

Chapter 56 Teaching Them A Lesson

Lucinda looked stunning in her fitted white skirt as she stood beside the red Porsche, creating a striking contrast that surprisingly blended well.

Onlookers couldn't help but admire the beauty of the scene and agree that someone so gorgeous like her indeed deserved such a luxurious car.

Their moment of admiration was interrupted by someone's laughter.

At first, Sallie was angry, but then she began to laugh. "You run this place?" she asked incredulously.

Sallie turned to glance at the shop's logo. They mainly sold luxury cars like Porsche. She was sure that it wasn't possible for Lucinda to own the shop and laughed hysterically.

"Lucinda, stop acting like you're the owner of this shop. I mean, come on, if you're the owner, then I'm a billionaire!"

Jax also felt like it wasn't possible but couldn't help his eyes from lusting over Lucinda.

Resting casually against the car, Lucinda smiled and said, "I don't own this shop."

Sallie was relieved to hear this and was about to make a sarcastic remark when Lucinda added, "Actually, I just bought all the car dealerships here two minutes ago. I own all of them."

Sallie thought it was a big joke. "Are you insane? You don't even have the money to purchase expensive bags and clothes. How could you buy this place? That's hilarious!"

As Sallie smelt the foul odor coming from her body, her anger towards Lucinda intensified. How dare Lucinda ask someone to pour dirty water all over her like that!

"You really think you're somebody just because your video went viral on the Internet? You'd better get down on your knees and ask for mercy right now. Then I will think about letting you go."

She appeared fierce. "My boyfriend has connections in Forden, and you don't want to mess with me."

Jax eyed Lucinda up and down. He had a lecherous grin on his face as he walked towards her.

"That's right. If you beg Sallie now, I will allow you to go. Else..."

His smile grew even more nasty. He stared at her body and licked his lips.

Lucinda's confidence was evident. She smirked and said, "We shall see."

Sallie groaned. She put her hands behind her back, and told Jax to teach Lucinda a lesson.

Some minutes later, the general manager of the market hurried towards them.

Sallie and Jax noticed the general manager's nervous demeanor and assumed he came to apologize after learning that one of his employees had attacked Sallie.

They got even cockier.

"What do you have to say?"

Sallie held her head high in anticipation of an apology from the general manager.

To their surprise the man completely ignored them and walked straight up to Lucinda. "Wow, you're the one who just bought all the car dealerships here for 5 billion! That's a huge sum of money, Madam. Sorry I didn't come out to greet you earlier, my bad. Please don't be mad at me," he said.

What?! Was this real?

Wait, did Lucinda really just become the owner of all the car dealerships here?

5 billion!

Really? How was she so rich?!

They were both left stunned and felt a mix of emotions in their hearts.

Lucinda seemed completely calm and composed.

"You must be exhausted from standing out here for so long. Come on in and have a seat!"

The general manager had no idea what Lucinda was thinking as she said nothing. He quickly bowed and invited her inside.

"By the way, now that you're the boss, you can choose any car you want here! You can even switch cars everyday if you want."

She could have any car she wanted? What an extravagant life!

Sallie couldn't believe how rich Lucinda had become and it made her feel very envious of her.

Growing up in the orphanage, Sallie found it impossible to fathom how Lucinda could have bought all the car dealerships here with a whopping 5 billion dollars.

She thought that it seemed too absurd to be true.

She shook her head in disbelief, muttering, "No way. This can't be real."

Her disbelief turned to anger as she glanced at Lucinda and yelled, "Is this a trick? You must have spent a fortune hiring these actors to put on a show for me, didn't you?"

Turning to the general manager, Sallie sneered, "And you, how much did she pay you to play along with her? I'll double it!"

The manager scowled at Sallie's disrespectful behavior and said sternly, "Miss, please show some respect to our boss and mind your language in public."

He took a couple of steps back, glancing at the drenched woman from head to toe. Then he covered his nose and quickly walked away.

Jax had encountered the general manager before and was aware that he was truly the general manager. He whispered to Sallie to remind her.

Sallie was taken aback by the revelation and could not fathom it. "It's true? No way! I don't believe it! You bitch! How could you..."

Jax saw that Sallie was consumed by fury and still wanted to slander Lucinda. He realized she was foolish and immediately distanced himself from her.

"My sincere apologies. I didn't mean to offend you earlier. I hope you won't take it seriously," Jax said to Lucinda.

He quickly regained his composure and displayed a flattering smile. "If you need my help in the future, please don't hesitate to contact me anytime. I'll be at your service, and you can count on me without any complaints! I look forward to working with you more in the future."

"Jax! What are you talking about! You know how much I despise her. How could you grovel her like a dog?"

Sallie saw that no one was on her side. She was so livid that she raised her arm, intending to slap him.

But he held her wrist and shoved her away in disgust.

"You filthy woman, you make me sick!"

"Well, why would I ever love a person like you!"

She was so furious that she trembled all over. She bellowed, "Look at your pot belly and yellow teeth! Do you think you're worthy of me? How dare you say that?"

She took advantage of his momentary distraction and slapped him twice on the cheek.

Jax got light-headed from the double slap. He held his cheek and swore in disbelief, "How dare you hit me, you witch! If you weren't pretty, would I have spent those money on you? You can't remember how wretched you were before? Damn it!"

They began to argue violently.

"What a fantastic show!"

Lucinda leaned against the car, applauding "It's kind of loud though Security!"

She yelled, "Get rid of them. Having these kind of customers only tarnishes our image."

"You bitch! How dare you! Go to hell!" Sallie shouted.

The security guards were strong. They marched over, gripped their arms, and dragged them out without hesitation, tossing them onto the street like garbage.

Sallie couldn't handle the forceful shove from the security guard. She stumbled and fell to the ground, swearing.

"You bitch! You think you're so high and mighty just because you snagged yourself a wealthy man? You'll always be a lowlife, no matter what!"

Sallie shouted from where she stood, drawing the attention of passersby.

Lucinda didn't intend to punish Sallie too hard because she was her acquaintance from the orphanage.

But Sallie's relentlessness left her no choice but to take action.

Lucinda sauntered over. Her petite body emanated an air of authority and her icy gaze made Sallie quiver with fear.

"Are you finished with your little tantrum?" Lucinda inquired

Sallie tried to put on a brave front by raising her head high "I could keep cursing you out a hundred more times, you bitch! You..."

"It's my turn now."

Lucinda cut in, giving her a steely glare.
