

The Rise of the Black Plain #Chapter 2301 Incorruptible Heart - Read The Rise of the Black Plain Chapter 2301 Incorruptible Heart

Chapter 2301 Incorruptible Heart

With the speed at which Minos could move currently at level 98, no one in his party could keep up with him if he didn't want them to.

Without realizing it, Minos moved with great speed to the place where he heard a beating heart that attracted him.

He didn't understand what was going on. Still, relying on what the conscience of the seraph who had helped him in the Spiritual World years ago had told him, he followed it, imagining that he would get something good out of it.

After the vision of the future he had had because of the jewel given to him by a level 110 Sovereign, the seraph's hint had been clear. He had narrowly escaped giving valuable information to a potential enemy. Still, he had managed to see something that would help him on his way to power.

Soon, Minos found himself in an area not far from his group's camp, a place shrouded in mist with many similar trees standing close together.

There wasn't much undergrowth. Because the trees there were very tall and prevented the sunlight from reaching the surface, there weren't many undergrowth plants. Most of them were small plants that didn't need light and used the dead leaves of the larger trees as a natural fertilizer.

Then, just as he could hear the sound of his heart beating louder and louder, he stopped 40 meters away from a tree that he could easily identify from his previous vision.

It looked exactly like the tree from his first vision years ago when he was at Armhand's headquarters.

Something inside that large tree seemed to be calling him, drawing him closer and closer to touch the trunk of the tree.

He slowly approached the thing while the seraphic wing tattoo seemed to understand where Minos was.

At the same time, the dragon power sensed that Minos was approaching something special and couldn't help but display the young man's terrifying aura.

Even the sealed power of Henricus Longus in Minos' body trembled as if it realized it was in the presence of something superior.

Minos then touched the trunk with his right hand and immediately felt a beam of energy enter his body.

His eyes rolled back, and his body tilted backward as he began to fall slowly, as if his consciousness was no longer in his body.

But amid Minos' fall, red flames appeared beneath him before his body stopped in mid-air, and the space around him changed as if reality was tattering to reveal a new face of itself.

The surroundings of that tree-filled area changed, and practically every direction was transformed into the night sky, with many stars decorating the surroundings as if Minos was floating in the void of the universe outside of any planet.

Then, a semi-transparent creature with a huge humanoid silhouette appeared near Minos and watched him for a moment in silence as if it recognized something in this small being.

"Heir of Panvuter, rise and receive my legacy." Said the being who seemed to be omnipotent and omniscient in front of Minos.

Minos suddenly felt his soul return to his body and quickly changed his position, hovering in front of this large, semi-transparent silhouette.

But Minos had no chance to speak as the silhouette moved his hands to create a seal inside the young man's body.

"From now on, you will compete with my other chosen ones for the opportunity to enter the Upper Realm. Your first test will be when you reach level 100. There will be three more tests along the way. As long as you continue to bear my mark, you will be able to enter the highest point of all existence sooner or later."

Minos listened as he felt the infinity symbol forming on his left chest, just above his heart.

"Don't let anyone find out. They'll try to kill you if they know you have one of the chances for the Upper Realm." Said the voice of that unimaginably powerful being that seemed to have power over reality itself.

As this being slowly disappeared, it advised Minos. "Look for the artifact I left in the tree. It will help you understand the situation better."

Minos then felt his surroundings return to normal as he found himself facing the tree he had fallen after touching it earlier. Updated from n0v3lB1n.(c)o/m

Feeling his heart beating rapidly, he stood motionless for a moment, just looking from side to side, trying to understand the situation.

'Upper Realm...'

Gulp!

He then saw what looked like an energy box through the trunk of that tree and used his powers to reach it.

After cutting down that big tree, he saw the box made of a kind of white energy that made it look like a small star suddenly change, revealing an energy heart and a letter.

As soon as he saw these two things, the heart entered his body without him being able to do anything to 'defend' himself, and the letter turned into a ray of light and entered his eyes.

"Unknown cultivator, if you are reading this, you are one of the many natives of my small universe who have obtained the minimum requirements to begin my legacy.

Cultivate until you reach level 100. You will take the first of the 3 tests to reach the Upper Realm at that time. As your first prize for meeting the minimum requirements to compete for my legacy, I leave you the Incorruptible Heart. With this essence, your eyes will understand all that they see, your mind will be unshakable, your instincts will be perfect, and no lie will be able to deceive you.

Prepare yourself. Once you reach level 100, you'll be sent to an alternate dimension. There, you will fight the first Millennial Massacre of your journey.

The message left by this being disappeared as soon as Minos read these last words, and he felt this heart integrate perfectly into his body.

He could feel the impurities leaving his pores, and his cultivation became more solid than ever.

If his cultivation was as solid as a sand cake when he arrived in this world, it was as solid as an ordinary piece of rock before he absorbed that heart. But now, his cultivation base was as solid as a diamond!

Minos no longer felt any energy under his control. But he felt that all his senses had tripled in range as he seemed to have a sudden epiphany about his understanding of reality.

He stood still, his eyes vibrating, as he noticed various things about himself and others, even noticing what was around this area that his group had traveled through.

Chapter 2302 New Level of Dominance

Feeling his Bright Eyes much stronger than before, Minos noticed the dark hand over the area where his group was, where the Black Heart mission had supposedly failed.

Looking through the mist in that area, he saw what looked like a giant specter with its hands over that area, while not far from where he was, an ancient corpse was buried.

In the surroundings of that ancient tomb, many bodies and remnants of bodies long dead in the area remained. At the same time, beings invisible to ordinary people existed in droves there, practically venerating that corpse.

Around that being's burial place, a black liquid like tar seemed to corrupt all the surrounding ground, and anything that fell into it would surely die.

However, Minos could also see its potential. If it were used on an already dead body, this black liquid would bring it back to life in a kind of dark reincarnation.

Someone like him could think of the possibility of bringing back to life those they had lost along their journey. That was a sensible thing to consider. But Minos now had eyes that couldn't be fooled.

When he saw that thing, he quickly understood that, even if he had Isabella's body with him and tried to bring her back to life, what he would have as a result of such a taboo practice would be a monster, not his beloved wife.

But he readily understood that it was a bit of what Armhands wanted!

'My leaders in Armhands want this liquid, so I'll take it. That is my path to freedom and my return to the Spiritual World.' He thought to himself as he set out to get his hands dirty and collect that corrupt liquid.

He felt that nothing good would come of that liquid or the corpse in that grave. But there was no other way for him to solve this than by collecting what his leaders wanted.

While he was thinking about this, Ruth and the others found him in the fog.

"Minos!" She shouted as she ran towards him, feeling her heart leap in her chest.

"What happened?" One of the members of the group sent by Armhands asked him worriedly.

Minos narrowed his eyes and said. "I thought I heard something. But I ended up finding a clue as to how we can get to the Black Heart mission site."

"Oh? Which way should we go?" Asked the level 100 individual, the leader of the group allied with Minos' team.

Minos looked in this individual's direction and saw that this man's interest was not merely to help him but to probe for an opportunity to collect for his own sect what his group intended to look for there.

"Before we leave, there's something I want to show you," Minos said as he walked slowly toward that alien. Then, everyone who wasn't his guildmate felt as if something was wrong with the surroundings.

Minos made them feel his control over gravity using one of his techniques while also using his mental technique to make them feel reality as he wanted.

"I hope I can count on you on this mission. You're going to help us and forget about your superiors' orders. I don't know what you'll tell them, but you'll fail in your secondary purpose here." Minos said that, as he showed just that one level 100 being, the leader of the aliens allied to Armhands, what would happen if they didn't follow what he was saying.

That being sensed that Minos was acting against him and tried to use the powerful staff he had obtained earlier. But under Emperor Stuart's action, this being felt surprisingly more shaken than in the presence of the level 105 enemy they had faced previously!

'Shit! Was he still hiding?' He asked himself as he formed a horrified expression while feeling Minos place a seal inside his body.

This guy quickly understood the situation. If he didn't follow and help Armhands' group honestly and without hidden interests, he and all his companions could die right there!

"All right!" He tried to answer Minos while feeling all the pressure on him.

Minos seemed to be on the same level as before, but he was totally different now!

Even Ruth and his Spiritual World companions noticed this as they realized how strong he was to pressure all those beings without even using his innate ability.

Ruth asked him, trying to dampen the bad mood in the surroundings. "How difficult is our objective in the area? What kind of opponent will we have to face?"

"We can have access to what we want in a few days. The problem will be collecting what we're here to collect. It's quite threatening and dangerous. With the slightest mistake, we could all die.

But if we take it easy, we can survive and succeed in the Black Heart mission." He said, looking at his staff.

"That's it? I thought Black Heart was a challenging mission many failed to complete." Said one of Minos' guild mates.

"Indeed. That is an impossible mission for those who don't have the necessary requirements. But we'll be able to do it because of my visual ability." Minos said.

The heart he had just gained would help him a lot in this. In particular, it would greatly reduce the risks and time needed for them to complete the mission. But even without such a thing, he could complete this objective. It would be more difficult and time-consuming, of course, but it could be done.

The problem was having a way of seeing the problems in that area and knowing how to deal with those creatures.

Minos knew how to do this even before he received such a heart, so he was confident in what he had to do to complete his mission there.

"The biggest problem will be post-collection. As far as I know, some guild groups have almost completed the collection stage. But they failed when trying to leave the area with such essence." He said to prepare his staff.

"This could cost us as much as or more than the work needed to reach this goal."

After he said this, the group fell silent, waiting for his orders. Minos had become immense in comparison to everyone there. From now on, they would only move when he gave his order. ReAd latest chapters at n0v\(e\)lbin.co/mlbin.co/m)
Only

He realized the situation and ordered. "Follow me. Let's approach the area."

With him finally releasing his allies from the previous pressure, he went ahead of the group while the others followed behind him in silence.

Chapter 2303 Simple Plan

After some time, Minos' group was closer to where the grave surrounded by black liquid was.

As soon as they reached that place, Minos saw the ghostly creatures and various kinds of malicious attacks from the surrounding negativity being launched at them.

He made his move by borrowing the cultivation of his companions and brought his cultivation to the peak of level 99. Even though he was at level 98, and he usually would have gained 2 levels of power by using his innate ability, the difference between the 10th and 11th stages was so great he couldn't do it today.

However, his strength had reached the absolute peak of a cultivator's strength in the Mortal Journey.

Minos had already made his allies afraid of his power, so he didn't hide anything anymore. As soon as he reached the critical point between the 10th and 11th stages, he spread his golden wings, showing the power of this absorbable weapon.

It emitted a golden glow as he activated his most advanced technique, Nullification!

The moment he stood in front of his group in that piece of forest that corrosive and negative forces had degraded, he made several of the spectral creatures that only he could see disappear.

His group couldn't see these creatures, but they could feel the terrible auras around them, staring at them as if they wanted their bodies.

When Minos acted, and several of these auras disappeared, his group members realized it was because of him that the level 114 general behind this group had confidence in them.

Minos' allies felt the terrible spiritual fluctuations they were sure could kill them being erased by their ally, and they felt even more respect for this brown-haired man.

Minos' wings moved, and several golden feathers flew out from both of them, flying in specific directions to attack the negative creatures in the area and make the many creatures attacking them a little afraid.

There were a lot of creatures there. It seemed that for every one Minos killed, two or three new creatures appeared in the area, while skeletons began to rise from the ground and turn on them.

"It's not for nothing that so many of our sect have failed to get what's in this place," Ruth muttered as she stood in battle position with the others.

They were all a little behind Minos without getting involved in the fight. Now that they had reached the most important place in this place for them, their goal there was simple. To help Emperor Stuart, who had the best powers and possibilities.

They weren't there to work with Minos. They were there to support him in terms of level, energy, and ability to recover.

The hostile creatures around this area were so strong and threatening that if any of them tried to venture out as Minos did, they would be possessed, and their souls would be destroyed.

They watched Minos use various techniques and skills for 20 minutes until the guy was practically exhausted, and they retreated from the area.

"We have to move away for a while so that I can recover. When we're ready, we'll resume the attack." He said as he retreated with his group.

"Will that work?" One of the Spiritual World companions asked him.

"Yes, the creatures I killed won't be able to recover. And the others will only recover a little. Since they can't venture out of this dark area, they won't come after us." Minos said as he left this negative place.

"Is that all? Why haven't other groups done this before?" One of their allies asked.

"It may sound simple, but without a power that allows you to see these creatures and another that allows you to kill them, you would never be able to follow this simple plan," Minos said, confident that 99% of the cultivators who entered The Obsidian Shore wouldn't be able to accomplish what he did in this place.

"Then you're lucky." Another alien said.

"The more I succeed, the luckier I seem to be." Minos laughed, but he couldn't deny that his abilities really were extraordinary and made the situations he got into seem convenient.

But that wasn't luck. Beings like him would sooner or later end up in places where they would be compatible or at least able to influence them differently than "normal" beings. Updated from n0velbln.(c)o/m

He had been chosen for this mission on purpose.

In addition to the Bright Eyes and his ability to raise his cultivation level, he also possessed the Dark Sea, a powerful mental technique, and the aura of a dragon. It would be tough for that tomb to affect him, so the level 114 General had decided to give him this opportunity and was confident that he would succeed.

But as Minos himself had told his companions, it would take time and effort to reach their destination in this area. He'd have to spend the next few days dealing with the many lost souls in the area if he was to get the chance his superiors had been waiting for.

...

Two weeks after the first battle against the harmful creatures at the Black Heart mission site, Minos' group was still on the area's outskirts.

Minos had fought the ghosts and dead souls of this place several times, using the fight-and-retreat strategy.

It had paid off, and he expected to reach his destination in the area in another week.

However, things would only get harder once that happened, so he was already preparing for the most important battle in the area.

Amid this, other groups of beings who had entered The Obsidian Shore had passed close by and gotten into trouble with his group.

That had resulted in three battles for the group, with the first casualty among their 16 members since they entered this dangerous region over two years ago.

The group was wiser to the threats of those who also wanted the useful resource of the death worshippers, so some of them were now positioned around the area to keep an eye on the terrain in which they operated.

Meanwhile, Minos and some of the group entered the area's place of doom again for another big fight to clear a path to the tomb where the body of an ancient creature lay.

As they approached the corpse, Minos's opponents grew stronger, demanding more from the young level 98 Grandmaster.

Soon, he would face the most powerful of these beings, a magnificent level 106 shadow that surrounded this land of doom!

Chapter 2304 The Power of Doom vs. Fleshdrain

After killing the last of the weaker creatures in the area where he was with his people, Minos sighed as he encountered one of the last enemies on his way.

A giant shadow, 8 meters tall, with three hands and two legs and level 106 cultivation, stopped in front of him on his way to the tomb in the middle of the area.

This creature had three strange jewels on the fingers of its three hands, which emitted powerful fluctuations.

When it stood in front of Minos, it used those three jewels, making them glow while three special powers appeared in its body, raising its level to 107.

Minos watched as his staff focused on providing him with energy, regeneration, and cultivation support, standing a few dozen meters behind him.

Minos saw the trail of darkness between the shadow and the grave in that area and realized that the shadowy creature in front of him couldn't be the last one there.

'It looks like this corpse is more special than I expected.' He realized the problem.

"Creature, reveal yourself! I know you're conscious!" He shouted towards the grave, where a creature with a humanoid body was buried.

In the midst of this, an energy dragon attacked the place with the intention of destroying it.

However, all that came out of that place was a loud laugh as that superior form of the dragon's gaze struck the ancient tomb there, failing to even cause the place to shake.

"Hahahahaha." The sound of laughter reached Minos and his companions' ears, causing them to feel a strange sensation as they realized that the one nearby was not normal.

"Young man, are you trying to challenge me with that?"

As this voice came out, the lid of a coffin was kicked off, revealing the inside of an ancient urn where a humanoid body with a preserved appearance stood up.

This being was dressed in an ancient costume and had several glowing orange tattoos around its body, indicating ancient curses.

When it opened its eyes, all Minos' people could see was a reddish-orange glow, while the many hairs on the creature's face hid its expression.

However, the most impressive thing about this creature was not its appearance but its cultivation level.

It was at level 108!

"You are a mighty undead alien. I don't know your history, but hand over what you have. I have no reason to fight you." Minos said as he pointed his supreme weapon at the creature while in his strongest form, with his Space and Time Avatar activated, black holes circling him, and his wings flapping on his back.

"Hehehehe, just because of a mere Grandmaster? Dozens of Sovereigns came after this expert you speak of, young man. They all died for me!" The creature said as it gestured with its hands, causing its aura to grow as the shadow monster shrank in size and was absorbed by the creature.

"But I offer you something similar. Come to me, and I'll make your heart as dark as night. Become the undead you were destined to be!"

"Only over my dead body!"

"So be it, young Grandmaster!" The creature said as it moved and suddenly appeared on Minos' left side.

Minos could no longer be fooled and immediately moved his sword in that direction, already having the Indestructible Body ready to defend himself.

"Oh? Not bad!" The creature said as it stopped Minos' sword attack with one of its hands, while the darkness of its body corrupted the young human's supreme weapon.

Minos felt his divine weapon lose its luster and immediately released it.

Dark Sea!

Darkness erupted from his body as he used it to distance himself from the enemy's attempt to reach him.

"That's not bad either. But it's not enough!" The bright-eyed being said as the darkness of Minos' Dark Sea disappeared under the presence of this being.

Minos tried to use his black holes to surprise this being, but his technique fusion was soon destroyed by a handshake from this extremely thin being. "Shit!" Minos cursed this being as he tried everything he had to make the gravity of the area work against his opponent, and his feathers flew at it like blades.

These feathers could not only threaten the creature's life but could also repel its darkness. Sensing these attacks, Minos' enemy would dodge the feathers before moving against him, causing a sword of darkness to appear in its hands.

"None of this is enough. You will stay with me today, young man!" This creature attacked Minos' back while the young human could only defend himself with his wings, which quickly closed over his entire body.

His defense withstood the enemy's attack, but not without him suffering the consequences!

When he was struck in the back, Minos felt his wings breaking, while a large part of his energy was spent on his defense, making him quickly turn pale.

"Cough!" He coughed up blood as he was thrown to the ground, unable to help but taste his own blood once again in this terrible world.

The undead creature saw him in this situation and felt that everything was settled there. There was no way that this young creature, who was already fighting so far above his own level, could do anything more to it in this situation.

It moved and appeared in front of Minos, looking interested in this body.

"Perhaps your body is what I need to leave this place, young Grandmaster." It said in its dark voice, which alone was capable of making all of Minos' companions in the area tremble.

But none of Minos' allies moved. They knew what their boss's plan was to deal with this terrible level 108 creature. ReAd latest chapters at n0v\(e\)lbin.co/mlbin.co/m) Only

A subtle smile appeared on Minos' face as he felt the creature grab him by the neck and pull him close.

"That's your mistake, underestimating me."

After saying these words, the snake tattoo on Minos' forehead moved as his weakened aura suddenly changed, quickly causing his level to break the level 100 barrier for the first time in his life!

The moment this happened, the creature realized the problem and trembled in fear.

But before it could even move away from Minos, it froze in its position in front of the young man's Space and Time Domain, who was using the sacrifice of the parasite Fleshdrain!

Realizing that the life of an important member of the Armhands was in danger, Fleshdrain sacrificed itself, temporarily giving Minos the powers of a level 102 true Sovereign!

Having temporarily attained the cultivation of a level 102 Sovereign, Minos felt his vision of the future come true, as the space tens of meters away from him became his domain for him to dictate.

"This is my victory, undead creature!"

'NOOOOOOOOOOOOOO!'

Chapter 2305 Mission Over?

By temporarily reaching level 102, Minos had reached a level of power that would allow him to easily have total dominance over an opponent of up to level 107.

However, as much as that undead was at level 108, Minos' powers were special within his Space and Time Domain.

If that creature hadn't been so close to Minos, if it hadn't been unprepared, it would have been able to move even a little within the space under Emperor Stuart's influence. But by confidently grabbing Minos' neck with its hands as it prepared to defeat its opponent, this creature made the big mistake of underestimating him.

As the Flashdrain sacrificed itself to prevent the death of its host, Minos' power skyrocketed, just as he had predicted would happen in this battle.

Knowing what would happen at this point in the battle, Minos was not slow. When he felt his cultivation at such a new level, he caused space and time around him to stop functioning properly.

A spatial trap quickly formed around him and the level 108 undead, while time for that creature began to speed up to an absurd degree.

While 1 second passed for Minos, 10 seconds passed for that creature.

How could something like that help Minos? Well, one unit of energy expended by Minos would be equivalent to 10 units of energy expended by that being for the same period of time.

That being still had more energy than Minos, so it could use more of its powers to try to escape its opponent. However, the distance between it and the opponent who wanted to kill it had become much smaller, and it couldn't stay in that situation.

That being quickly felt that it couldn't escape Minos and couldn't start screaming in its mind in desperation. But it couldn't break the time-space trap even if it used everything it had.

Minos recovered the glow of the Divine Sword to this supreme weapon while aiming it at the black heart of the motionless creature in front of him.

Using the Black Sea, this weapon, and his golden wings, which were emitting a beam of golden light, he mortally wounded the creature.

While his group nervously watched, Minos let the creature's soul burn until its body had no strength or consciousness left.

Once he felt that the enemy was finally no longer a threat, Minos relaxed a bit and let its corpse fall to the ground. At the same time, he stopped using his spatial and temporal powers.

Even after the danger had passed, he continued at level 102, remaining conscious and looking very good even though it was not his power.

"Are you all right?" Ruth asked, worried about her husband, since temporary cultivation increases usually didn't do cultivators any good.

Minos sighed and said. "I'll be fine. The rebound effect of this sacrifice will only come in about three days. The Flashdrain sacrifice is perfect in the short term. It's designed to help Armhand members fight above their level in a stressful situation, so I'll stay in my current state for at least another day. The negative effects will come gradually until the worst hits me in 3 days."

"And now? Won't that be a problem?" One of the natives of the Spiritual World asked.

"We'll have to stay in this area for a while. I won't fall asleep, but I won't be able to protect the group like before." Minos replied as he looked at his allies there. ReAd latest chapters at n0v\(e\)lbin.co/mlbin.co/m) Only

He couldn't help but feel relieved that he had made it clear to these individuals that they had to obey him in this place. With the seal he had placed on the strongest of those alien allies, he was sure he could rely on them in his time of weakness.

"Anyway, don't touch anything nearby, least of all the corpse of that creature. Even though I managed to kill it, it was a powerful necromancer. Too much of what's around here could contaminate your bodies if you're not careful." He warned those who were with him, especially those who looked curiously at the corpse.

"What do we do now?" Ruth asked.

Minos let go of her waist and looked at the powerful body lying beside them. "I will use my temporary power to do the most dangerous part of the work here. After my level returns to normal, we'll work as planned."

To collect what was in that area, they couldn't come into direct contact with those things with their skins. But there was a simple way to collect such resources. As long as one used the free energy in the air to control these things and stored them in special devices, it was possible to collect everything there, even considering the danger of these essences and materials.

As soon as he had warned his group how cautious they should be in this area, Minos began his work, using a large urn he had in his spatial ring to store the body of that ancient being.

According to his group's information, this creature had been there since ancient times. It was an ancient specialist who had come to this place, fleeing from Zocarro's forces, and wanted to hunt it down.

After entering The Obsidian Shore and finding a place where it could evolve, such a creature made this place its home until the first one who hunted it discovered not only its situation but also what it had accomplished.

According to the informants behind the creation of the Black Heart mission, this being had found a magical source for necromancy, something extremely valuable for special practices.

Armhands was not a force that sought supremacy through sacrifice or necromancy. But the guild was interested in any resources that could make it stronger.

That was why they had created the Black Heart mission, whose main purpose was to collect some of the essences that such an ancient expert had found, as well as its corpse.

It hadn't been as strong as it was now during that mission, so the Grandmasters had a better chance of defeating it back then. But there weren't many beings like Minos in the universe. Even if there were a few like him in the far corners of the universe, only a few of them would be from the same organization.

Since none of the groups that had gone after this being until that day had the same characteristics as Minos, the mission in question had only become more difficult as this being grew stronger.

Armhands still hoped to get what they wanted by sacrificing their members' parasites, so the guild continued to invest in it.

Anyway, today, they succeeded in the first part of their interest in The Obsidian Shore. But this was only the beginning of their journey!

After gathering everything the guild wanted from this place, Minos and his people would have to escape safely!

Chapter 2306 Weeks of Gathering and Defense

The special thing about the resources in the area where the undead had spent its time over the past few millennia was that while it existed, this being protected itself by hiding the area's powerful spiritual fluctuations.

With its death and the inability of Minos' staff to contain the powerful fluctuations in the area, many beings in the vicinity would soon realize that there was something valuable there.

Not only special creatures from this area of The Obsidian Shore would notice and take an interest in it. Competitors who came to the area for opportunities would also notice the change Minos had brought about.

After two weeks of working and protecting the area since the undead died, the group had gathered almost everything they wanted there, but leaving the place wouldn't be easy.

While Minos had returned to his normal level of 98 and was weakened by his Flashdrain's sacrifice, many enemies would want to collect what they had worked so hard to obtain!

...

By the third week after the undead's death...

Minos' party was almost completely surrounded by powerful creatures at this point, with the members of the Armhands and their allies fighting to defend the group's position.

Even after three weeks and the improvement in Minos' condition, the group had been surrounded for several days and couldn't just leave the area.

They wanted to move to begin their retreat from this place. Still, the monsters of The Obsidian Shore, who had been closest to them when everything happened, were on their trail, trying to take what they had collected.

While the creatures attacked them and their stronger companions counterattacked to try and keep the group's situation in check, Minos was at Ruth's side with the group's doctor.

"Ruth, this will depend on you," Minos said with a terrible look on his face.

The problem wasn't the pain he felt while still trying to recover from the Flashdrain sacrifice. What made him twitch his facial muscles was the only alternative in front of them!

If Ruth didn't put herself in harm's way and force her own Flashdrain to sacrifice itself, there was no chance their party would survive the creatures between levels 104 and 106 that were attacking them!

In a minute or less, the defenses they had set up with their devices and the area's natural traps would fail, leaving them completely unprotected!

Ruth clenched her fists, knowing that she was the only one of the Armhands there who could make the parasite Flashdrain sacrifice itself.

Flashdrain would not sacrifice itself for a member with no value to the guild. It would only do this for members with a lot of potential and who had already earned a lot of merit.

Ruth wasn't as valuable a guild member as Minos, but she was at level 97 even though she was just over 180 years old. She was a Rank-and-File Soldier in her own right and could become an Elite Soldier at any time.

At the same time, Flashdrain could sense that she was on a mission for the guild, and a very important one at that.

Minos was confident that the parasite inside her would sacrifice itself if she risked herself.

However, he didn't like this alternative because it meant she would be in danger and weakened very soon.

Unfortunately, if they wanted to survive this challenge and one day return to the Spiritual World to see their family and avenge the deaths of their loved ones, she would have to go through this!

The black-haired woman understood and took a step forward, heading towards the battle while activating her techniques and using her special ability to try to help her companions fight off the creatures that were trying to kill them.

Ruth didn't have Minos' abilities. Even with an inscription of the Devouring Art on her body, something that would turn the energy of enemy attacks into useful energy for her, her energy reserves would run out in an instant.

In less than 20 seconds since she had heard Minos' advice, she would already be exhausted, while attacks powerful enough to seriously injure even low-level Sovereigns would be hurled at her.

When she was in mortal danger, with Minos watching her from afar with his heart in his hands, the parasite on her forehead realized the problem and moved, sacrificing itself.

Just like Minos, Ruth's power suddenly increased, crossing the level 100 barrier and reaching level 101.

Of course, this wasn't enough power for her to defeat the enemies around her. However, with her cultivation reaching such a level, she would not only be able to defend and counterattack better, but she would also be able to help the various members of her group recover faster.

By temporarily strengthening her soul, she could even help Minos recover from his weakened state faster!

As soon as she felt that her cultivation had stabilized at level 101, she did what she had to do and directed her innate ability to help all of her companions recover from their conditions. At the same time, she focused on helping Minos, who could really help them get out of this area.

Minos wouldn't fully recover as a result of her actions. However, in addition to the fact that his recovery was immediately accelerated when Ruth connected with him, he felt his strength improving temporarily.

He would be able to fight as long as her power was at level 101 and she helped him!

Minos did not hesitate to use his innate ability to steal the cultivation of some of his less useful allies and increase his cultivation, but he also tried to help Ruth become even stronger.

As much as she was helping him, that didn't stop him from trying to help her as well!

But Ruth's level didn't increase much with Minos' help. Without reaching the 11th stage, it would be tough for him to influence Sovereigns in this way.

In any case, as soon as he had the chance to join the battle, he didn't hesitate to merge his techniques and create a huge black hole.

It would be suicide to try to defeat these enemies by fighting ordinarily. So he quickly prepared to use the Black Hole Bomb while he still had the chance!

At this rate, he and his allies would face the first desperate situation of their journey out of The Obsidian Shore.

They would be able to leave the area where they were surrounded, but they would not be able to kill all of their enemies, nor would they be able to escape from enemies with the same goal as them. ReAd latest chapters at n0v\(e\)lbin.co/mlbin.co/m) Only

From now on, they would be on a desperate run to get out of this region!

Chapter 2307 Sacrifices and Losses

Three days later...

Minos' group was currently being attacked by competitors who had entered The Obsidian Shore for more or less the same reasons as themselves: to take advantage of the opportunities in the area.

Level 99, 100, and 101 creatures were attacking them, while some of the monsters in the area were taking part in the attack under the influence of these creatures.

You might think that Minos' party would be able to deal easily with these threats, but things weren't that simple!

Minos was still not 100%, while the sacrifice of her Flashdrain severely weakened Ruth. Almost the entire party was wounded from the battle they had fought against mid-level Sovereigns to escape the previous area where they had collected the Black Heart mission objective.

As a result, even creatures weaker than those they had recently defeated were able to pressure them!

However, the group would not fall today. As the team's main warrior, Minos would fend off or kill the enemies closest to his people today.

Using his powers to the maximum that his current state allowed, Minos increased his and his allies' cultivation with the help of their enemies. Meanwhile, he displayed the splendor of his technique fusions, using several variations to shock the unprepared enemies.

Even when weakened, they were difficult to defeat. After 5 minutes of fighting with what they had at their disposal, Minos' group killed half of the aliens and monsters that attacked them.

"Damn it! I didn't expect them to be so strong!" Said one of the fleeing aliens after his group's attack, and others failed, mostly because of Minos.

"Who is this man with the golden wings? That bastard killed a level 103 Sovereign with one blow!" Shouted another fleeing individual, who couldn't help but think of the scene when Minos used the indestructible body to deal with one of the monsters that had also attacked him along with those aliens competing in the area.

As much as monsters and competitors were no allies, the powerful beings who lived on The Obsidian Shore were no fools. They knew when to ignore or even temporarily ally with other beings against their goals.

With the valuable resources that Minos and his people carried, even the violent creatures of the region would join the explorers there in attacking the opportunities of The Obsidian Shore.

But today, Minos' enemies were not strong enough to put him in danger. After much effort, he killed the strongest of his opponents and scared off those who had escaped.

When he saw the survivors fleeing in different directions, Minos didn't waste his time chasing after any of them. He ordered his group to get moving again, heading for the exit of The Obsidian Shore.

"What are we going to do, Minos? If we keep going like this, we won't make it out of this area in one piece." Ruth commented as she was carried by one of her group mates, a bird-like creature.

Minos had already realized the problem and said. "We have no choice but to find a place to hide while we get stronger. If everyone here can recover and raise their cultivation by another level, I believe our chances will improve greatly."

"But how do we do that? Where can we find this peace? Even the place we were in couldn't keep us safe long enough for that." Commented the leader of the aliens allied with the Armhands group.

"We can only try to hide in the Obsidian City," Minos said, the only possibility he believed would give them the chance he wanted.

The members of his group looked at him as they cautiously flew through the forest.

"The Obsidian City is 10 days away from where we are now. The way there will be extremely dangerous." Said one of the aliens in the group.

"I know. We'll have to make the necessary sacrifices to get there. Either we do, or there's no way we'll leave this place alive." Minos said seriously.

He would not give up his mission. Completing this mission was very important to him and his future plans!

Therefore, he could only strive to achieve his goals and get through all the rocks that came his way.

"We will be attacked by groups like the one above at least three more times on the way to Obsidian City. Are you sure?" asked the leader of Minos' allies.

"Yes. Be prepared to use whatever cards you have up your sleeve. Either you use them to get there, or you'll probably fall in the next few days." Minos said without any doubt in his heart.

Everyone in the group was more or less nervous about what they had to do. But Minos was right to think of the Obsidian City.

Obsidian City was the main point of The Obsidian Shore, a place abandoned by time and relatively safe from special phenomena that could surprise and kill visitors to the area.

It was considered a neutral point in the region, where the monsters of the area could not enter, but also a place where it was impossible to use powers to fight.

Obsidian City was like a sacred place amid chaos. Its natural laws prevented almost any violent action, so even if it wasn't impossible for other groups like Minos' to enter, no one could force their group to do anything there.

On the other hand, this site was blessed for cultivation. Any injured person or cultivator who wanted to improve their strength and who was in the area would always consider entering Obsidian City!

Knowing the area's characteristics, Minos' fellow cultivators could understand his motivation. Not only that but considering the dangers they had already experienced in the short time since they had left the undead's place of death, they couldn't help but feel pessimistic about traveling out of this area in the condition they were in. Updated from n0velbln.(c)o/m

If only they were in their best condition, they might hesitate to go to Obsidian City. However, since they were mostly tired and injured, they couldn't help but like the idea of a place where they could recuperate and cultivate for a while.

So they would soon start their journey to that place while already thinking about what they could use to make sure they got there.

...

Over the next four days, Minos' group would face another great battle that would take the most out of some of them but would also be the end of life for others.

Unfortunately, this was not a journey that everyone who started would finish.

However, the group would use the sacrifices of their companions to continue their goal until they reached the Obsidian City. With no other choice, they would do whatever it took to reach their goal!

Chapter 2308 The Obsidian City

A few days later...

That afternoon, Minos' party had finally gotten close enough to their destination to see the silhouette of the old Obsidian City.

But their group was no longer the same. With their losses in the battles of the past few days, only nine of them had reached this place.

Of those killed in the last few days, one was a native of the Spiritual World, one was a member of the Armhands, and all the others were allies of Minos' group.

Minos and Ruth were still there. She was still suffering from the consequences of sacrificing her Flashdrain. At the same time, Minos suffered serious injuries to his body that would have killed others. However, given his strength and resilience, he was still strong enough to carry his wife in his arms.

The other members of the group were equally bad or worse. Of the Armhands there, another had managed to use his flashdrain parasite to gain power and help the group, so he was in the same situation as Ruth.

So far, Minos' surviving allies have used every weapon in their arsenal, even losing the powerful artifacts they obtained during the group's first exploration of this region.

Such artifacts might have saved some of the remaining lives at that point!

Anyway, now they were finally within reach of the Obsidian City. Upon arriving there, they quickened their pace, anxious to enter this sanctuary as soon as possible to avoid further casualties.

... n0ve(l)bi(n.)co/m

After a few minutes, Minos' group entered Obsidian City under the gaze of other aliens who were already there to rest or cultivate.

But not only these beings watched them as they walked through the first streets of this long abandoned place. The last few individuals who had been chasing them watched them enter the place and couldn't help but show their hatred for the 'cowardice' of this group.

The monsters who arrived there didn't leave the area and soon settled down to wait for the moment when Minos' people would leave their hiding place. Meanwhile, the competitors who were in the area to take advantage of the opportunity entered the city just after Minos' group.

Minos noticed this, but he didn't care. While they were under the gaze of those already in the city and the newcomers, he led his people to an area where they could cultivate in peace.

Even though everyone there could feel the value of what they were carrying, they couldn't threaten the members of Minos' group while they were inside the city.

With this in mind, Minos soon occupied one of the local plazas, one of the best places to cultivate in the area.

He placed Ruth where she could cultivate and watched as his group settled in while his enemies approached and tried to talk to them.

"Give us what you have. We'll make sure you're safe enough to leave the area." Said a level 102 alien who had chased them there.

Minos approached this being while allowing his group to start cultivating in the area. He looked at the level 102 Sovereign and the others who were interested in what he had and said. "If you want something from me, you must fight for it. I won't give anything to anyone here."

This individual tried to punch Minos in the face. Still, something stopped him, making his movement so slow and weak that even if he hit the guy in front of him, it wouldn't do any damage.

Minos laughed to see how true the rumors about this place were.

He turned his back on them and said, "I'm going into seclusion now. I advise you to look for opportunities elsewhere. I've heard that the Obsidian City has very powerful artifacts for cultivators who are willing to face the city's challenges. Instead of waiting for your own death when I finish my cultivation, do something useful with your lives."

"Arrogant wretch!"

Minos ignored the curses in his direction and quickly sat down not far from Ruth and the rest of his group.

As he closed his eyes to meditate for the first time in weeks, he felt his special heart beat differently as he sensed the rich energy of the area.

This place was even better than any place he had ever known!

Hell, even if one combined all these places into one and added up all their phenomena, this place would still beat all the others.

Minos had only come to rest and escape from some immediate dangers, but when he started cultivating there, he couldn't help but be surprised.

'Tsk! Zocarro is truly a fantastic place. The opportunities in this world are unparalleled. I'll bring Gloria and Abby here in the future.' He thought to himself.

Soon, however, he would focus entirely on absorbing the energy in his surroundings and channeling it into his wounds and his soul.

He would need a period of seclusion just to recover his physical condition. Only after a long process of recovery could he attempt to meditate in search of spiritual improvement!

...

In the blink of an eye, 19 months had passed since Minos' group had arrived in the Obsidian City.

That had been enough time for most of the group to recover from their conditions and start cultivating, seeking improvements in their spiritual levels and understanding of cultivation.

But it took Minos all that time to recover from his injuries and the sacrifice of Flashdrain. The greater the effect of that worm's sacrifice, the greater the remaining effects.

After more than a year and a half in this place, he would finish recovering and return to his best state before the sacrifice.

Having reached the best state to cultivate his soul and seek improvements in terms of understanding, Minos ignored the enemies watching him in this area and began his meditation in search of level 99.

As it was, he thought that if he were at the Armhands' headquarters, it would take him six and a half years to become a level 99 Grandmaster. However, in this place, he thought that he could achieve the same result in less than 4 years.

There were still a little over 6 years left before The Obsidian Shore returned to its previous state of chaos when those in the area would have to leave or hide for the next few thousand years.

That was enough time for him to move on and leave the area safely, so he intended to stay there for the time being.

Ruth and their companions would meditate while he was in seclusion, but the first of them to complete their progress would try to take advantage of the opportunities this city offered.

As reliable as Minos was, it would be better for everyone if they had methods of leaving The Obsidian Shore without having to rely on him so much!

Chapter 2309 Nearing the End

As this generation's opening of The Obsidian Shore entered its fifth year, the first people who had entered the place and managed to survive up to that point began to leave the area.

Each week, one group or another left the area while the groups waiting for their emissaries began to grow nervous.

It would be just over four years before the place returned to its unstable and inaccessible state. However, as time passed, the groups waiting for their subordinates or companions became concerned about their plans and the vital status of their personnel.

One of the interesting facts about this place was that even if an individual with people outside with devices connected to their vitality were to die, this information would not reach the people outside of it!

Only by the end of the time the place could remain stable could the groups be sure their messengers had died.

There was no way that Grandmasters or low-ranked Sovereigns could survive in that place after the catastrophic phenomena in the area had returned to their worst.

The monsters that existed in the area had special characteristics that allowed them to survive the worst times in the area, and some of them could go into hibernation for thousands of years.

Most visitors should not be compatible with the place, so staying there after the 10-year period was the same as dying. Either such a being had to have died, which prevented it from leaving the area, or it would die, as ordinary beings could not survive in the area.

Thus, groups like the Armhands became increasingly nervous about the possibility that their emissaries had failed.

...

In the city near the area where Minos' group was, the level 114 Sovereign, General of Armhands, was still waiting for his guild's envoys in this generation.

Today, he was again on a conference call with the Sovereigns who were waiting for Minos' group's return near The Obsidian Shore entrance.

"So? Are there any results?" he asked, hoping to hear something different from what he had heard recently.

"No." Said the leader of the Sovereigns in the place where individuals as strong as this General could not go.

The Obsidian Shore prevented Sovereigns from entering its region. But the stronger the Sovereign was, the farther they had to be from that place, or they might suffer negative effects.

The closest someone at level 114 could get to that place was the city where the General was now.

"There is still no sign of Minos' group, General," said the man in front of the entrance to that region.

"All right. Keep an eye on the area," said the highest-ranking Armhands member near the area. "Be ready to act if they show themselves."

After these words, he switched off his communicator and turned his eyes back to where he was, unable to keep a thoughtful and worried expression on his face.

As he pondered whether Minos' group would actually succeed, he narrowed his eyes, considering the many people in this city who might be interested in acting against him if his group succeeded.

'Just complete your mission, Soldier Minos. I'll take care of everything else while you're here.'

...

Meanwhile, in front of The Obsidian Shore, Rhett kept an eye on the portal that gave access to this place.

Looking at this place, he couldn't help but wonder what could have happened to justify the delay of Minos and the rest of the staff.

'Could something have happened to stop them?' he wondered, a little worried.

Minos was not his friend. But he supervised Emperor Stuart, and since he had met this spiritual human, he had been given many opportunities.

Rhett had recently reached level 106, and he felt that he could become an Intermediate Officer after this mission.

So he didn't like the idea that Minos might have fallen, and he couldn't help but worry about the return of such a human.

"How much longer will it take?" Rhett asked the other level 106 Sovereign who was there with their group.

"You don't know. They may already be dead, but there are still a few years left. If they're still alive, they have plenty of time to return.

In any case, I feel that they will hardly have succeeded even if they do return."
Commented the alien leader of their group. Updated from n0v3lbn.(c)o/m

"This is better than nothing. Soldier Minos shows great promise. He'll make Officer even without this mission."

The alien next to Rhett did not comment, continuing to observe their surroundings, where there were still 35 other groups like theirs.

Some groups had already moved on with the departure of the first survivors from The Obsidian Shore, so there had already been chases, escapes, and battles outside of this place.

There would be many more fights in the coming months, and some of these 35 groups would leave to return to their organizations or even die on the way.

...

Meanwhile, two more years passed within The Obsidian Shore.

More groups had left the area. As time passed and the end of the ten years of 'tranquility' approached, the phenomena around the area became more intense.

The Obsidian Shore did not have the same stability in all areas or throughout the entire 10-year interval.

The first few months after the 'stabilization' of the phenomena in the area were the best, while every day that passed after the 5th year of this period of 'tranquility,' the phenomena in the area got worse.

Even though the place still had many opportunities and valuable resources, several groups that had survived so far abandoned their interests and left the area every day.

In the midst of this, Minos and his party were still in Obsidian City, where all of their surviving allies and party members had not only recovered but had also increased in level over the past few months.

Some of them had even begun quests within the city in search of valuable resources to help them on their way out.

Only Minos was still cultivating, but that was about to change.

Nearly 4 years after recovering from his injuries, Minos has finally reached the peak of level 98 and has begun to advance to level 99!

With this breakthrough, the group's departure from this area was finally imminent.

Of the nine people there, with the weakest of them, Ruth, at level 98, and the strongest of them, a level 102 alien, it would be time for them to face their final challenges in this region!

Chapter 2310 New Level of Power

When Minos opened his eyes, he felt his aura rapidly increase his power by more than 11%, while the range and capacity of all his abilities increased accordingly.

After a long journey of cultivation, he reached level 99, which was previously considered the pinnacle of the Spiritual World. Those who reached this level would lead with virtually no enemies able to defeat them.

He had often wondered what the day would be like when he reached this level and could realistically consider advancing to level 100.

Now he was finally there!

As he thought about it, he suddenly felt the wing tattoo on one of his hands warm up.

'Congratulations on reaching level 99. Don't get hung up on reaching level 100. If you really want to deal with the problems of the Spiritual World, don't go enter the Divine Journey until you've sorted everything out there.' The conscience of the seraph in the wing tattoo advised Minos.

'Why?'

'Because of the legacy you've received, which will test you when you reach level 100. Even though the passage of time in the place where you will be sent is different from the passage of time in the Spiritual World, the Millennial Massacre lasts a thousand years. Even if time in your world is slower than in that place, you could still be gone long enough for all your acquaintances to have perished in the War of the Worlds.

It's better to hold off on progressing when you reach the peak of the 10th stage and only go after you've accomplished all your goals.' The soul remnant in the tattoo explained. 'After that, I'll guide you in fulfilling your promise to me.'

'I see. Thank you for the tip.'

'Anyway, I don't need to become stronger than I already am to solve the problems of my world. What worries me is the way back to the Spiritual World.' Minos commented.

'Yes, I understand. But you should be fine. Invest in your companions. It won't be a problem if they get stronger. In any case, good luck. I'll talk to you again when you've finished your business in the Spiritual World.'

'Hmm, see you next time.' Minos said in his mind as he stood up and looked around, soon finding Ruth and his Spiritual World companion still alive.

Apart from these two, he saw some of the enemies who were watching him, waiting for the moment when he would leave Obsidian City.

"Where are the others?" He asked after receiving congratulations from his wife and the level 100 Sovereign.

"Some of them are facing challenges in the city. The others are waiting for them at the entrances to those challenges," said the recently advanced Sovereign.

Ruth asked Minos. "Do you think we're ready to go? Some of those who seemed interested in us have left in recent years. But there are still people here who will try to attack us once we leave this city."

"I think so. We're not injured, and we've improved our cultivation... What will happen if I steal our opponents' cultivation and let our entire group improve by one level?" Minos looked at them confidently. "I'm not saying that we'll leave this place easily. But our chances aren't as slim now as they were a few years ago.

Anyway, let's get going. I want to leave this place as soon as possible. It will soon become increasingly difficult for us to leave this area."

With that, the three of them moved toward the members of their group who were closest to them.

...

A few days after Minos' advance, his nine-member group was reunited.

Minos had had to wait a few days because two of his allies were completing local challenges. Updated from novelbln.(c)o/m

The Obsidian City was a magnificent place, not only for protection and cultivation. The city's builders left behind a number of ancient artifacts, which could be obtained by completing challenges in the city itself.

Two of Minos' teammates completed these challenges and obtained valuable artifacts from within the city.

When the last of them had completed his challenge, and the rest of the team was ready to leave, the group finally began to move out of Obsidian City.

But they were not the only ones moving. The moment their group passed the exit of that place, three other groups followed them, one moving faster towards them and the other two moving more cautiously.

As soon as they left the area, the monsters waiting for Minos on the city's outskirts also moved and immediately started chasing them.

Minos looked at the creatures that hadn't given up and sighed, seeing that he wouldn't get any rest.

'So be it. If you want the terror of death, here I am.' He thought as he stopped, not hesitating to take the lead of his group and use his innate ability against one of the aliens who approached him, armed with his group, to attack Minos' people.

Minos then made his cultivation jump from level 99 to level 100, this time without the use of a special parasite sacrifice but through his ability!

When his cultivation reached level 100, his powers increased until his strength became similar to that of a level 103 Sovereign, even though he was only at level 100.

At that moment, Minos quickly made the Divine Sword appear while his wings opened, emitting an intense glow against the creatures moving against his group.

He moved his sword vertically against the strongest enemy in the area, a level 106 creature, slicing through space as he moved the weapon.

Then, under the gaze of dozens of surrounding creatures, a giant of energy with the appearance of Minos crossed the space with a sword in its hand until it sliced through that huge snake-like monster as if that level 106 creature was nothing.

"I have given you years to make up your minds. Now, there is no salvation." Minos told all these creatures as his allies felt their auras reaching levels 101, 102, and 103.

As their powers increased, the strongest cheered as they took up their weapons to face the many enemies in the area.

After suffering and being forced to flee and hide, they couldn't help but crave the blood of those many creatures around them that were trying to pressure them once again!

"Attack!"

"Kill those wretches!"