxi to Zack's place. Meanwhile, Zack looked defeated after the call.

"What's wrong?" Janet sat beside him, sensing that he was in a terrible mood.

Zack sighed and told her what happened. In his opinion, Janet was part of his circle, so he had nothing to hide from her. Hearing the news, Janet fell silent.

"Based on my knowledge of Gilbert, even if he knows that Marigold is pregnant, he won't marry her. If Jenny insists on bringing me with her, I foresee that we won't be having a pleasant talk at his place," Zack deduced.

Hearing that, Janet finally came to her senses. 'But...shouldn't Gilbert be held accountable?"

They soon arrived at Gilbert's villa. As they had called in advance, Gilbert was already home when they arrived.

Seeing the two of them get out of the car, Gilbert's eyes lit up with joy. ' Come on in."

Although spring was approaching, it was still snowing in Bardoff City, with temperatures being very low.

The three of them entered the house. Zack didn't bring Janet with him, so Gilbert had no objections and spoke to him in a much better tone than he had used during their last encounter.

"Gilbert, Zack, you haven't had dinner, right?" Jenny said first, making it clear that they were here for a meal.

"Don't worry. Do you think I will starve you?" Gilbert laughed.

Jenny grinned and watched as Gilbert walked into the kitchen. Then, she pulled Zack to sit on the sofa nearby.

Chapter 1073 What Do You Think Is Going On Between Us?

Perhaps Jenny's question caught him by surprise as Gilbert froze for a moment. "Why are you suddenly asking this?"

"I'm just curious," Jenny answered with a guilty smile.

After pondering it, Gilbert said, "I don't like them very much. I think children are troublesome."

He preferred the free and relaxed nature of his life currently. If there were a child, just the thought of the child crying would give him a headache.

His answer filled Jenny with despair. To begin with, Gilbert did not like Marigold. Since he didn't even like children, how could she bring it up?

"Jenny, why did you and Zack come today?" Gilbert stopped chopping the vegetables. Initially, he had thought they had come because of Zack and Janet, but he didn't think so anymore.

Having grown up together with Jenny, Gilbert knew her very well. There was no way she would tell him to be responsible for Marigold just because he slept with her once.

Gilbert looked at her, waiting for her to speak. Under his stare, Jenny felt frustrated. Of course, she couldn't ask Gilbert to take responsibility just because they slept together, especially since Marigold had taken advantage of Gilbert. In the end, she sighed and said, "I met Marigold at the hospital today.'

Gilbert frowned, failing to understand why Jenny was telling him that. He didn't care at all about Marigold.

"She came to see me because she had a headache. I suggested she have a CT scan of her brain, but..." Jenny stopped and looked at Gilbert.

Gilbert was still completely puzzled, but he was increasingly upset with Marigold. He had warned her not to tell anyone about what had happened in the past, so he didn't expect her to go to Jenny.

Jenny's words were spot on, and Gilbert was left stunned and speechless.

It would be best if the child wasn't his so there would be no problems. However, if that wasn't the case...

Gilbert refused to think of the possibility.

"No idea because the child can't possibly be mine,' Gilbert insisted. Nobody knew if he truly thought that way or simply refused to accept reality.

Frustrated, Jenny said, "Gilbert, you can use amniocentesis for a paternity test while the child is still in the womb."

"What do you mean, Jenny? Are you convinced that the child is mine?" Gilbert was unhappy. Why did everyone assume that the child belonged to him just because Marigold was pregnant?

"Zack is right.' Gilbert agreed.

Although he didn't think the child was his, he still had to make some things clear to Marigold, so she wouldn't come back to bother him later.

Jenny was frustrated. Why weren't they thinking from Marigold's perspective? She was wrong for taking advantage of Gilbert, but she never pestered him after that, nor did she look for him after she got pregnant. Didn't that prove she wouldn't use the child as a bargaining chip?

"Gilbert, I understand what you mean. I will go find Marigold." Jenny stopped Gilbert from doing it himself. She was afraid that Gilbert would get angry and do something irrational.

When she returned to Evan's place, she found him waiting for her, which made her a little embarrassed. "Evan, you haven't slept yet?"

"No, I was waiting for you." Evan smiled at her softly. His gentle gaze was so welcoming that Jenny wondered if she would have fallen for him again if she hadn't met Alec before Evan came back.

After all, he was the one she had liked when she was young, and although it seemed a bit ridiculous looking back, she still had a teeny bit of feelings left for him. Unfortunately, it would never happen because in the time Evan went missing, someone else filled the gap in her heart.

"Is your headache better?" Jenny asked.

Evan nodded, indicating that he was fine now.

"Did you have a talk with him?" He knew what Jenny went to find Gilbert for and was curious about how he would handle it.

Evan was in his room and couldn't hear what Jenny and Alec were talking about, but he could guess from Alec's smile that they were having a good chat. His mood suddenly turned sour.

"You should rest." Howard didn't know what Evan was thinking, nor could he do anything about it.

Evan nodded and got up from the wheelchair to lie down on the bed. Just as Howard was about to leave, he suddenly said, "Set an appointment with Alec to come over tomorrow."

"You want to see him?" Howard was puzzled. He didn't think Evan and Alec had anything to talk about.

Evan nodded but didn't bother to explain. He was already formulating a plan in his mind. If he wanted to go abroad, he needed a good reason.

Howard didn't ask any more questions. All he knew was that Evan had his plans, and he just needed to do as he was told.

The next day, Jenny invited Marigold out during her lunch break.

"Although people may be more accepting of it now, I think children without a father still feel a little sad about it. Have you considered that?" Jenny looked at her. It was a sincere question, with no intention to mock Marigold's situation.

Marigold lowered her head, and it was clear that Jenny's words had struck a chord in her. In fact, she was also worried, and she knew what a father meant to a child. But what could she do?

If Gilbert knew she was pregnant with his child, he would force her to have an abortion since he loathed her.

"I went to see my brother yesterday.' Jenny finally told her after a long pause.

Marigold's eyes widened in shock and then turned to fear. 'You...you told him?'"

Marigold thought she was about to start anew, but when Gilbert approached her, she realized that starting a new life was harder than she had imagined.

"Whose child is it?" Gilbert asked her coldly. Although Jenny said he would talk to Marigold for him, he wasn't reassured by how she reacted to the situation. Therefore, he decided to talk to Marigold himself.

Marigold noticed the frosty look he was giving her. Feeling a little nervous, she clenched her fists beneath the table. "It's not yours anyway. Why are you so worked up over the situation?"

"Since it's not mine, why did you lie about it?" Gilbert continued to frown. He had been staring at Marigold, trying to see through her.

However, Marigold put up a good fight as she knew that if Gilbert knew the child was his, he would not allow her to give birth to the child safely.

"At first, I thought of using the child to tie you down, but after Jenny talked to me, I knew that it wouldn't work, so I stopped lying," Marigold said with a light laugh.
