

Bloodline 1021

Chapter 1021: Checking Up On Miss Aimee

Upon entering, a large holographic screen could be seen on display. This holographic screen showed a part in space.

It was the same area at the edge of the Milky way where white lines resembling cracks were spotted.

"It has spread," Gradier Xanatus voiced out while hinting at the holographic footage.

"I can see that..." Gustav responded while moving closer to the screen.

It could be seen on the screen that these white lines were not only longer but had now appeared in multiple spots as well.

Gustav's eyes squinted as he questioned, "Have the researchers figured anything out yet?"

"Nothing at all... even after all the readings, they still believe this isn't a rift," Gradier Xanatus responded.

"Can I get the data of the energy readings?" Gustav questioned as he kept staring at the footage with a suspicious expression.

"It will take a while but I can get it to you," Gradier Xanatus replied.

"How long?" Gustav inquired.

"A few days,"

"Okay,"

Gustav went back to his room after a few more minutes of discussing with Gradier Xanatus.

Just like he had mentioned before, it would be dumb for him to just make assumptions without properly looking at different clues to investigate the situation.

Gustav couldn't put his thumb on why he felt a sense of familiarity from this recent happening but even with that he still had no idea what could be causing this.

His gut was never wrong so he was sure that whatever discovery that was made in the future would be related to something he somehow knew.

Gradier Xanatus had mentioned that whatever it was, the MBO had placed him and a few others in charge to make sure it was taken care of before it became an issue in the future.

The MBO was all for prevention before cure. They didn't want to wait till it became an actual problem before tackling it which was why they were already taking some steps to neutralize the cracks.

Gradier Xanatus just had to inform Gustav because he wanted to remain posted about this situation and it would help if Gustav knew anything about this.

Now Gustav just had to wait till the data of the energy readings was gathered for him.

After arriving back at his room, Gustav proceeded to sit on his bed cross-legged and began to channel his bloodline.

'Almost at the third step... I should be able to achieve it in the next two to three days,' Gustav said internally as channeled his bloodline.

He close to reaching the third step of Echo rank at this point.

Gustav still had one more bloodline rank boost pill. If he used this, advancing to the next step would have been instantaneous.

It had been months already but Gustav wanted to advance to the next step naturally even though it was slower.

He decided he would only use another pill in case of an emergency.

'I also have to check on Miss Aimee today...' Gustav decided he would check on Miss Aimee by nightfall.

It had been a week since he last checked up on her to be sure she was okay.

Night arrived very quickly and Gustav stopped channeling his bloodline at this point.

Upon opening his eyes, he activated God Eyes.

[Life Sign Tracking Has Been Activated]

He proceeded to use this ability and instantly picked Miss Aimee's lifesign in his mind.

[" | •~^ / "]

Zhooooooooonnn~

His mind drifted into another dimension as his sight displayed a different place.

Gustav could sight some flaky looking dust in the vicinity and a dark ground.

'Oh the fog is lifting...' Gustav said internally as he noticed this.

The other times he had been checking on Miss Aimee, the fog in the area always made visibility so bad he had no idea where Miss Aimee could be because of this.

Unlike the last time as well, there was also a little bit of brightness in the sky.

He could see through Miss Aimee's forehead so view was limited unless she moved about. Gustav could only see in a particular direction and couldn't even see the sky properly due to this. Miss Aimee suddenly tilted her head a little to the side turning Gustav's vision slanted.

This made Gustav see into the sky better and his eyes squinted a bit as he spotted some strange things.

'There's are no stars, moons or even a sun... so where is this dim lighting coming from?' He wondered.

Gustav couldn't find a way to answer this questions since he couldn't look around more than he wanted to. He could tell that Miss Aimee was currently seated somewhere on this dark ground just staring forward.

He was unable to answer the questions plaguing his mind as Miss Aimee lowered her head and stared down at something she just pulled out of thin air.

Gustav eyes widened as an holographic image popped up in Miss Aimee's line of sight.

It was an image of both of them. Gustav had his mouth wide open like he was yelling in pain while Miss Aimee was seating on his back with a domineering loom.

Gustav recalled this was taken during a training session where Miss Aimee had totally dominated him. He gave up and was tapping out but Miss Aimee refused to free him and kept seating on his back.

A smile appeared on Miss Aimee's face as she reached out to touch Gustav's face but her hand phased through the holographic screen.

Zhiiiiinn~

It disappeared after a few more seconds and Miss Aimee went back to staring into thin air

Gustav wished he had a way to pass a message to her. He wanted to tell her of all his endeavours and how he had gotten rid of the bastard that put her in this situation.

'sigh Miss Aimee...' Just as Gustav said this internally Miss Aimee turned her head left and right repeatedly.

"Did I just... I must be getting delusional now," She muttered while facepalming.

She felt she heard a very low voice but not audible enough to make out the words so she was sure she just hallucinated for a bit.

Chapter 1022 We're Close

She felt she heard a very low voice but not audible enough to make out the words so she was sure she just hallucinated for a bit.

If Gustav could hear what she was saying he would understand that his thoughts just travelled across Galaxies into Miss Aimee's mind even though it was barely audible. He would have tried better to make it work but atlas, he had no idea Miss Aimee heard a little bit of what he said.

"Must be because I expended too much energy today... But I'm breaking through so it wasn't a useless endeavour," She voiced out what she thought was the reason for her hallucination while looking around.

Gustav could sense her loneliness despite Miss Aimee being the kind of person that stayed away from people.

At this point Gustav had to deactivate Life Signs Tracking due to expending a lot of energy. The farther the location of the person's Life Signs that he was currently tracking, the more energy would be expended.

With how much energy was being expended currently he was sure Miss Aimee was very far away. He still wished he could find a way to tell her to come back to earth since there was already a cure.

However there was still no clue as to where exactly she was in the vast and endless space. It was even more confusing with what Gustav had seen this night.

Another thing that baffled Gustav was the fact that she had been gone for months yet she doesn't seem to have spiralled out of control like the other infected.

Her mind was still sane and she didn't feel the need to go on any rampage. Gustav had even spotted her hands and part of her wrists multiple times when he checked on her and from what he noticed, her skin wasn't ashy.

She still seemed a bit pale and it was hard to give a 100% accurate analysis of her skin looks due to the dim lighting in her vicinity but Gustav could still tell that her skin was not as ashy as the other infected.

'Doesn't she have any plans of fixing things and coming back?' Gustav was quite worried that he might never be able to set eyes on Miss Aimee in the flesh.

There was no way to know how exactly she was faring but all he knew was the fact that she was currently alright.

If Gustav had left Life Signs Tracking active for a few more seconds he would have noticed something that would have helped since Miss Aimee looked around after he deactivated the ability.

'They're never gonna find her if she doesn't want to be found... I guess I can only hope and keep looking for ways to actually contact her,' Gustav thought.

He went back to channeling his bloodline afterwards which he focused on for the entire night.

In a flash three more days had gone by and on this day, Gustav planned to visit a particular research centre.

'Cartinsbul City... I'll be in and out before anyone realises it,' Gustav thought as he stood to his feet to prepare.

He got into the bathroom, took his shower and was out in a couple of minutes. Gustav wore a suit and a tie along with plain black pants that made him look a bit nerdy.

To add the ultimate touch of nerdiness, he got a glass with clinical lens from his storage device and put on.

Gustav moved to stand right in front of the Mirror as his facial features and body size changed. Gustav reached a height of seven feet as his body turned thinner and his skin a little paler.

His hair became yellow in color as he adopted a very different but handsome young nerdy look. Gustav smiled with a tone of gratification after scrutinizing his current looks.

'Time to go,' He said Internally as he activated his dimensional bracelet.

Gustav was currently heading to the secret research centre where Amira's mother from the Bureau was making research on Scientist Zil's Dimensional Displacement Theory.

Despite knowing the location since over a month ago, Gustav didn't head there all this time. He didn't have much hope for this visitation but he wanted to make sure he checked a couple of things out related to Scientist Zil's research completely before embarking on this journey.

He was sure this wouldn't take long anyways since he would be visiting with the identity of a scientist from the bureau.

It was a fake identity but Gustav had planted it in the database so even if this person did not truly exist, he would have no problem using the identity.

Meanwhile...

On a planet with red sands and a grayish looking sky filled with green stars, a group of seven silently made their way across a silent pathway.

This pathway seemed to be situated between what seemed like two massive pipe like structures.

It was impossible to tell that the two structures by the side were like pipelines if one was walking on this path due to their massive sizes. However if one was staring from above, far high in the sky, one would be able to tell that these looked like massive steel pipes.

"The GPS says we'll have to turn right after crossing another hundred feet," One of the members of this group who was also clad in dark skintight suit voiced out.

They were all clad in this suit and had a dark helmet with red glasses on as well. This helped them in breathing within this foreign planet.

"Davidson, how far away are we from the designated point right now?" The person who seemed to be the leader of the group inquired.

"Twelve thousand paces away," Davidson responded while staring at the holographic image the device in his hand was shooting out.

"We're close... at this pace it should only take us about an hour to get there," Aildris voiced out.

"We've been travelling for almost twelve hours, at least we're close now,,," Glade said with a tone of relief and excitement.

"Guys but how is it that we've not encountered any form of disturbance since we dropped onto this planet?" E.E stated with a disturbed tone.

Chapter 1023 Arriving At The Mission Location

"Guys but how is it that we've not encountered any form of disturbance since we dropped onto this planet?" E.E stated with a disturbed tone.

"This route was said to be secure by scouts so this is a good thing," Captain Spark stated.

"Still... I haven't even heard any sounds of disturbance or anything echoing in the distance," E.E was still worried as they moved along.

"This feels like a huge waste of time... I could be in and out of there before anyone realises it," Angy also voiced out.

Besides the Captain and Co captain, everyone else there knew of her capabilities so they didn't doubt this.

"We can't make use of our abilities just yet... we have to wait till we're in there. Did you forget the other team was wiped out because their bloodline energies were traced when they made use of their abilities before arriving at the location," Co captain Davidson voiced out lengthily.

"I didn't forget but I'm faster than you think..." Angy was confident in her speed and getting the device out of there before the aliens realised.

"No... it doesn't matter. We have to be careful with our movement and alarming them before we're at the location," Captain Spark voiced out.

"I agree with the captain. Angy I know you're fast but who knows if they have set standard precautions for someone with abilities like yours. Safer is better," Elevora said with a straight face.

No one could dispute that there was sense in what this decision. Besides, even though Angy's speed might be unexpected, there might still be opponents that could find ways to stop her.

On the bright side they were closer to the location of the device.

-

In the next hour, the group of seven had arrived at the end of a pathway and they spotted a particular structure up front.

A couple of feet away, they spotted the entrance of what looked like a cave below the foot of a massive seven thousand feet tall rock.

The strange looking rock was greenish in color with glowing red lines spreading across it.

As they looked up they could see that the rock had multiple holes in different areas. At the foot of the rock where they could spot the entry into one of the caves, two dark cloudly like figures looking like silhouettes with white eyes could be seen.

They were like guards standing at the entrance but they were not exactly standing, they were floating a little bit above ground. Both of them were at least fourteen feet in height and still not close to half of the size of the cave entrance.

The craziest part was, every single cave in the massive seven thousand feet tall rock had two of these dark cloudly figures with massive white eye sockets floating right in front.

With the size of the rock, one could see that there were no less than two hundred from the bottom to the top just on this side of the rock.

"Lets do a quick scan," Co captain Davidson voiced as they remained in hiding while scrutinizing the vicinity.

The others squatted at the left side of where this pathway ended as they stared up front.

The holographic map in front of Davidson changed as began scanning the structure in front.

"So those are the Mendologas eh... they look even more scarier in closer proximity," E.E said with a tone that depicted he was more intrigued than bothered.

"Don't forget they have different abilities based on how long they have lived," The captain voiced out.

"Sensory Manipulation... Holographic projection... Temporary possession... Psyonic blasts... The ones over five hundred years old can use every single ability while the ones below can only make use of three, yes we still remember..." Aildris responded.

"The smaller the size the older the Mendologa... but this information is only useful if we get in a clash with them. We just need to make sure that doesn't happen," Elevora stated as well.

"I doubt we can get in unnoticed though," E.E said with a slightly bothered tone.

"I heard your vortexes also have spatial travel ability... can't you get us in?" Captain Spark questioned.

"Without knowing how the interior of this structure looks, we might appear anywhere within and we could find ourselves surrounded if we just appeared anywhere or who knows we could just end up appearing in a place that would spell the end for us," E.E felt it was too risky since they didn't know what they would be walking into.

"Davidson, are you done scanning?" Captain Spark inquired.

"In a second... done," Co captain Davidson stated as the rock structure in front of them appeared in holographic format.

In this holographic format, it was like an xray displaying the interior of the structure.

"Now we're talking," E.E voiced as he stared at it.

"Wow there are still more than five hundred of them within," Angy said with a look of astonishment.

"The device is just that important to them... probably their last hope too since it could render someone like Jack useless," Co captain Davidson voiced out.

It turned out that this device they were tasked with destroying or bringing back was powerful enough to render someone like Jack useless.

This was the main reason the MBO stopped him from infiltrating the planet all this time. The strength of earth would be significantly reduced if they were to lose Jack, especially right now when Miss Aimee was missing.

They couldn't send just anyone to get rid of the device since they had information on it and on the Mendologas.

The device would only react to great power or Mixedbloods within a certain range of strength so these young officers had to be sent on the mission of retrieval or destruction instead of other stronger officers.

If Earth was aiming to destroy Planet Mendologas, this whole battle would have ended already but they wanted to colonise it instead which was why it was taking longer.

Chapter 1024 Creating A Diversion

Jack could have destroyed the entire planet long ago but he wasn't allowed to and he wasn't allowed to infiltrate either because they couldn't risk it so he had to wait till they had gotten rid of this device.

"Can you get us in now?" Captain Spark questioned.

"Getting us in was never the problem," E.E rolled his eyes as he figured Captain Spark didn't understand his initial explanation.

"From what I'm seeing, I can make us appear anywhere within now but as you can see, the entire place is swarming with them... we will be surrounded the moment we appeared within," E.E added while staring at the x Ray like holographic footage.

Captain Spark had a contemplative expression as he stared at the footage for a bit.

"We have two missions on this planet. Retrieving the device and rescuing the other two officers from the group that was initially sent here," He began voicing out.

"We'll be splitting up because the moment they know we're here, it's gonna be harder to find the other two when we're done completing the first mission," Captain Spark added.

"Oh? Okay so what's the plan?" Aildris inquired.

"It's time for us to see how fast you are," Captain Spark voiced while staring at Angy.

Angy eyes squinted as she heard that.

-

A few minutes later the guards standing in front of the cave entrance at the foot of the rock stared in a particular direction after sensing something.

"&@@£%_<>>÷@^_" The first one spoke in a weird tongue as the other one also stared forward with a look of suspicion.

A figure walking towards them from up ahead became even clearer when the person began causing a certain silver glow in the surroundings.

She had three horns protruding out of her forehead and her pinkish and silver hair could be seen floating in the air as she took steps closer to the rock.

"#++=%&>@^::^;?%%@^@;<" The other guard who voiced out the same weird tongue which translated to, its an alien.

It quickly raised an alarm as Angy arrived close to the entrance suddenly.

Boooooommm~

A burst of silver energy blasted forth from her figure, slamming heaving into the massive rock and the dark cloudy figures floating in front.

The two were instantly disintegrated by the sheer force of the energy that wasn't even accumulated to 100%

GbbbhhlIIllgvvbbb!

The entire rock trembled vigorously but surprisingly that was the highest that happened. Despite how strong the energy was, it didn't even manage to cause a single crack on this massive rock.

Loud voices in different tongues suddenly began to ring out from every direction as the other Mendologas began flying out of the cave to confront the intruder.

In barely a few seconds, more than two hundred of them had appeared and surrounded Angy from every direction.

The third horn that had grown out of Angy's forehead earlier rescinded as she regained her former look.

Angy's figure suddenly blurred as she turned around and sped away.

Swwoooosshhhh~

The Mendologas who thought she couldn't escape because they had already surrounded her were shocked when she displayed immense speed and wriggled her way out of their formation.

The yells in a different tongue was heard once more as they turned around and gave a chase.

The over two hundred Mendologas gave chase to Angy as she sped further away from the rock structure.

They had no idea she was leading them away so the others could have easier entry into the rocky structure. Angy would occasionally slow down so the Mendologas could close in a bit only for her to speed up again.

The Mendologas shot out whitish beams from their face area as they chased after her but Angy was quick enough to dodge this projectiles as she led them around the place.

-

Zhooonnn~

A vortex opened up within a hallway in the rock structure and the Captain, Elevora along with E.E phased out of it.

"Davidson we're in... direct us," He muttered through the communication channel.

-"Take the first left... be careful there are guards patrolling that pathway..." Davidson informed from a hidden location outside of the rocky structure.

While the three infiltrated to get the device, Angy led the Mendologas around with her speed. She felt she could do this all day because despite their flight ability she was still faster than them.

Glade and Aildris had been tasked with finding the other two officers who were said to have gone into hiding after the unsuccessful mission.

This second objective wasn't as important as the first which was why they wouldn't be blamed if they were unable to find these two but at the very least they had to try.

-Earth

"Oh interesting, truly interesting madam," A slim seven feet tall young man in glasses voiced out with a hearty smile as he spoke to a middle aged looking woman with blonde hair.

"Mr Aispect, I truly hope the world government do not intend to pull their funding on this research," The blonde haired middle age woman said with a pleading tone.

"It is to be debated Mrs May. So far i have seen that there have been progress with the research so i will put in a good word for you," Mr Aispect who was actually Gustav in disguise voiced out.

"Thank you so much Mr Aispect. It would truly be a shame if the funding was to end and this research ends up being accurate in its topic. It could potentially save the world if more discoveries are made," Mrs May responded with a tone of appreciation while explaining.

"I absolutely understand Mrs May," Mr Aispect said while staring through a glass wall where a lab full of scientists could be seen.

An instrument with a circular top and thin pole like glass extending from the bottom could be seen making some weird calculations.

"Are you sure you did not leave out any information or discovery?" Mr Aispect questioned.

"None at all. The data i passed to you is everything we have found out in the past few years," Mrs May said with a tone of certainty.

"I guess this concludes my visit here today," Mr Aispect said while smiling.

Chapter 1025: Heading To The Edge Of The Milky Way

"I guess this concludes my visit here today," Mr Aispect said while smiling.

They proceeded to both give their farewells before he proceeded to leave.

Aispect who was Gustav, reached outside and got into an hover car that drove him across the city.

After getting down, he moved to a secluded location and activated the dimensional bracelet.

Zing! Reappearing back within his room in the tower Gustav smiled as he transformed back into his original look.

Today had gone exactly as he wanted and he had gotten information about how far they had gone in secretly conducting Sir Zil's research.

Mrs May was Amira's mother and Gustav had successfully fooled every one of them over there that he was from the world government and here to inspect so of course they had to reveal all their findings to him.

Gustav was not stupid himself so he had already discovered most of the things Amira's mother revealed to him but there were still a few pieces of information which he considered were quite important.

Gustav fingertips suddenly glowed up as he opened a spatial room. He proceeded to move into the room that had a lots of equipments within. It was literally a mini laboratory. Gustav proceeded to check for some tools and began making something.

'Its good that they created a device to scan for irregularities in space... this would make it easier for me to find traces of the Warp Demolator and discern its patterns of appearing easier,' Gustav thought as he kept up with his work.

They had revealed the blueprints used in making that device so Gustav could build it easily with the right tools.

Zing

The sacred orb appeared right beside him and turned into a twelve feet tall robot.

"Keep working on it, I need to get some tools," Gustav commanded.

The sacred orb and Gustav were connected similar to how Gustav and the system were connected so even without giving any explanations, the orb understood what Gustav was driving at. It was quite strange and Gustav still wondered how the sacred Jewel was capable of 90% of the things it could do. It was still such a mystery to Gustav that he refrained from using it most of the times even though he knew just how powerful the sacred Jewel was.

Gustav moved out of the spatial room at this point to get some more of the equipments he needed to finish the device.

Just as he walked out of his room, he spotted Gradier Xanatus approaching from the left side of the corridor.

"Gustav," Gradier Xanatus voiced with a tone of urgency.

"What's wrong?" Gustav questioned.

Minutes later they were in the same board room they had been meeting up in earlier and a holographic screen was on display.

"Hmm? They have connected to each other?" Gustav voiced with a suspicious tone as he stared at the screens.

"Precisely... the white lines have now connected to each other and now it's starting to look like a gigantic circular crack in space," Gradier Xanatus responded.

What they were staring at was exactly how Gradier Xanatus had described. This area in space was at the edge of the milky way and it was void of stars but this white cracks covering a large area were glowing intensely.

Initially they were separated and just appearing in different spots but now these lines had joined. The cracks had spanned across more than fifty thousand kilometers radius in space and looked like it was still increasing.

"And I'm guessing you guys still have no idea what's causing this," Gustav voiced out.

Gradier Xanatus shook his head lightly in response.

"Was there any effect when the researchers got closer to it?" Gustav asked.

"It is impossible to get close to it now... The last person that tried turned to ash," Gradier Xanatus revealed.

"What? Without getting pulled into any sort of portal or vortex?" Gustav said with a surprised tone.

"None whatsoever... Spacecraft are getting ripped apart because unlike before, it is now sending forth a detrimental charge of energy. It has become dangerous to move close to," Gradier Xanatus disclosed.

"That's not a rift... at least a rift would pull a person in before ripping them to shreds or turning them to ash..." Gustav had a contemplative expression as he voices out while holding his chin.

"We can't get close enough to it at this point to get a sample and conduct a test based on the current energy it is emitting," Gradier Xanatus added.

"Do you want me to go there?" Gustav asked.

"No. I am only informing you about it for two reasons. First you may know something so its also like I'm asking for advice and second, you mentioned you wanted to be kept to date but there is no way I am sending you there..." Gradier Xanatus said while shaking his head.

- Minutes later

Zhiinn-Zhiinn-Zhiinn

Some straps bonded around Gustav's body as he sat within what looked like an aircraft chamber but with more intricate designs.

The seats on the other sides were unoccupied and only one person stood in front of him at this time.

"Are you sure this is okay?" Gradier Xanatus voiced with a disturbed tone.

"I am going to be perfectly fine. You've only been sending scientists out there who are clearly weaker than I am," Gustav voiced as he tapped on his left shoulder area.

Zhooooonnnn

A dark helmet phased out and covered up his head.

zhiin!

A red glass shifted from sideways and covered the space in the eyes area of the helmet completely giving Gustav a spaceman look.

"I am still skeptical about sending you there. It is not safe and I don't want the young miss to kill me because that's what will happen if you don't get back in one piece," Gradier Xanatus voiced out once more.

"Don't worry. Besides were already here so what's the point of changing your mind now. Just flow with it haha don't worry if she kills you, you can come join me in the afterlife," Gustav chuckled lightly as he voiced out. 1

The suit with the helmet had made the tone of his voice sound mechanical due to it projecting his voice from within so it could be heard properly.

Sigh

Gradier Xanatus let out another sigh before saying once more, "Be careful... the moment things feel dangerous, abort the mission instantly,"

Gradier Xanatus proceeded to move towards the entry point of the spacecraft while voicing out, "I'll be in contact the entire time and there's a cam in your suit so I'll be watching you as well,"

"Copy that," Gustav voiced in response.

The hatch of the spacecraft closed up and Gustav was the only one left in this place. The pilot and Co pilot were both seated in the cockpit ready to launch the spacecraft into space.

This mission was a very impromptu one and hadn't been revealed to the higher ups because Gradier Xanatus was considered a higher up himself and could make this decision before informing them on a later date.

Since they had put him in charge of this situation, he was licensed to make such decisions that would affect the situation for the better.

Gustav had managed to convince Gradier Xanatus to send him on this earlier. As much as Gradier Xanatus didn't want to agree to it, Gustav made pretty valid points about being the only strong officer close to being a scientist himself.

He had found the cure for the ashy infection and even achieved some crazy science feats so he wasn't wrong. It looked like he was the perfect officer for the job especially when most scientists were not very strong mixedbloods.

Gradier Xanatus could only hope now that Gustav would be okay. The aim of this trip to the edge of the milky way was to take a sample from the energy these conjoined cracks were emitting. They had not been able to get close enough to get this done since the cracks started connecting to each other.

According to the scientists that survived they said it felt like getting closer to the surface of the sun. Spacecraft nowadays were capable of doing this without burning up but according to the scientists this was at least seven times worse.

Gustav really couldn't bring up any theory on how this would be seven times hotter than the surface of the sun when there wasn't any catalyst.

There were just lines or rather cracks in space that had covered a radius bigger than the circumference of earth.

It certainly was suspicious but still didn't make sense. Gustav was counting on the fact that he would be able to gather the energy sample without getting too close to it.

He was confident in the toughness of his body but this was seven times hotter than the sun, he wasn't interested in testing out if his body was durable enough to withstand it.

Thrrrrriiihhhh~

Right outside the spacecraft, a burst of flames had been ignited from the bottom of this building sized machine..

Chapter 1026: Guardian's Consent

Right outside the spacecraft, a burst of flames had been ignited from the bottom of this building sized machine.

The spacecraft lifted off into the air after getting cleared for take off as the rooftop of the MBO tower's last floor opened up.

Zhrrrrriiihhhhrrrrhh~

Since they were already in space, there was no need for any part of the spacecraft to dislodge or anything like that.

They flew across space, travelling at a speed that was one thousand times faster than sound at the onset.

As the spacecraft traveled further into space, it breached the speed of light generating a wormhole that increased travel speed.

Originally it would take very long to get to the edge of the milky way, but with the speed of this spacecraft it would only take about a day.

Gustav was already admiring space as they blasted through the wormhole before arriving at another part of space.

In just a few minutes they had long passed Jupiter and were heading further into the milky way. Even if a spacecraft was moving at the speed of light it would still take billions of hours before it could get to the edge of the milkyway.

This was how vast space was. With the ancient spacecraft one would be spending millions of years travelling before they could get to the edge of the galaxy and humans never lived that long.

If it wasn't for the technology of the Slarkovs that had been improved over the thousands of years, the time frame wouldn't have been decreased from millions of years to just a single day.

At the moment the spacecraft was moving at twenty times the speed of light uninterrupted. They would occasionally cut through wormholes and have their journey decreased by up to twenty thousand light years. The extreme jump wormholes didn't need to be used as they were only leaving for the edge of the milky way and not somewhere farther.

'Its more exhilarating than I expected,' Gustav said internally as he looked through some of the small glasses in front of him.

He couldn't count the number of times they had penetrated stars yet they came out unscathed without the star causing any damage to the spacecraft or the spacecraft destroying the star.

It was impossible to truly follow the speed of a spacecraft which was why they were always clad in these black technological space suits which usually helped in increasing their reflexes and Sensory ability.

If something were to truly ever happen in space like an emergency with space pirates or any other issue, the spacecraft would have to stop or slow down because Gustav doubt anyone would be able to act with such speed.

Gustav was counting down in his mind as they journeyed across space ready to complete his mission.

-The MBO Camp

"Endric we're letting you leave in good faith that you are ready to become an officer," One of the instructors voiced out to Endric in the camp hall.

"I am ready sir. I have completed all training like you wanted me to and passed all the tests," Endric responded with a respectful tone.

"We know that but in the end you're still a thirteen year old boy, three years away from becoming an adult. We need a parental or guardian consent before we can make you a full fledged officer without having to worry about the laws preventing a minor from working," The instructor voiced out.

Endric instantly thought of his parents but then he recalled the nasty household situation. 'They won't be seen as proper guardians since they're currently in the psychiatric ward,'

"Can I have my brother give the consent?" Endric asked with a tone of curiosity.

"You mean... Officer Crimson?" The instructor was a bit surprised as he voiced out.

He recalled these two have had serious issues in the past and Gustav even changed his family name erasing his Oslov identity so he wasn't expecting this.

"Yes," Endric answered.

"But he is no longer a part of your family," The instructor voiced out.

"He can fill in as my guardian... does it matter?" Endric stated in response.

"Since he is of legal age and has ties to you then I guess he can... He just has to agree to go through the necessary procedures," The instructor explained.

"Leave that to me," Endric voiced his reply.

He was a little bothered but it was about time he met up with Gustav again especially since he had messages to convey to him.

"Alright then. You can leave camp but don't forget to send me the consent application before next week or you will be brought back to camp and made to train till you're of legal age," The instructor voiced out before leaving.

The lady at one of the counters passed Endric some clearance data for leaving the camp as well before he headed towards one of the massive mirror pathways within the hall.

Endric should have left camp with the others earlier since he was also a special class candidate and had improved just like the others. Endric had completed missions on the same level as the others and was ranked amongst the top ten strongest in their set, even ranked higher than Falco, Teemee, Glade, Vera, Ria, Angy and was said to be on par or more Powerful than E.E.

It was still debatable as to who would win in an all out fight between Endric and Aildris but Endric being this strong made him worthy of also finishing his training in camp earlier.

The only problem was his age which would be a problem if he didn't get a parent or a guardian to give their final consent to him becoming a full fledged MBO officer of the law.

Right now Endric's plan was to get that from Gustav since both parents were currently in the psychiatric ward and their consent would be invalid.

Endric made a low sigh as he finally headed out of camp. There was still a kind of tension between him and Gustav even though Gustav was starting to soften up to him little by little.

Endric wanted to use this as a chance to get closer to Gustav and slowly drive away that tension by doing all he could to make sure Gustav trusted him.

'Will you be passing the vest to him?' Endric asked internally as he arrived within an aircraft.

His forehead glowed green a couple of times as he heard a voice respond from within.

'Not yet.... He is still too weak to equip it. The energy of the vest will destroy him at this state,' Husarius spoke.

'Then when will he be strong enough?' Endric questioned.

'It won't be very long... he is slowly closing in on that volume of power that will be enough to Equip or use some of the items and when that time finally comes, the world will see a strength unlike they have ever seen before,' Husarius stated.

'And more than ever they will need this strength to become their protection because if they were to ever betray the source of this strength a great catastrophe would be wrought unto the earth and the universe as a whole...'

-Mendologas Planet

Swwoooosshhh~ Swwoooosshhhh ~

A silver streak cut across a region of red sands as two cloudy dark figures chased after the silver streak.

Unlike the multitude of dark figures that had been chasing after this silver streak for over an hour, these two dark cloudy figures were way smaller in comparison.

These two were Mendologas who were elders and they had finally decided to give chase. They would occasionally send out waves, that would blast across the vicinity and wreak havoc.

Angy had barely been able to escape the few times they used this attack. So far she could feel like her mind was getting slower and slower in thinking capability and reaction speed as a whole.

Angy knew these two were using a type of ability that would get the better of her if she wasn't careful.

"Guys, I hope you're done... they're all heading back to the rock right now," Angy voiced through the communication channel.

-"We got the device... we're trying to outrun the ones on our tail right now,"

The captain voiced out through the communication channel.

-"We haven't found the two officers just yet. You guys can head to the checkpoint without us, we'll meet you there," Aildris voiced out this time.

"I am currently trying to outrun two Mendologas who are still giving chase," Angy reported through the comms.

-"How big are they?" Co captain Davidson questioned.

"Six feet tall," Angy said while looking back in the process of running.

- "You have to get them off your tail as soon as possible those are old Mendologas privy to more powerful abilities... use your highest speed and outrun them right now!" Davidson voiced out with a tone of urgency.

"I am trying... ugh!" Angy groaned while still speeding across the sands.

"I can't activate my fastest form,"

Chapter 1027 Breaking Through

"I am trying... ugh!" Angy groaned while still speeding across the sands.

"I can't activate my most powerful form," She added with a look of difficulty.

- "You can't outrun them? I thought you said you were fast?" Davidson said with a slightly ridiculing tone.

"I can... if I activate my fastest form but its like... I feel a mental barrier stopping me from being able to activate it... I can't move at my fastest speed no matter how hard I try," Angy explained.

- "Its one of the older ones abilities... Angy you need to distance yourself further away from them as soon as possible or you'll weaken and get slower over time," Captain Spark voiced out.

"How do I do that? I can't outrun them right now," Angy responded with a worried tone.

- "You have to do something that can help you get further away from them," Aildris spoke this time.

Angy turned her head to the side and looked over her right shoulder. The Mendologas were still chasing after her with the same speed and were only about twenty feet away.

Angy turned to look forward and could see that they were approaching an area with rocky like buildings everywhere. Her eyes squinted as she made a plan in her mind and sped forward.

'I still have a little spark... I could make use of it here...' She said internally as she sped into the area of rocky like buildings.

Fwwhhiiii!

She leapt forward with her legs outstretched and kicked through a building.

Bang!

The Mendologas quickly followed behind her but the instant they did, a silver colored energy blast was triggered from within.

Boom!

It sent forth destructive waves that caused the entire structure to come crashing down along with the structures in the vicinity.

The Mendologas had cloudy like figures so they weren't too affected but this slowed them down a bit, especially with the structure collapsing and causing the air to be covered by red colored debris.

The entire vicinity had become clouded by the red dust everywhere so this made them lose sight of Angy for a bit especially with her intense speed.

"Hnnnghhh!" Angy groaned as she sped away from this particular area.

Fwwhiii!

She suddenly leapt into the air once more as another horn began growing out of her forehead. This time was a bit different as her legs transformed into a silver like color with scales all over. From her feet up to her thighs, had expanded in length and claws grew out of her toes.

Angy suddenly felt intense power radiating from within as her horn began to glow up along with her pupils.

'I just reached the Echo rank,' She noticed internally. Angy now understood the reason for this her transformation.

Bang!

The instant she landed on the ground and took a step forward....

Zhiiiiiiiisshh!

Her body bolted forward with intense speed, sending a blast of shockwaves from her previous position.

Fwwwkhoosshh~

Angy had never moved this fast in her life as she crossed over six hundred thousand feet in an instant.

The Mendologas behind were unable to give chase anymore as this speed was way beyond their limit and how fast Angy had been moving before.

Even when they flew higher into the air, they realised she was long gone.

Zhooooooooonnn~

On another part of the Mendologas planet, A vortex opened up and a group of four jumped out of it.

"I think we finally managed to get them off our tail," Co captain Davidson voiced out.

"I made us appear way further from our initial location since you mentioned we could still navigate our way back to the checkpoint even if I didn't know where we would resurface," E.E voiced out.

"Guys this place is a bit..." Elevora voiced out as he looked around.

They all looked around as well and could see cracks on the ground. Purplish liquid flowed from the south to the north and it looked like they were on an open ground.

The whole place looked a bit eerie.

"We're in a pit," Elevora stated as she looked around as well.

"A pit?" Davidson voiced with a tone of disbelief as he turned around.

There was a very high wall up ahead that reached more than ten thousand feet high. It was very rough looking and had cracks all across it as well.

This wall extended farther towards the left and right.

One could see that it kept extending as far as the eyes could see and at a point, fog could be seen in the distance that made it difficult to tell where the wall ended.

"We could just climb over this... and the wall doesn't necessarily mean we're in a pit because of how high it is unless it surrounds this entire vicinity and I don't see it up ahead," Davidson voiced out.

"Well I do," Elevora said in response as she turned to stare at him.

Davidson eyes widened as he spotted the horrifying purplish growing eyeball on Elevora's forehead.

"Where did that come from?" He voiced out with a shocked tone.

Elevora had pulled off the scarf covering her forehead the moment they arrived here.

"Elevora's eye ability helped her see through the fog thousands of feet up ahead so she knows what she's talking about," E.E voiced out.

"So we're in a massive pit..." Captain Spark voiced out with a slightly troubled tone.

"Hold on," Davidson voiced out and checked the holographic screen appearing above the device in his hand.

"We have to go this way to get to the checkpoint... We're a bit far but we can get there in a day so we still have time," He added while pointing at the south.

The wall they could see was right in front of them while they had to move in the direction of the one in the distance according to Elevora.

"Should I open a vortex?" E.E questioned.

"Nah, its unpredictable where we will end up spawning unless you wanna take us back to the places you've already been like the target location," captain Spark didn't have to continue before everyone knew it was a bad idea.

"Or can you take us to the route we travelled on when we were headed to the target location?" Spark questioned.

"Out of range," E.E responded while shaking his head.

It turned out it was too far from their previous location and opening a portal close to the area of the rock structure was a bad idea since the entire place would be crawling with Mendologas.

Screeeehh~

A loud screeching sound suddenly reverberated across the vicinity causing them to be on the alert.

"We're not alone," Elevora informed them.

"Mendologas?" E.E questioned.

"No... these are... beasts," Elevora said while her eyes squinted.

"We have to get out of here," Co captain Davidson voiced out.

"Not without getting past them..." Elevora said while fully activating her bloodline abilities.

In another part of space Gustav was seated in the spacecraft as he kept counting down.

"We'll be there in another thirty minutes," Gustav muttered.

("Your body should be durable enough to withstand part of the temperature but don't get too close if you don't have to,") The system voiced in his head.

"Sure... I just need to get a sample after all," Gustav stated.

Zhrrriiihhhhh~

"Maybe I should check on Miss Aimee one more time before I head to my death," Gustav voiced with a low tone before activating God Eyes.

[Life Signs Tracking Has Been Activated]

He used life signs tracking instantly and picked Miss Aimee's life sign.

"Hmm? Is she asleep?" Gustav wondered as he spotted a smooth pair of thighs blocking his view.

He couldn't see properly but he could spot a little part of arms crossed and Knees joined.

It seemed like Miss Aimee was laying on her knees with her head on her arms that were crossed and her arms balancing on her knees.

Surprisingly Miss Aimee was only wearing shorts so her smooth thighs were on display. Only to Gustav anyways because he was the only one that could see this.

'cough cough I shouldn't be seeing this,' Gustav said internally as he subconsciously closed his eyes.

However with Life Signs activated, closing his eyes would not stop him from seeing through Miss Aimee's forehead region.

After staying for a few minutes hoping Miss Aimee would wake and look around, Gustav decided to deactivate God Eyes after only seeing her twitch a little.

'At least she's fine... cough cough I should deactivate this now,' Gustav decided.

Just as he was about to deactivate God Eyes, Miss Aimee's thighs began vibrating.

At first Gustav was confused as to what was going on bit then, Miss Aimee woke up at this point.

She separated her thighs and stared at the ground. Through this, Gustav was able to figure out that the ground was quaking which in turn made Miss Aimee's body vibrate.

"Huh what is going on? A land quake?"

Chapter 1028 Suspicious Situation at Miss Aimee's Location

She separated her thighs and stared at the ground. Through this, Gustav was able to figure out that the ground was quaking which in turn made Miss Aimee's body vibrate.

"Huh what is going on? A land quake?" Gustav voiced with a tone of confoundment.

The ground quaked even more intensely with every passing second and cracks began to spread out all across the ground.

Miss Aimee stood to her feet at this point and stretched her hands apart.

Despite Gustav being millions of light years away and not knowing where Miss Aimee was he could feel a particularly strange energy exuding from her.

The cracks that had formed and spread across thousands of miles slowly began to mend. The ground that split apart in multiple areas began to merge back together slowly.

The quaking that was initially becoming intense began to reduce as Miss Aimee's hand remain outstretched.

'How is she doing this?' Gustav didn't need to be told before he knew Miss Aimee was the one responsible for this mending.

He couldn't understand how she was doing this because he knew Miss Aimee was unable to perform such a feat initially.

In a couple of minutes the quaking had stopped and the grounds had nearly merged completely.

Gustav slowly stared at the sky area as foggy looking clouds began to part ways. His eyes squinted subconsciously as he could spot a white light extending as the clouds cleared.

However at this same moment...

"Officer Crimson, we're here," One of the pilots voiced out, forcing Gustav to deactivate Life Signs Tracking.

[God Eyes Has Been Deactivated]

Gustav's mind reeled back to his current position as his eyes retained their usual glow.

"We're here?" Voiced out.

"Yes sir, we're here," One of the space pilots responded once more.

Gustav turned to look through the glassy like wall of the spacecraft up ahead and the glows from what he had been seeing all this time with Gradier Xanatus were blinding to the eyes.

The white cracks that had connected and spread across a large range of this part in space were even more scarier looking in person.

Some of the glowing white cracks were as thick a person in width while some were very thin and they stretched across a large expanse of space.

Gustav couldn't describe how he felt seeing this but it was definitely a phenomenal sight. His first time in space for a mission and it had to be something crazy that had never been seen before.

The spacecraft slowed down at this point and Gustav unstrapped himself. His body began floating in the air as it seemed the outer hatch of the spacecraft had been opened.

Zing!

A cylindrical shaped metallic looking item with an handle appeared in his grasp. Gustav held onto this with his left hand and flew backwards with the use of the gravity.

He passed through some layers within the spacecraft and doors opened for him and shut after he passed through. In a bit he had arrived at the final hatch and stood within what was like a small door area.

"Open the final hatch," Gustav voiced through the communication system.

-"Alright Officer Crimson, goodluck," One of the pilots voiced out before an opening sound was heard.

Tssshhhh~

Gustav flew forward and finally found himself drifting through space.

He could see Violet dust in the distance and some stars very very far away from this particular area. He turned around and finally faced the direction of the cracks.

As the energy from the glowing line of cracks spread across the vicinity, Gustav felt like he was in the presence of a higher power. He just couldn't understand why but now that he was here he felt a kind of familiarity with this energy.

It felt like it was not only powerful but also mixed with an energy he had come into contact with before but he discarded the thought of it relating with the person that came to mind because he couldn't see how else it connected to that person.

Krrreyhhhhh~

Right in front of Gustav's eyes, the cracks began spreading further into space. Where the spacecraft had stationed itself was a safe spot away from the range of effectiveness of the cracks.

However as it began to spread even more, the heatwave hit Gustav causing the suit on his body to begin smoking.

'What the fuck?' Gustav couldn't help but cuss internally as the suit began to steam.

"I'm still 92,000 meters away from the point where I can absorb part of the energy into the mini plasma chamber," Gustav muttered underneath his breath.

If it was already this hot, then how hot would it be when he got to that point. This was going to be the most dangerous mission Gustav had ever embarked on.

He already knew the suit wouldn't hold on to that point so he began activating some protective bloodlines.

Tsshhhshhhhhh~

Iro silk grew out of his body, covering the entire suit like an armor. On top of this, Gustav made use of a temperature bloodline to add frost to the outer covering of his suit and also made the surroundings around himself cooler.

Thrrriiihshhhh~

Creaking sounds began to come from the spacecraft. It was quite faint especially since this was space but Gustav was able to hear them clearly.

"You guys might want to move the spacecraft a bit back, it's starting to take damage," Gustav voiced through the communication channel.

He didn't want anything to happen on his way back as he wouldn't like to get stuck here.

After the spacecraft moved further backwards, Gustav began to venture forward.

[Hover Has Been Activated]

He flew forward, approaching the cracks as the heatwaves spread forth even more.

Usually space would be freezing but in this situation it was the opposite.

This part of space was lit up tremendously due to the infinite number of glowing white cracks here. As Gustav travelled forward, he calculated the amount of distance he still needed to scale before he would get to the point where part of the energy could be absorbed.

At this point, he was still very far from reaching any of the cracks because despite how large they were the spacecraft stopped a bit far from them.

If it moved any closer it would have sustained damage so this was the only option available and Gustav would have to scale the rest of the distance himself.

'I need a good angle where I'd be able to penetrate without making contact with any of the cracks...'
Gustav paused at this point after hover had been deactivated.

[God Eyes Have Been Activated]

His sight zoomed across several thousand feet in an instant and kept moving further forward. The energy from the cracks were a bit penetrative to his sight despite being so far away but Gustav didn't back down and kept going further and further ahead.

After arriving at a particular area he looked beyond some of the cracks and could see that there were spaces he could fit in but there were still issues due to lines still spreading further and blocking within the spaces.

Gustav squinted his eyes as he looked from another angle. His current issue now was he was trying to get the right angle at which he could use Lightning Blitz from.

With how far Lightning Blitz could take him, he could find himself in a concentrated area of cracks and making contact with anyone of them according to Gradier Xanatus would result in annihilation.

Lightning Blitz was even more powerful than before so it would take him beyond the area he needed to be which was quite dangerous.

Either Gustav moved backwards to more than hundred thousand meters so he could be able to use Lightning Blitz and arrive at the exact spot needed to absorb a part of its energy or he activated Lightning Blitz at the moment and go even further than hundred thousand meters beyond the required area.

The second option had the danger of him arriving in a concentrated area where contact with the cracks would be made.

Gustav decided to pick none of them because the time he would spend heading back so he could make use of the ability safely would also be the same amount of time he would spend if he decided to head forward with his usual speed.

'If I wasn't checking on Miss Aimee I would have told them to stop further away,' Gustav noted this as a mistake.

However at this same instant a thought suddenly appeared in his mind.

"How far away are you guys at the moment?" Gustav questioned as he turned around.

-"About a hundred thousand feet away from your position sir," One of the pilots answered.

It was quite the distance and Gustav knew he would spend a lot of time trying to get there but he had a different thought in mind.

"Go further... Increase our distance by another three hundred thousand feet," Gustav instructed.

Chapter 1029 Absorbing Energy From The Cracks

The pilots had no idea why he asked them to do this but they obeyed.

It only took about a few seconds before they gave Gustav the distance he asked for since Spacecraft were extremely fast.

After giving Gustav feedback of the distance they had left Gustav reached out to his wrist area and began to tap on the surface of a screen.

<dimensional travel will be activated in...>

<3...>

<2...>

The instant the dimensional bracelet finished counting down, Gustav disappeared from his location.

Zing~

He reappeared right above the massive spacecraft in the next instant that was more than four hundred thousand feet away.

The instant Gustav arrived on it, a smirk appeared on his face.

'Its a good thing I made the spacecraft a checkpoint before left...' Gustav said Internally as he turned to face the direction of the cracks.

Once more he was over eight hundred thousand feet away and this was the precise distance he needed between himself and the cracks.

[Lightning Blitz Has Been Activated]

Thrrriihhhh~

Gustav instantly turned into a lightning streak that cut across space with intense speed, arriving more than one hundred and twenty miles away from it's initial position.

He had crossed all the distance required in an instant and arrived right in front of the cracks.

Zzhrrrhhhhhh~

The instant Gustav reappeared his entire outer covering including the suit was set on intense flames.

"Hnnghhh!" Gustav groaned as everything was disintegrated in barely a second by the intense flames.

He pushed the cylinder item in his grasp forward and twisted the top open as quickly as he could.

Fwwoommm~

A strain of energy began to phase into the cylindrical item with intensity while Gustav had already turned completely naked..

"Hyaaahhhhh~" As the energy was being absorbed Gustav screamed out intensely while also activating Gravitational Emergency Container.

Zhoon! Zhoon! Zhoon! Zhoon!

Spherical blue orbs began to appear all around him and started absorbing the energy from the heatwave the cracks were bringing.

They were getting filled instantly and taking a little bit off the damage Gustav's body would have received but at the same time, Gustav was barely holding on.

He had not expected that it would be this powerful to the point that his strong body and regeneration couldn't keep up.

Gustav decided to use his body as conduit at this point as the sample of the energy was collected completely.

'The Dimensional Bracelet... It's destroyed...' Gustav said Internally with a look of regret.

His body would burn away and he wouldn't be able to get the sample out of here if he didn't find a way to heal up a little so he could get away.

His body had burnt to the point that he could barely make a move...

Tzzzhhiinnnn~

He began absorbing energy from the surroundings at this point to heal up. Gustav was worried about getting over filled with energy an exploding which was why he was trying to absorb only a little but the instant he did...

"What are these?" Gustav voiced out with a tone of confusion as he began to see visions.

At the same time....

Trrrrriiihhhhhh! Thrrriiizzhzhhh~

The cracks in space began to expand crazily and faster all of a sudden.

The heatwaves went up several notches in an instant while Gustav was in his trance like state seeing visions that shook him to his very core.

"Hyaaaahhhhhh!" He screamed out as the energy was becoming unbearable while his flesh was ripping apart and mending at the same pace.

The pilots who were on standby with the spaceship almost two hundred thousand meters away were instantly put on the alert as the ship's alarms system began to go off.

"It's expanding!"

"We have to get further away from here!"

Both of them voiced out with tones of urgency as they spotted the readings of the energy and heatwaves approaching.

"What of officer Crimson?" The co pilot asked with a worried tone.

"Look at that!" The pilot shouted out as he pointed at the front.

Thrririihhhhh~ Thrriiiihhhhzzz!

The cracks were speading at a tremendous rate and the ship had began vibrating intensely and electrical charges were going off within it due to the powerful energy being spread across this part of space.

"Do you think anyone would be able to survive that?" The pilot yelled out as he started up the spacecraft.

"Let me do a quick scan! He might be on his way back!" The co pilot voiced out while turning on some parts of the engine and tapping some commands in the control room.

Zhiiiiinnn!

"We have to leave now!" The pilot yelled out once more as he pushed a button and began navigating the ship.

"One second..." The co pilot yelled out too.

At this point the cracks were closing in on their area and wasn't too distant from them anymore.

"Nowww..." The pilot voiced out.

A radar could be seen scanning the surroundings of the ship and in the next instant it came up with a result saying there was no sign of life range.

"He's not there..." The co pilot stated before also playing his part and joined the pilot in navigation.

Zhooooooooonnn~

The spacecraft turned around and blasted forward at an insane speed as the cracks arrived at its initial position.

Even with the protective shield in place, part of the spacecraft ended up getting fried from the heatwave but luckily the pilots were able to get away unscathed.

They couldn't understand what had just happened but they were absolutely sure that Gustav couldn't have survived from that.

In one second everything seemed normal and the cracks were spreading at a moderate speed which was the usual speed they were aware of and in the next instant it was suddenly spreading at an insane rate.

Before they knew what was happening it had spread across a radius of one hundred thousand meters in space within seconds.

The heatwaves had tripped in intensity and things just generally got worse since they were unable to obtain the sample they came for.

Deep within the spread of the cracks, Gustav had given out and was losing consciousness at this point. The heatwaves had destroyed his body from the outside and the energy he was absorbing had nearly destroyed him completely from within.

His eyelids were close to shutting completely when he spotted something...

-The MBO Tower

"What do you mean by he didn't survive! Did you two wait for him! Did you even check!" Gradier Xanatus yelled out with a furious tone as he spoke through a communication channel.

-"Sir we did, maybe you should try connecting to his comms," The pilot voiced from the other side.

"You think I haven't tried that? I can't contact him... there is no readings here and I can't see through the cams that were installed in his suit... all forms of communication has been cut off," Gradier Xanatus stated with a frustrated tone.

-"I think we have to see things for how they are now sir,"

"What do you mean by that?"

- "The situation was a completely unexpected one because when he arrived at the absorption point, he was still very much okay but after what had happened, I doubt he survived sir,"

"Shut up! He cannot be dead! I am coming there myself!" Gradier Xanatus yelled out before cutting the call.

He had never looked so mad and disturbed before as he kept pacing around the board room for a bit.

'Its Gustav... he cannot be gone, he's definitely still alive but he might just need help,' Gradier Xanatus recalled that Gustav had managed to slip out of so many dangerous situation and hoped this would be yet another one he survived.

"I need to get there now... the situation has worsened," Gradier Xanatus voiced as he walked towards the entrance of the board room.

However just as he got to the door, another call came in.

Gradier Xanatus picked up as he noticed that the call was from the pilots.

"What is it?" He voiced out as their faces appeared in holographic format.

- "Sir a strange phenomenon is happening right now,"

"Huh?"

- "Look at it sir,"

The holographic feedback changed and what Gradier Xanatus saw, made his face beam with an even more confused look.

"It's changing color?" Gradier Xanatus voiced out.

- "Pretty much sir but the gaps in the cracks looks like they're closing up as well,"

"I can see that... it is no longer spreading as well," Gradier Xanatus voiced out.

- "Yes sir, we decided to head back so we could give a good report of the location after the weird situation when we saw this," The main pilot voiced out.

"That color, its starting to emulate the look of..."

-"Earth's Sun,"

The pilot completed Gradier Xanatus' statement. Gradier Xanatus wasn't sure of saying those out because he felt he might be the only one seeing what this was starting to form but now he had no doubt that he was seeing correctly.

Chapter 1030 Unbelievable Revelation

"I am on my way right now," Gradier Xanatus voiced out as he quickly moved out of the board room.

Darkness...

This was all Gustav could see at the moment and he had no idea how long it had been but now he was conscious enough to know that this was because his eyes were closed.

Gustav's slowly opened his eyes, causing his sight to be blinded by brightness which made him squint them.

He slowly adapted to the brightness as his sense of self began to return. As the blurriness died down he spotted a familiar looking face right above his.

"Huh?" He voiced out in confusion as he finally realised his head was laying on soft tissue while the rest of his body was on the hard ground.

"You're finally awake,"

He heard this familiar feminine voice call out to him which proved he wasn't dreaming or hallucinating. This also made him realise the soft tissue was actually the laps belonging to this beautiful figure who had just spoke.

He stared at her face and dazzling grey colored long hair banded together with a look of disbelief before finally opening his mouth.

"Miss Aimee?" Gustav voiced out.

"Oh good you can speak, I thought you had turned mute," Miss Aimee voiced out in response.

Gustav jerked up at this point and stared at her with his face still showing a look of intense disbelief, "How is this possible? What are you doing here?"

"Where is even here?" Gustav voiced out these series of question as he jumped to his feet.

"Is this the thank you I get for saving your ass," Miss Aimee voiced out.

"Huh? What even happened?" Gustav voiced out with a confused look as he finally turned to look around.

His eyes widened even more as he spotted the brownish plain grounds all around them. He looked up and could see white lines in the sky like cracks.

However these white lines were already starting to change color in some areas.

"What is going on? Where is this?" He voiced out one more as a dose of reality hit him

"Take deep breaths first you were pretty damaged a while ago," Miss Aimee voiced out as she also stood to her feet.

"It was you this whole time?" Gustav questioned with a confused tone as he stared at her.

"Huh? What do you mean?" Miss Aimee questioned.

"The whole phenomenon in space... you were the one causing it. All those times I connected to your life sign to check on you... how did I miss this?" Gustav voiced out as he connected the dots.

It now made sense how this place that used to have low visibility now turned bright exactly around the same period the whole weird phenomenon began.

He was never able to see the sky due to Miss Aimee's head angle everytime and the last time he checked on her he actually spotted a bit but he wasn't able to properly check because it was time for him to leave the spacecraft.

"I don't know what you're talking about kid but I'll tell you what I've been up to these past few months," Miss Aimee voiced in response.

Gustav stood in place with a look of curiosity as Miss Aimee began narrating.

"After i got infected, i destoeoyed my seal on my way out of earth to boost my speed...

I was close to breaking through to the next rank days before the incident so in the dangerous process I actually broke through..." Miss Aimee paused a bit at this point.

"And that's when it happened..." Miss Aimee's mind drifted back to that time.

In space she drifted forward with intense speed way faster than the speed of light because she had just broken through to the Beacon Rank. Due to being in a dangerous state she was unable to control her speed.

At that point a phenomenon happened where a wormhole was opened but it was not the usual one the MBO had planted in different parts of space, this one was caused by the surge of energy Miss Aimee was exuding as she sped across space.

She was unable to control herself in time to stop and ended up flying straight into the wormhole.

Unfortunately she found herself in an unknown dark dimension that was in between time and space. She had no idea where this was but she wasn't dying anymore from the ashy infection that made earth and its surroundings uncondusive for her.

The only problem was, Miss Aimee noticed she couldn't breathe because Air didn't exist in this place.

Herself, Jack and a few other Mixedbloods who were considered the most powerful on earth were able to travel across Galaxies and breathe in space without issues even though oxygen was not supposed to exist in space.

The problem this time was, there was no form of wind at all in this place.

Miss Aimee could however hold her breathe for a very long time so at the moment it wasn't an issue. The first thing she thought of doing was getting out of this dimension that was dark, empty and in the middle of nowhere.

It was like being banished to a place of nothingness. It was lonely and there was really no signs of life.

Miss Aimee decided to create something that would help her with the breathing issue instead since getting out of the place was proving difficult and impossible.

The instant she tried to generate power, Miss Aimee noticed, her entire core was overflowing with over hundred times more power than before. She couldn't even imagine how powerful she was at the moment and yet she still couldn't find her way out of here.

She suddenly felt the urge to stop holding her breath and did so...

This was when Miss Aimee realised, she didn't need to breathe anymore. She had transcended that aspect of humanity.

She tried creating something and with a single thought it appeared.

"Hover Bike..." She voiced and in an instant a bright light appeared in front of her which turned into an hover bike.