Chapter 1371 Gilbert and Marigold (46)

Happiness was written all over her face, and she just could not hide it.

When she thought of the fact that her hard work had finally paid off after such a long time, she just couldn't help but smile.

"Jenny, thank you." If Jenny hadn't reminded her, she might still be as careless as before. If that were the case, Gilbert probably would not fall for her.

Jenny, however, didn't share the same thought. She knew Gilbert's character very well. He had always been indifferent toward outsiders, but he would slowly change after getting along with the person for some time. Jenny felt that even if she didn't say anything to Marigold, they would still end up together sooner or later if they continued to get along as they did before.

She smiled at Marigold and said, "No need to thank me. This is the result of your hard work. If you really want to thank me, give me a big present when you two get married."

Marigold's face instantly flushed. She said with slight embarrassment, "I still don't know when that will be."

'Soon." Jenny had a feeling.

Marigold felt that she was about to lose her mind. He was deliberately seducing her, wasn't he? He clearly knew she liked him, yet he seduced her like that!

She bit her lips and felt she should teach him a lesson.

In the next second, she immediately took charge. She reached out her hand and held Gilbert's chin. "What do you want me to do?"

Gilbert chuckled softly. This was truly extremely interesting. He said nothing, but he didn't stop moving either. He slowly got closer to Marigold, so much so that he was almost touching her lips. "Am I the one who wants it, or are you?"

"Damn it!" Marigold swore inwardly. She was blushing so hard that her earlobes were red. She was shy and a little nervous. She was even a little excited.

Marigold felt that she should just do it. Since he had thrown himself at her, she would be wasting this opportunity if she did nothing.

Right when she was about to kiss Gilbert, their car was violently hit. Fortunately, Gilbert hugged her in time. Otherwise, the impact would have thrown her to the front seat.

Gilbert's heart almost stopped as Marigold groaned in pain.

"You-" Gilbert did not even know what to say. At that moment, he felt furious and was also in indescribable pain. However, he was feeling more worried.

He held Marigold tightly, afraid she would slip away from his arms.

Marigold could sense his nervousness as well. With a slight embarrassment, she said, "I'm fine. It just grazed me a little."

Yes, she was grazed by the bullet. Perhaps it was too dark, but the person who fired the shot missed.

Gilbert let out a sigh of relief when he heard that. What came after was rage. "Who asked you to take a bullet for me? Do you not want to live anymore?"

If the shooter didn't have a bad aim, Gilbert didn't even dare to think if Marigold could live or not.

After they returned to the villa, Gilbert brought Marigold back to the room. However, he had no intention of leaving. That made Marigold feel awkward as he did not know what he wanted.

"It's getting late. You should go back and rest.' Marigold had no choice but to be the first to speak. She couldn't let Gilbert stay by her side in the room.

Gilbert didn't leave. He looked at her and asked, "The doctor said you are not to get your arm wet, so how are you going to shower?"

Marigold couldn't believe what she had heard. "HI just skip showering today." Marigold let out a forced laugh. She was a little not used to discussing this kind of topic with him.

"If you want to take a shower, I can help," Gilbert offered. He even said it very seriously.

Marigold strongly suspected she had heard it wrong. What did he say? He could help?

Marigold had quite a good sleep at Gilbert's villa that night. She was not affected by what happened the night before.

When she got downstairs after she woke up, Gilbert was already sitting in the living room. When he saw her coming down the stairs, he got up and came to her. "Are you feeling unwell anywhere?"

"No." Marigold shook her head. She felt there was no need to make a fuss when her injury was so minor.

Upon hearing that, Gilbert didn't ask anymore. He asked the maid to have breakfast served. "Let's have breakfast."

"Alright." It was after Marigold sat down that she realized the breakfast that day was a little different from what they usually had. It was practically foods that were rich in iron. She was a little helpless. She looked up at Gilbert and said, "There's no need to go over the top when it's only a minor injury."

"So what if it's a minor injury? You were bleeding." In his opinion, since she did lose some blood, she needed more iron to replenish. Besides, it was because Marigold tried to save him that she got injured.

Marigold couldn't find a way to refute his argument. "Oh, alright." She didn't say anything else, just buried herself in her breakfast.

Both Gilbert and Esther were staring down at each other. Marigold, however, was so stunned that she could not regain her senses for a while.

What did they mean? Gilbert was going to return to the Bradshaw family? He already rejected them earlier, didn't he?

She wanted to ask him, but she felt it was not the right time to ask. She had no choice but to hold it in and ask him after Esther left.

' Alright. Since you're willing to return to the Bradshaw family, then come home with me." Esther had made up her mind that she was going to take Gilbert home. Even if he had other intentions, it was better to keep him under her nose. She refused to believe he could pull some tricks that way.

Gilbert had no intention to get up and leave at all. Instead, he said, "There's no need for me to stay with you guys, right? I'll report to Bradshaw Operations tomorrow."

Chapter 1377 Gilbert and Marigold (52)

'What's the matter?' Gilbert was confused. Did he say anything wrong earlier?

Marigold pursed her lips. She wanted to ask Gilbert what exactly she was to him, but she didn't dare to do it.

Both of them had yet to define their relationship. Perhaps Gilbert wasn't sure about his feelings for her as well. Marigold was a little afraid that she would break what they had going on if she asked him directly. If things ended well, they would immediately be together. If things end up badly, they would have to part ways.

Thinking of Gilbert's attitude from the past, Marigold got cold feet. In the end, she still didn't have the guts to ask.

'Why did you suddenly decide to return to the Bradshaw family?' Marigold asked to change the topic.

Gilbert didn't know what she was thinking about. Therefore, when he heard her asking this question, he thought that was exactly what she had been thinking about before that. "Nothing in particular. Since they welcome me so much, why shouldn't I go?"

Marigold felt he was not speaking the truth, but she asked no further questions. In any case, she had no clue about business-related things.

Chapter 1378 Gilbert and Marigold (53)

Marigold had no idea what he was thinking about as well. If she had, she would probably be even more nervous than Gilbert.

At night, both of them had dinner together. After that, Gilbert continued working in the living room, but Marigold didn't stay.

She didn't take a shower the day before, so she needed the maid to help her shower no matter what.
She felt that she could do it herself. However, Gilbert insisted on having someone to help her.
Otherwise, he would help her himself. Marigold had no choice but to choose to let the maid help her.
She wasn't quite used to it, but it was much better than allowing Gilbert to help her.

After Marigold took a shower, she didn't intend to return to the living room. Therefore, she put on a nightgown and sat in bed. She was looking at her phone, checking the news, and not doing much.

Right at that moment, someone knocked on her door. After she asked the person to come in, Gilbert walked in.

"It's you?" Marigold felt a little embarrassed. She thought it was the maid, so she didn't ask. After all, she was wearing a nightgown. The fabric was not sheer, but she still looked different from how she usually dressed.

Gilbert had a serious face, and his eyes didn't dart around. With the first-aid kit in hand, he came to Marigold. "It's time to change the dressing for your wound."

The kiss left Gilbert wanting more, but at least it helped suppress his burning urge. He didn't stay in Marigold's room. He truly had no idea what might happen if he continued to stay.

Marigold, on the other hand, calmed down. She was still feeling the buzz at that moment. She didn't care that Gilbert ran away in a wretched manner at all.

After Gilbert left, she immediately grabbed her phone and called Jenny. She had to share the good news with Jenny immediately, no matter what.

As soon as Jenny picked up the call, Marigold hurriedly said, "Jenny, I've won your brother over!"

Even though they were talking over the phone, Jenny could feel Marigold's excitement. "Is that so? Congratulations, my future sister-in-law."

Being called Jenny's future sister-in-law made Marigold feel extra happy.

That night, Marigold was so happy that she couldn't sleep. When she woke up the next morning, the dark circles under her eye frightened Gilbert.

'What happened? Were you unwell last night?' he asked with concern. He thought it was because she was not feeling well that she had trouble sleeping.

Marigold was too embarrassed to say she could not sleep because she was too happy. Therefore, she brushed him off by saying, "It's fine. I stayed up too late playing on my phone."

"That's ridiculous. You're no longer allowed to stay up late playing on your phone." Gilbert glared in annoyance. "You heard me?"

"Alright. I got it." Marigold nodded. She thought that he had already started reprimanding her before they got together. It would be worse if they were together, wouldn't it?

However, why did she still feel a little happy about it?

Both of them sat down to have breakfast together. Gilbert would have to leave the villa after breakfast. "Are you going to Bradshaw Operations today?" Marigold asked.
