

Bloodline 1311

Chapter 1311 That N*gga Is 1000 Years Old?!

"That is one of his abilities... the moment you decided to give him the information, he could get it out of your head without you having to utter a word," Miss Aimee explained.

"You're a party pooper little Aimee, you could have just let it stay a secret. It was cooler before you spilled," Deji complained.

"Grow up," Miss Aimee responded with a ridiculing tone.

"Tch," Deji turned to face Gustav again.

"Now I understand the situation. From what you have told me, the process of transitioning is happening in his subconscious which means I can disrupt the process of your friend accepting the crown by forcing him to regain consciousness," Deji analysed with a contemplative expression.

"Can you do that?" Angy asked from the side.

"It shouldn't be difficult now that I have a bit of understanding on what I am dealing with," Deji answered with a light smile.

-Fifteen Minutes Later

"Uhuh this is certainly going to be very difficult," Deji voiced as they stood before Falco's unconscious body.

"But just a while ago you said..." Angy tried to remind him.

"I know what I said baby girl... that was before I saw him. That kid is currently experiencing something beyond our understanding," Deji said gesturing at Falco.

They had left the accommodation area to where Falco was being kept all this time. It was a small facility with glass walls and Falco was currently laying in a glass tube of sorts.

His unconscious body had begun emitting small dark tendrils and it seemed like a strong ominous feeling had permeated the entire environment.

"Can you do it or not?" Gustav voiced from the side.

"Sure sure..." He responded with a look that screamed 'I am not a quack!'

"I just wasn't completely aware of what I was dealing with earlier. This will take a lot of effort and some time," Deji stated before asking for someone to grab him a seat.

"So do you need anything else?" Angy inquired.

"Nah... Just make sure I am not disturbed for the next couple of days," Deji replied.

"I'll be deep diving into him," Deji added.

-"Deep Diving into him? That sounds kinda sus," E.E voiced from the side.

"It means I'll be sending my consciousness into his body. I'll go get his consciousness from wherever it is deep within and bring it to the surface. That will cause him to regain consciousness and also ruin the process of accepting this crown you speak off..." Deji explained while focusing on Falco's unconscious body.

"Close the door on your way out," Deji added before closing his eyes.

Gustav turned to stare at Miss Aimee who in turn nodded at him.

"He is trustworthy," She mouthed.

Gustav had a calmer look upon hearing this and they all turned around to head out in the next instant while Deji began the process of saving Falco.

The group could only hope everything would turn out well. They couldn't handle any more losses as things were.

Gustav barely ever heard Miss Aimee tag a person as trustworthy so his hopes were currently raised.

"Is he a part of the MBO too?" Gustav inquired as they left the facility.

"Deji? No," Miss Aimee responded.

"How did you two become acquaintances then? He seems... I don't know... weird," Gustav said with a contemplative expression.

"Well first off, he's pretty old," Miss Aimee stated.

"How old?" Gustav questioned with a look of intrigue.

"Around one thousand years old," Miss Aimee responded.

"That nigga is 1000 years old!!??" E.E yelled from the side with a tone of astonishment.

"Shush, you're loud," Elevora put her hands over his mouth from the side.

E.E displayed a little bashful look while Angy spoke. "He doesn't look a day older than thirty..."

E.E wasn't the only one who was shocked about Deji's age reveal. Deji certainly didn't give off the ancient feeling the grand commanders did and he was somehow older than them all?

"That explains the 'little' he adds before saying your name," Gustav knew Miss Aimee would have torn anyone else's head off.

"Deji wasn't born on earth but is amongst the oldest Alphas," Miss Aimee stated.

"Wait... that dude is an Alpha?" E.E was in even more disbelief.

"He doesn't seem like it... he doesn't exude that dangerous and powerful feeling like Miss Aimee does," Angy chimed in.

"That is because he is one of the weakest Alphas but don't underestimate him. He might not be all brawns but he could end every single one of you without breaking a sweat," Miss Aimee said with a cautious tone.

"Who would win between you two?" Shiela questioned.

"He would give me some trouble even with my current strength... but yeah, I'd win," Miss Aimee's tone was laced with certainty.

Surely no one doubted her even though Deji was clearly older than her, Jack Shirwin and the top five strongest Alphas from earth.

"The trick is not letting Deji into your head because if you do... he wins without having to move a muscle," Miss Aimee pointed out.

"So if he wasn't born on earth, how did you two meet then?" Gustav inquired.

"I was on a mission to settle some dispute on Planet Amboria which is one of the first planets earth colonised in the early periods of galactic exploration. Deji was the person I was to work with on the mission. He was born and bred there," Miss Aimee went on to explain how the planet had interracial lifeforms since Earth colonised it.

Deji was born of two mixedblood parents so he was fully a earth species but there were many others on that planet who weren't.

Earth at that time were trying to create the same effect with the combination of Slarkovs and Humans. Unfortunately, the offsprings of Amboria and humans were vastly different. Some of them even ended up disabled.

The dispute was from an uprising due to this and Miss Aimee ended up saving Deji's daughter during the whole ordeal. Deji had respected her ever since and told her she shouldn't hesitate to ask for help if she ever needed it.

One of the things Miss Aimee knew about Deji was the fact that he was an Alpha of strong personal principles. He could have made use of his abilities to settle the dispute but he chose to pander to the hearts of the people instead of manipulating their minds.

This was the major reason Miss Aimee found him to be trustworthy and he just so happened to hate the MBO too.

Miss Aimee spoke more about Deji after they arrived back at the accomodation area, mentioning how his abilities work.

Gustav and the others had gained a general knowledge about how Deji would help Falco. They were relieved knowing this and expected for him to be okay before the final challenge ended.

"Let's win this for Teemee and Falco," E.E voiced while stretching his hand forward.

Aldris stood up and placed his hand on E.E's with a nod. Angy, Matilda, Elevora, Vera, Endric, Fildhor, Sheila, Vincent and the others did the same as well.

Gustav made it seventeen when he placed his hand on theirs.

"For Teemee and Falco," He voiced before everyone raised their hands together.

"Yeah!" They roared.

#####

'Such a dark world... It seems like everything is in a state of chaos and disorder...' A being in a dark hat and sleeveless black shirt.

He stared at the grayish world before him that panned out into the expanse. He stood on a dark floating platform and up ahead were multiple dark platforms like this.

They were scattered across this greyish world of nothingness but on different level of heights.

The figure proceeded to begin jumping forward as he sensed thicker darkness below.

-'Let's do this...' He said to himself as he noticed a massive rope up ahead that was latched to a dark platform hundreds of feet below.

#####

A day had gone by since Miss Aimee's friend arrived and now there was news about the final? challenge.

An holographic message had been sent to earth's accomodation area and other planets participating as well.

"Isn't that just another battlestage?" Yonda questioned with a puzzled look.

"Yeah but a little different," Fildhor answered while staring at the holographic display with keen eyes.

Everyone was currently staring at what looked like a battlestage shaped like a flametorch. It seemed to be floating in space without any support structure beneath.

This battle stage had rocks and all sorts of oddly shaped structures scattered across it but it was located in space.

"According to the message, this is where the final IYSOP challenge will be holding," Aildris pointed out.

"The message also said, its a full blown battle between all fifty planets that are left," Aildris added.

"But the battlestage shrinks over time... or more like it crumbles. Falling off means disqualification," Angy said.

"Doesn't this all just see a bit too basic?" Matilda had thought the finals would be something crazier with everything IYSOP had brought out so far.

"Well, I am sure there is more to it that we will be informed about when the time comes,"

Chapter 1312 That Doesn't Seem Fair

"Well, I am sure there is more to it that we will be informed about when the time comes," Aildris said with a tone of anticipation.

"What do you think Gus?" E.E questioned from the side.

"It is the final IYSOP challenge so it goes without a saying that we need to put in our best. Working with the information we currently have, we know its just going to be one big battle so let's be prepared," Gustav stated with a calm tone.

Everyone was very much excited and a little tensed but they had come a long way since the competition began. IYSOP had been ongoing for over four months now and it was finally coming to an end.

Over four months away from Planet Earth... Over four months away from the Milky Way... They were already starting to miss home. Everything that had happened so far had felt extremely unreal.

"Let's not forget that we're number one on the list of other planets disqualification list so they will most definitely try to gang up on us," Gustav said with a reminding tone.

"That is true... everyone should be prepared to take on multiple opponents at a time," Aildris added.

"Fortunately, we have detailed analysis on every participant left since the numbers are now way smaller than before. You all should study them all before the start of the finals," Gustav instructed.

The group nodded in agreement while they spoke more about the final challenge and when it would be taking place.

Minutes after their meeting had ended, Gustav sat in his room with a contemplative expression.

'In less than a week from now IYSOP would be coming to an end. I'll finally be able to get back on track with the planetary displacement research,' Gustav said internally.

("The equipment might have gathered data already,") The system chimed in.

'Hmm true... it has been around six months since I sent it to deep space,' Gustav responded with a reminiscent expression.

It had been over three years since Gustav got the system and approximately three years since he was given the five years quests.

Gustav decided to check how far he had come.

[Host Attributes]

-Name: Gustav Crimson

-Level: 104

-Class: Metamorphic Parallel Being

-Exp: 18,035,000/62,900,000

-Hp: 182,000/182,000

-Energy: 105,500/105,500

[Attributes]

?Strength: 459

?Perception: 454

?Mental Fortitude: 458

?Agility: 456

?Speed: 458

?Bravery: 459

?Intelligence: 455

?Charm: 339

?Defence: 454

?Vitality: 458

?Endurance: 456

[Attributes points: 67]

Gustav proceeded to check the progress of the five years quests next.

[Quest]

<Locate Dimension Six In Planet Humbad>

[Duration]

<Five Years>

[Progress]

<35/100%>

[Time Elapsed]

<Three Years>

...

[Quest]

<Become The Most Powerful Mixedblood On Earth>

[Duration]

<Five Years>

[Progress]

<71/100%>

[Time Elapsed]

<Three Years>

...

[Rewards For Successful Completion]

<+5 A Grade Bloodline Unlocks>

<Class Level Up>

<+100,000,000 EXP>

<+3 Unique Abilities Unlock>

<All Abilities: Evolutionary Upgrade>

<Original Bloodline Level Up: S- Grade>

...

[Punishment For Failure]

...

"Hmm... I really made a lot of progress in the last one year in terms of strength..." Gustav mumbled.

("You did but you're sorely lagging behind on the other Quest,") The system pointed out.

"What happens if I successfully complete one Quest in the required time frame and fail the other?"
Gustav inquired.

("You'll die! Failing one means failing both,") The system responded.

"That doesn't seem fair..." Gustav rolled his eyes as he already expected the system to say something like this.

("Get your priorities straight and focus on the other Quest then,") The system chided.

"Yeah yeah tch,"

("You're focusing too much on building strength and forgetting that there are other things you need to be deathly worried about,")

"If I had missed IYSOP things might have gone worse over here... Sure I may be four months behind in research but it is worth it... for them,"

("Just watch out... you're likely to fail one or both if you're not careful,") The system warned.

"Enough of that... you said you were going to give me some info about what is coming," Gustav reminded.

("I said after IYSOP ends,")

"Well, it's ending..."

("It hasn't ended twat. Hold on till it does,") The system spat.

"Tch... maybe I should have just asked the fake Indulus Prime captain,"

...

Meanwhile in an area on the first disk of Planet Ozious...

Everything was upside down within this facility. In a football pitch sized space, a being with loose dark bandage like wraps around his body was suspended to the white ceilings.

His dark body looked like it was glued to the ceiling but in actuality everything was just upside down. Pieces of technological machinery and all sorts of unknown equipments were also glued to the ceiling.

The doors were up instead of being located on the floor.

"Iku fo eri tuba aoko vori welu banu..."

"Iku fo eri tuba aoko vori welu banu..."

"Iku fo eri tuba aoko vori welu banu..."

"Iku fo eri tuba aoko vori welu banu..."

"Iku fo eri tuba aoko vori welu banu..."

Whispers of the same words echoed repeatedly across the vicinity. It seemed to be coming from the being suspended to the ceiling.

In another room, a group of prestigious looking people of different species stared at the holographic screens before them displaying the location where the dark being was held.

"He has been chanting the same words nonstop for nearly a week since his capture," One of them voiced with a troubled tone.

"He became completely unresponsive after he got locked in here... almost like he is in a state of trance," A Handler stated.

"All forms of questioning, means of torture and trying to extract information with reliable devices failed..."? Another Handler said.

"Have we uncovered what those words mean?" An MBO officer inquired.

"We have tried but it is coming up really slow. This language is not amongst any we've encountered across the universe. It doesn't exist in the universal collection," One of the Handlers revealed.

"Hmm... what part of the translation has been uncovered then?" Grand Commander Shion questioned with his arms folded behind his back.

"Lu Ban?... meaning THE LORD..." The Handler who spoke earlier, voiced once more.

"The Lord? What is he? Some religious worshiper?" One of the MBO officers questioned with a look of confusion.

"Did the earth woman and Captain not mention that this creature is from another dimension?" A Midely from Planet Draconet voiced out.

"Yes, it was also proven here that this creature is indeed from another universe and every other information provided about them is correct but we still have not uncovered what their true motive is," Another one of the handlers replied.

"Well I suggest we get rid of him and the puppets to keep everyone safe. They did wipe out a Planet after all," A planet Orion higher up chimed in.

"The earth woman warned of an incoming danger before the hoax with Indulus Prime was uncovered which we believe to be linked. It would be unwise to get rid of them without properly understanding what we are dealing with," Handler One who happened to be in their midst all this time, finally spoke.

"Her name is Aimee not Earth woman," An MBO officer stated with a glare.

"My apologies..." Handler One voiced in response.

"Truly getting rid of them wouldn't be the best way to go. If we can uncover information that can potentially prevent inherent danger, then we should do our best to make use of this opportunity," Grand Commander Shion spoke with a dignified tone.

"Maybe we can find more clues from the interpretation of the words he has been repeating," An MBO general said with a thoughtful gaze.

"Is THE LORD the only words that have been translated so far?" Grand Commander Shion turned to stare at Handler One.

"Yes," Handler One nodded slightly.

"Then we have a little lead. We can try to uncover more information on that and also... I would like for technicians from earth to join in translating those words so as to make things faster," Grand Commander Shion stated with a calm but authoritative tone.

The Handlers and the others had no issues with his words and they soon got down to making orders as the respective representatives of their various planets so as to help with the current situation.

While all of this was ongoing, it had began to spread all across planet Ozious that the Indulus Prime participants were fake all this time and had infiltrated the planet with evil plans in mind.

Some said the Indulus Prime members were planet eaters and wanted to consume the entire planet populace.

Some said they were here to capture the youngsters participating in IYSOP for nefarious purposes.

A lot of the details surrounding the rumors were false but it had no doubt caused unrest and panic across the entire planet especially with the spectators.

If these fakes were able to infiltrate a great planet like this and use the identity of a participating planet for so long, there were no doubt that they had capabilities.

Chapter 1313 Let's Win This!

If these fakes were able to infiltrate a great planet like this and use the identity of a participating planet for so long, there were no doubt that they had capabilities.

Handler One had to later address the general public that there was nothing to worry about since they had the perpetrators in captivity. He didn't give more information about the situation but he managed to assure everyone that everything was alright.

At the very least the heated discussions had gone from Gustav to the Indulus Prime incident. Gustav was getting tired of everyone using him as a daily topic of discussion anyways.

...

"Teemee has finally been avenged," Gustav muttered as he sat in place with a whitish pear shaped organ in his grasp.

Blue blood continuously dripped from this pear shaped organ as he held it in his right hand which was drenched in the same color of blood.

("Best to get rid of the evidence because you definitely will be suspected when he is found dead,") The system voiced.

"I will..." Gustav responded before throwing up the pear shaped whitish organ in his grasp.

A milky colored glow spread across the organ while it was in mid air and before it could rise further it turned into light particles, completely disintegrating into nothingness.

Gustav fingers were soon covered in the same milky glow which erased the blood on his hands and floors as well.

Just minutes earlier, he had ended Orimon's life after torturing him for almost a week. He had successfully made everyone believe that Orimon was going insane.

Gustav had been questioned a few times by the Handlers and Xionsis who came looking for him personally. He denied any claims of ever coming close to Orimon since the last challenge ended and since they didn't have any proof, they stopped bothering him.

The Xionsis were planning to leave Ozious the next day so he had to end him before their departure.

Did he feel relieved after ending the one who was responsible for the death of his friend? Yes, Gustav did feel a little bit of relief.

He still felt guilty about being unable to save Teemee but he wouldn't have been able to live with himself if he didn't send the killer to join him in wherever he may be.

As the pacifists would say, revenge is a digging two graves. One for your target and one for yourself...

But Gustav didn't care about digging a grave for himself so long as the grave of the other person existed. No matter the cost, Gustav had vowed that anyone who ever harmed his loved ones would meet a gruesome and begrudging end.

("Don't you think you are sometimes too intense?") The system voiced.

"No. When you spent a huge chunk of your life alone without any form of relationships and friendships... and you finally build genuine emotional connections with people who care about you so much they would lay their lives on the line for you if need be...

Then you'd understand without a shadow of doubt that you don't want anything bad to happen to such people. You would cherish them... protect them... and save the universe because they exist within it... pfft you wouldn't understand. You don't have emotions.

You're just a machine who follows programs and execute actions based on them," ("Ouch... well... maybe you're right...") Internally the system had an understanding of emotions based on programming but it was a fact that it didn't feel emotions... or so they thought.

"Enough said, I need to prepare for the coming finals..." Gustav voiced while standing to his feet.

#####

Within an unknown world greyish colored world with floating dark platforms, a figure could be seen jumping downwards from one of the dark platforms.

This figure was clad in a dark hat and sleeveless tight shirt, along with leather pants. He trotted forward after landing on a massive dark ground that extended across a large radius.

Fwehoosssh~

He held his hat as his clothes began making flapping sounds while he stepped forward.

Up ahead was a dark storm sending forth heavy winds as dark waves thrashed around.

This dark storm looked like beings in pitch black cloaks swimming across the air in a circular format. They moved extremely fast and due to their high numbers, it had caused a storm.

Within the eye of this dark storm, the man trotting forward could spot the outline of a figure. Due to the low visibility in the environment, he couldn't see the figure properly but it seemed to be humanoid.

The dark storm was still thousands of feet away yet he could feel the intensity. There was a feeling of corruption in the air and the winds began to intensify the closer he got.

"I need to center my core against the corruption or I risk getting my existence getting infected..." Deji muttered while placing his index finger on his forehead.

Thhiiinhhhgggg~

His entire figure instantly began glowing with bright white light. He became a stark contrast with his environment.

The air began to twist and turn as if it was trying to reject his presence but fortunately, he became immune to the darkness thrashing around.

However, as he traveled further, the glow his figure emitted began to slowly dim...

#####

"The day has finally arrived," Fildhor voiced with a slightly tensed look.

Everyone gathered together in the main room with their battlesuits on. They all looked captivating in the white and blue tightfitted costume.

"This is it guys," E.E voiced as well with an excited look.

Over four months of continuous challenges had finally led up to this pivotal moment.

Their party of seventeen had been filled back up to twenty by three substitutes. These three who were used to replace Falco, Teemee and Glade looked even more tense than everyone else.

Yuhiko had joined the main group before so she had a bit of experience on what it was like to be participating in a major challenge but this was the finals. This was different from any other major challenge.

Gandalf and Yorichi were the two other new additions Gustav picked himself. Yorichi was a yellow skinned 5' male with extremely long nails and green hair. Aildris was initially the one with the longest hair in the group but now that Yorichi was here, he had been surpassed.

Gandalf on the other hand had a bald head and bushy red eyebrows. He had intense looking eyes but it couldn't hide the fact that he was tensed as well.

"Just follow in our footsteps and you guys will be fine," Vin said to the new additions.

Gustav stared at Gandalf from the corner of his eyes and conveyed a hidden message.

Gandalf nodded and let out a breath of relief.

Gustav proceeded to address everyone next, "Are you guys ready?"

They nodded in response.

"There is no room for failure. We are to become IYSOP champions. We got this far and we will make sure it is worth it," Gustav stated.

Everyone had fired up expressions upon hearing this.

"Let's win this," Gustav stated.

"Yes!" They roared in unison.

...

Minutes later everyone was headed to the first disk which was where the final challenge would be holding.

The participants on the other hand had their respective handlers waiting for them outside their accommodation area.

For each it was Handlers 27 and 28. The duo waited for the group outside on a saucer like floating item.

They implored Gustav and the others to climb onto it. The floating item expanded to accommodate all twenty of them and after a few moments it emitted a bright flash of light.

Zing~

They all vanished in the next instant.

#####

A blinding star light shone across the dark space, illuminating a region that floated above a massive planet with multiple layers.

This region had a massive ancient flame torch shaped platform with multiple structures erected on it. It was the size of an island just floating in deep space undisturbed or supported by anything.

It looked grand and incredible but it wasn't the only noticeable thing in this part of space.

Floating colosseum like structure seating areas could be seen a distance from the massive platform. Not only were these seating areas floating in space, they were also occupied by people who were mostly clad in space suits.

These of course were the IYSOP spectators. Spectators who were powerful enough sat in place without needing help from any spacesuit since they could breathe in space and fly.

Miss Aimee floated above the seating area with her eyes set in the direction of the massive floating battlefield.

Her eyes flashed with suspiciousness as she remained in place while participants appeared on the massive floating battlefield one after the other.

'Hmm... hopefully the kid will be okay,' She said internally before descending.

"How much has been uncovered?" Miss Aimee questioned after taking her seat.

"Not much... only part of the translation still," Grand Commander Shion responded.

"Hmm? Which is?" Miss Aimee inquired.

"Lu Ban? aoko vori which translates to '...The Lord is sending...'" Grand Commander Shion said with a contemplative tone.

Chapter 1314 IYSOP Final Challenge Begins

"Lu Ban? aoko vori which translates to '...The Lord is sending...'" Grand Commander Shion said with a contemplative tone.

"The Lord is sending? Sending what?" Miss Aimee questioned with an intrigued tone.

"They are yet to uncover the full translation," Grand Commander Shion replied.

"Hmm... how long is it going to take?" Miss Aimee asked.

"Since we now have our men on it, maybe a day or two," Grand Commander Shion voiced with a tone of reassurance.

"On the bright side, your warning about the eye appearance becoming a universal issue is now more believable to them so the whole alliance will most definitely agree to pool resources for proper investigation," Grand Commander Shion added.

"They'd better," Miss Aimee said while her eyebrows furrowed.

...

On the massive floating battlefield, almost all fifty planet participants had arrived. They stood in different areas and waited for the final challenge to begin.

Some captains addressed the rest of their teammates while some just engaged in conversations with one another.

They were all practically teammates in the last challenge since they were under one color. Unfortunately, they wouldn't be working together this time. Every planet for themselves.

Planet Ozious, Klaxosapes and many other great planets had lost in the last challenge so the final battle only had a few top twenty in it.

Planet Ozious who had won the last IYSOP really got disqualified before the quarter finals. A lot of spectators still found it unbelievable because in terms of power they were ranked amongst the highest across many galaxies.

However, it made sense to everyone since Earth who had always been around third place every IYSOP made a comeback this time. Now everyone was hinging on the Draconets or Earth winning.

The two planets were considered the strongest in the finals. Other planets had a chance if they were to gang up on both of them the moment the challenge began.

Soon all planetary groups arrived and Handler One went on to address the participants and spectators from the spectators area.

"The final challenge has arrived. This will determine the champions of IYSOP and the owner of the Zilk star for the next five hundred years," Handler One voiced with an intriguing tone.

"This will be a battle between all fifty planets. The battlefield crumbles to an extent every one hour, becoming smaller. Falling off the battlefield equals automatic disqualification. Should a participant get disqualified and wants to be brought back into the fight, their planet would need to use ten thousand points. Should all participants from a planet get disqualified, it automatically means disqualification for the whole planet..." Handler One kept giving details about the final challenge.

If a participant was knocked out but not knocked off the battlefield, they would remain in the challenge till either they regained consciousness or get thrown off.

Unlike the Monolith Challenge, this time the participants were given space helmets with breathable air. Those who could breath in space didn't need this but Gustav and the others did.

Handler One mentioned that the winner would be concluded when all other planets had been blasted off and one planet was left. He clarified once more that even if only a single participant from a planet was left, they would still be a part of the challenge and could win.

After all of the necessary clarifications, Handler One finally stated...

"The Final Challenge Can Now Commence!"

The intensity on the battlefield instantly multiplied as participants began moving from their various spots.

The floating battlefield was as large as an island and all fifty of them appeared in different places when they were brought here by their respective handlers.

For most of them to come into contact with one another they would still have to move further but some happened to be very close to each other and before long, battle sounds began ringing across the place.

Gustav and the others who were close to a large four hundred feet rock began moving.

"You know what to do," Gustav said to the others as he moved towards a gigantic rock up ahead.

Zing~

They all nodded while a button shaped device appeared in his hands which he plastered onto his forehead.

Gustav vanished in the next moment and proceeded to speed forward.

Swwoooovvv~

He had told the others that they had to do their best not to get ganged up on by other planets and moving together wouldn't help their situation. With this in mind, the group decided to split into twos and move in a way that would encircle the battlefield and then meet up in the middle later on.

Gustav looked like he was moving alone since he went invisible but in actuality he wasn't. His objective right now was to scour the battlefield without getting noticed so he could take note of where all of the planets were currently located.

This way they could gang up on two or more planets who were already duking it out. Gustav didn't care if this tactic was seen as cowardly or dirty, the aim was to win and that couldn't happen if other planets were still on the battlefield.

Gustav soon approached a battle area between two planet groups.

Bang! Bang! Bang! Boom!

The sound of explosions rippled loudly across the place as they engaged each other.

"Planet Roskah and Atorx..." He muttered while squatting on the roof of a one storey rhombus structured building.

The silver star in the distance illuminated this part of space but Gustav's figure was currently invisible so no one had any idea he was lurking.

Planet Roskah were whitish beings with massive ash colored bumps all over their bodies. They would grab the ash colored bumps and rip it off their skins before flinging it in the direction of their enemies.

Sometimes loud blasts would ring out but sometimes these bumps would transform into something else entirely... Something monstrous...

Plamet Atorx on the other hand had spear shaped heads and holes all of their bodies. They could walk on air and transform their bodies into weapons. The two groups directly attacked each other without anyone having the upper hand for many minutes.

Gustav moved to the back of the building after some time to change the invisibility button on his forehead.

Boom!

A massive five hundred feet sword came crashing through the building in the next instant along with an oddly shaped beast.

The beast blasted into smithereens after getting pierced through by the massive sword, causing blood and body goo to scatter across the place.

Fwhooosshh~

Gustav was nearly noticed but he managed to flee towards another hiding spot nearby and turned invisible once more. Cognitive Concealment was also currently activated so they couldn't sense his presence there.

Soon enough, a couple of them were blasted off the floating space battlefield.

Gustav watched until six were left from the side of Planet Atorx while two were left from Planet Roskah side.

This scenario here was precisely what Gustav was trying to avoid when he made the group split up. From the looks of things, Planet Atorx had won this but at what cost? Only six of their participants were left and the finals only just begun.

There were still many planets left and now their numbers had dwindled. If they were to face another planet with complete members, it would be the end for them.

Krruccckkk~ Krruccckkk~

The grounds began trembling immensely causing the eight left to pause.

They turned around and noticed the ground behind them crumbling into space. It continuously crumbled and was catching up to their current position.

They all turned around to instantly flee but the moment they moved a step forward...

Sweeeehhhhhhh~

They spotted a massive reddish arc with lightning snakes swimming across it, sweeping towards them with intensity.

"What the..."

"Aahhhh!"

All eight of them were immediately swept off the space battlefield by this reddish arc while the crumbling continued for a few more seconds.

"Two disqualified... forty eight to go," Gustav muttered.

("Did you count the others?") The system questioned.

"...Three disqualified... forty seven to go," Gustav said after sweeping his perception across the entire battlefield.

Some planet groups who were a little close to the center were not affected by the crumbling so battle between them was unhindered.

Gustav placed another button on his forehead and vanished once more. It was time to head forward.

...

In another part of the battlefield, a silver sped across the vicinity, evading multiple explosive attacks aimed at them.

The silver streak was fast enough to escape the area and disappeared into the distance in a bit.

A few minutes later...

"I can't believe they decided to form a group what the hell?" E.E. voiced at the side of a mountain with a look of disbelief.

"Not to mention that the Draconets are at the forefront of it," Angy voiced with a disturbed tone.

"How could the others even agree to team up with the Draconets just to eradicate us?" Matilda had a confused expression as she voiced out. "They're also just as dangerous as we are,"

Chapter 1315 A Champion Is Still A Champion

Matilda had a confused expression as she voiced out. "They're also just as dangerous as we are,"

"To everyone else it would be better to team up with the Draconets in order to eradicate us first. Sure the Draconets are dangerous but we are seen as more of a threat so the Draconets were wise to gather the others to gang up against us first. Those groups most likely believe that after taking us out, they could join hands and deal with the Draconets..." Aildris analysed.

Angy, E.E and Matilda felt it made sense. However, the Draconets were not so dumb that they wouldn't realise the others would turn on them the moment they successfully eradicated Earth representatives.

Unless, they already had a way to handle that. Now that Aildris thought about it, he realised Earth was the only threat to the Draconets win. The moment earth was eradicated, the Draconets would have technically won.

"We have to inform Gustav and the others," Aildris stated.

"Yeah, but in the meantime, we should stay as far away as possible from them," Angy voiced.

"True, splitting up won't cut it anymore because we'll have to face them sooner or later. It would be bad if they were to catch any of us alone," E.E said with a disturbed tone.

With this in mind, the group headed off. Angy decided to go solo due to her speed. She could find Gustav easily and bring him back to where they had decided to meet. As for the other three, they were meant to find the rest of the team scattered around the space battlefield.

Currently, the Draconets had amassed seven planetary groups and planned to increase the number. While the others saw this as a chance go finally get rid of the biggest threat in the IYSOP finals, the Dracons saw this as a way to kill two birds with one stone.

Earth participants would not go down without a fight and since they were considered so powerful, many other participants would be taken down in the process. Captain Ostril wanted to sacrifice the participants of other planets without having to lose any of the Dracons.

This way when all of Earth Participants were finally eradicated, a lot of other planets would be gone as well. They would have lesser number of participants to deal with.

"Ah man this sucks! Maybe if Gustav hadn't gone out there to be a one man army in the last challenge this wouldn't have happened," Yonda complained the moment Aildris, E.E and Angy explained the situation to him and Fildhor.

"It is true that we will have better chances together than apart," Fildhor voiced from the side.

"So is that the plan?" Yonda inquired.

"First objective is to come together, second would be coming up with a proper plan to go against them. We can't achieve the second without the first," Aildris replied.

"Why doesn't he just go fight all of them himself like he did last time?" Yonda said with an annoyed tone.

"Well this time the Draconets are included in the list of opponents so it will be even more difficult," Aildris voiced in response.

Yonda rolled his eyes a little before moving, " Well, since the captain needs us then we might as well show up,"

After finishing up here, all five of them moved on to find the other teammates.

...

In another part of the floating battlefied, a massive skyscraper sized meteorite descended.

It's brightness completely illuminated the environs as it brought forth blistering heat with its approach. It was like a massive torch in this infinite dark space, ripping through and sending waves across the place.

A figure floating in mid air yanked a green headtie off her forehead as the meteor shot towards her.

Thrrroooowwhhhhhssshhh~

A purplish beam blasted forth from the middle of her forehead. It slammed heavily into the massive blazing meteor and an unbelievable scene played out.

The massive meteor changed color, emitting a bright purple glow before shrinking incredibly.

Plop!

A small pinky sized stone that was supposed to be the meteor bumped into Elevora's chest and fell to the floating space battlefield.

She peered forward with an unbothered look while the rest of the participants below stared at her like they had just come into contact with an unbelievable monster.

"Did she just..." They couldn't believe their eyes.

The eyeball on Elevora's forehead gleamed and moved from side to side, making squeamish sounds.

Thiiingghhhh~

A dark purple haze suddenly spread forth and in the next instant.

Krryyychhhhhkkk! BANG!

The grounds ahead crumbled, drifting off into space along with the participants Elevora was just battling.

Fwwwwooommssh~

One of the falling participants somehow managed to leap forward, their greenish body phased through the dust cooked up from the crumbling space battlefield, heading towards Elevora above.

"Yaaahhh!" They yelled as their greenish arm turned into sharp tendrils which they stabbed in Elevora's direction.

Thooommm~

Before they could get close, a powerful purplish beam shot forth from the eyeball on Elevora's forehead, slamming heavily into the chest of the greenish participant.

Bang!

His figure swept across deep space and Handlers quickly flew after him before the participant would be lost to them.

Elevora turned around and slowly descended onto the floating platform.

"That was amazing big sis," Sheila jumped into her arms the moment she landed.

"Leave some for me next time, okay?" Sheila giggled while requesting.

"You would have done way worse if I had left them to you," Elevora shook her head.

"Come on, I just wanna have a little fun," Sheila galloped with an excited look.

"Maybe you c..." Elevora was about responding when she sensed something and turned to stare at the right.

"Hmm?" Just up ahead, a group walked out from behind a tree shaped massive structure.

"Oh look goodies hehehe," Sheila giggled even more upon sighting the newcomers.

However, Elevora eyebrows furrowed with suspiciousness.

All twenty of them had serious looks as they spread out but that wasn't all. Another twenty appeared from behind... and then another twenty... and then another twenty...

Soon, up to a hundred and sixty participants had gathered up ahead and in their midst was none other than the Draconets.

Elevora instantly understood they were working together. Gustav already predicted this but they didn't expect anyone to join forces with the Draconets.

And now they were just two of them, against up to eight different planetary groups.

"Hahahaha this is gonna be fun big sis," Sheila began laughing hysterically.

"Eh... I don't think so but... I will make sure I take down as many as I can," Elevora eyes twinkled with determination and vigor as her forehead gleamed dangerously.

"Where are the rest of your teammates?" Captain Ostril questioned from up ahead.

"What does it matter where they are? You gathered groups to battle against us because you are insufficient. Cowards," Elevora responded with a disgusted tone.

"Coward or not, a champion is still a champion and that is all that matters. We can decide the winner for ourselves after we have gotten rid of you lots," Unlike Strum who would have already considered this an insult to their great planet and instantly attacked, Ostril had a much cooler head.

"Aren't those two are some of the strongest earth representatives? We should be careful," One of the Ruhzians voiced from the side.

"Every single earth representative is just like them and It's just two of them, don't be a damn coward," Captain Ostril yelled from the side.

"That is rich coming from you," Elevora voiced from up ahead.

"I am done with this charade," Captain Ostril voiced before leaping upwards and landing on a massive rock by the right.

"Well, what are you all waiting for? Attack!" She yelled.

The groups below immediately charged forward upon hearing that, activating different sets of abilities.

"Big sis, you take the right and I'll take the left," Sheila giggled excitedly before dashing forward.

...

In another part of the floating space battlefield, Gustav merged his body to the side of a ash colored rock. He had completely Shape-shifted to take on the exact look of this rock so it seemed like he was an inanimate object.

Except for turning into beasts, Gustav hadn't really revealed his shape-shifting abilities since IYSOP began so no one was aware that he was capable of this. This was exactly why planetary groups were walking past without an ounce of suspicion.

If they were initially aware of Gustav's capabilities, everyone would have been on higher alert.

As a group of six passed by, Gustav suddenly transformed by into his original look and sneaked up on them from behind.

Fwwhoosshhh~

By the time they noticed him, it was too late.

Gustav grabbed the chicken structured neck of two of them from behind as he sped forward, slamming their faces onto the ground intensely.

Bang! Bang!

Cracks spread across the place as the ground caved in from the impact. The other four were unable to react quick enough as hands grew out of Gustav's back and stretched backwards to grab them.

Bang!

He slammed their faces together causing their spacesuit helmets to be instantly smashed to pieces as their faces collided.

Chapter 1316  Angels?

Bang!

He slammed their faces together causing their spacesuit helmets to be instantly smashed to pieces the moment their faces collided.

Loud bone cracking sounds rang out and blood was spilled as the glass from the space helmet drew large cuts on their faces.

"Kiiaarrhh!"

In just a couple of seconds Gustav had practically taken four out and now two were left. These two had realised what they were up against but now it was too late. Their other teammates were sprawled across the ground writhing in agony so they would have to face Gustav without any help.

One of them pushed his hands forward causing a wave of yellow energy to surge out.

A massive milky glowing blade appeared in Gustav's grasp and he proceeded to slash at the incoming surge of yellow waves.

Fwwwheeee~

A smooth whistish division appeared in between the yellowish surge of energy as it got split in two halves.

Boom! Boom!

The rocks by the sides got crushed to bits as the yellow surge slammed into them while the other teammate prepared to send out an attack.

However, at this moment, Gustav vanished.

Thrrrihhhh~

He reappeared behind the on on the left, sending a kick towards her head.

Twaaaackk~

The female participant with an onion like structure got sent flying across the air. The other teammate used this opportunity to release another surge of yellowish energy at point blank range.

[Lightning Blitz Has Been Activated]

Gustav figure turned into a streak of lightning and reappeared before the other teammate in mid air.

Fwwhoosshh~

He yanked her by the head and spun forcefully before flinging her forward.

Boom!

While the yellowish surge beneath was wreaking havoc across the place, this participant was spiralling into deep space.

"Sovi!" The teammate beneath yelled and his onion structured body began emitting a bright yellowish light.

His sun like glow illuminated the vicinity as the surroundings began to tremble.

Gustav could feel immense energy gathering beneath him and descended in the next instant Before the participant could release the energy they had been gathering, Gustav sent a punch towards his gut.

Bang!

The participant spat out a mouthful of murky green blood as he got sent flying across the air. His figure instantly dimmed.

Thooooomm~

Gustav leapt after his catapulting figure and grabbed him in mid air, before properly fling the participant forward again.

Gustav wasted no time in throwing the rest off the space battlefield as well and in a bit all six of them were gone.

Krrrruuucchhhhhh~

The entire battlefield began trembling immensely and dust rolled up from up ahead. The moment Gustav witnessed this, he knew another hour had gone by.

He wasted no time in getting away from his present location to avoid disqualification.

"Nine gone, forty one left," Gustav muttered as his figure sped forward.

It had been three hours since the Finals began and now forty one planetary groups were left in the challenge. The space battlefield was now three quarters of its original size.

Bam!

A figure suddenly bumped into him, dragging him towards the east with incredible speed.

"Gustav," Angy voiced after stopping at a far distance.

"Angy? What is it?" Gustav asked with a slightly surprised look.

"I've been looking for you all over... where have you been?" Angy recalled scouring the entire space battlefield more than a hundred times yet Gustav was nowhere to be found.

"I was moving around covertly like I planned," Gustav responded.

Angy had been unable to see him all this time because Gustav had been moving while taking the form of inanimate objects. If he hadn't returned to his original look to escape the crumbling region of the battlefield, Angy would have remained unable to locate him.

"Why did you come looking for me? Did something happen?" Gustav questioned with a tone of curiosity.

"Yes. The Draconets are unifying groups to attack us together," Angy reported.

"Well, it not something unexpected. We knew this would happen," Gustav stated with an unfazed tone.

"Yeah but with the Draconets its like... those guys are incredibly strong," Angy voiced with a troubled expression.

"So is Planet Cirus, T429 and Ustanbid... This was to be expected," Gustav listed.

"Yeah Aildris suggested gathering everyone back together since it would be better to face them as a full team instead of one or two of us bumping into them and getting wiped out," Angy explained.

"I was supposed to come get you and now Elevora and Sheila are in a pinch," Angy added.

"Are the others gathered already?" Gustav inquired.

"They are... Sheila and Elevora aren't. They bumped into them and are currently in a fight," Angy pointed out.

"Why didn't you help them?" Gustav questioned.

"I can't get too close... I start to feel my speed deplete," Angy responded with a slightly tensed look.

"Ostril..." Gustav immediately realised who was behind that.

"If that is the case then how are those two faring?" Gustav reckoned that Elevora and Sheila would not be able to manipulate their abilities to its full scale.

"Not good..." Angy shook her head.

Angy would have gotten them out of there if it wasn't for her speed situation. She wasn't fast enough to escape the bombardment of attacks with them in the middle due to Ostril.

"You need to do something or they'll..." Gustav cut Angy off before she could complete her sentence.

"I already did something but those two need to leave there immediately or they'll get caught up in it," Gustav's statement sounded cryptic and suspicious to Angy.

"What do you mean by that?" Angy asked with a tone of confusion.

"Ostril is the issue right? I'll get her out of the way while you get those two out of there," Gustav voiced before charging forward.

#####

In the upside down facility where Vikrush Insa was kept, all sorts of figures clad in scientific outfits moved about the place.

Vikrush Insa had been strapped to a laboratory table and was currently getting inspected by the group of people around. No matter how much they cut and poked him, he never showed any visible signs of pain on his face.

The dark bandage like covering on his face had long been ripped off to reveal a scorched human shaped face. His face wasn't just black, it looked cooked. His eye sockets were incredibly hollow and pitch black as well.

With everything currently ongoing, Vikrush continuously chanted the same words over and over and over again.

"Iku fo eri tuba aoko vori welu banu..."

"Iku fo eri tuba aoko vori welu banu..."

"Iku fo eri tuba aoko vori welu banu..."

His eyes were half shut the same way they had been since he was captured. They concluded that the trance like state had left him unable to feel or discern activities ongoing around him.

In a couple of minutes, another team of researchers walked in with holographic screens on display before them.

"We just uncovered more from the strange language," One of them reported.

"What does it say?" Someone from the group already within the room questioned.

"The Lord Is Sending * * angels soon," The researcher responded.

"So we're only missing two more words now?" One of them said with a tone of intrigue.

"What could it be?" One of them voiced.

"Angels?" Another one of them stated.

"Thanks for that Captain Obvious," An earth researcher voiced.

"Should we inform the higher ups?" One of them questioned.

"We need to figure out if the two words before Angels are substantial to the structure of the sentence. We don't know if they could be words that would practically change the entire conception of what we currently have in mind when reading the words out," The same earth researcher voiced once more.

"They did ask us to give them updates whenever even the slightest bit of discovery is made," An Ozis in red medical robes mentioned.

"Yeah, we'd better let them know even though we haven't completed the translation," Another earth researcher nodded.

#####

On the space battlefield, loud rumbles rang out as a figure in silky white and blue tight suit, jumped from place to place to avoid numerous attacks.

"Take them and go now," Gustav yelled before jumping forward.

Boom!

A massive glowing blue arrow slammed into his back, sending him flying forward as it exploded upon contact.

Gustav used the force of the explosion to catapult himself forward faster, arriving before a silver skinned female figure with pinkish star shaped patterns all over her body.

The suddenly appearance had taken her by surprise since she had her eyes on Gustav this whole time and had been cancelling his abilities to make him slower.

Fwwwheiii~

Gustav's right arm turned completely rocky and red as he tightened it while throwing it upwards with force.

Bang!

His fist slammed heavily into captain Ostril's jaw sending her catapulting across the air.

fwwwhoosshhhhh~

A silver streak sped across the decimated environment, phasing through an encirclement of over a hundred participants. She proceeded to grabbing two female figures sprawled out across the ground with multiple injuries before speeding off with them.

Meanwhile, up ahead, a massive looming shadow with pink glowing eyes materialised out of thin air.

Chapter 1317 Pika Ta!

Meanwhile, up ahead, a massive looming shadow with pink glowing eyes materialised out of thin air.

Gustav raised his arm and was in the process of throwing another punch when the looming massive shadowy figure coupled its fists together and swung downwards with intensity.

Boom!

A cloud of dust spread across this area of the space battlefield as Gustav transformed arm immediately reverted to its original look while he crashed onto the ground.

Ostril saw this as an opportunity to attack and sped in Gustav's direction.

[Lightning Blitz Has Been Activated]

Gustav turned into a streak of lightning but the moment he did, the pinkish glowing eyes Encour Clapsed its hands together.

Thrrriihhhh~

"Absolute Cancel..." Captain Ostril muttered while a pinkish wave spread across the entire vicinity.

Thrraaazzzhhh~

To their utmost disbelief, Gustav's lightning figure blitz into the distance, disappearing from sight.

-"What the hell?"

-"Captain Ostril Absolute Cancel didn't work?"

The Dracons in the vicinity were astounded after witnessing this scene. Captain Ostril cancelling abilities had worked on Gustav earlier but one she activated on a large scale didn't? It did not make any sense to them.

"After them!" Captain Ostril yelled with a look of anguish after noticing that every single one of them were gone.

Elevora and Sheila whom she was about sending off the platform especially made her rage since it now looked like wasted effort. They had spent the last hour battling just two earth representatives. No matter how shameless she was, this still looked bad on them.

Sheila and Elevora had given them a run for their money and even managed to take out up to fifty of them over the last hour. Now that it was finally time for them to achieve victory, Gustav and Angy came and snatched them away.

Captain Ostril was not going to let this be.

"What are you waiting for fools!? Move!" She yelled while charging in the direction Gustav had just vanished in.

-"What is wrong with her tsk?"

-"Does she think she is the boss of us?"

-"I am getting tired of her controlling attitude,"

The participants from other planets had begun complaining as they headed in the required direction but all of a sudden something unexpected happened.

Thiikkiihh~ Thiikkiihh~ Thiikkiihh~ Thiikkiihh~ Thiikkiihh~ Thiikkiihh~

Massive walls of icicle like stones protruded out of the ground up ahead. It went so high and wide that it divided the entire battlefield in half, denying the others behind access to the middle of the battlefield.

"Isn't that..."

"Captain Crimson's doing,"

They paused after recognising this to be similar to the barricade that was formed around the medallion in the last challenge.

In the next moment another occurrence left them with confusion...

Zing~

A boulder sized orb had suddenly appeared behind them. It was filled with dark reddish destructive energy and purplish lightning arcs swimming around it.

Upon its appearance, everyone went silent in reverence and fear.

The vibrance it emitted began to stir winds, causing space to tremble and twist.

"What the hell is that!?" Someone finally broke the silence.

"Nothing we can defend agai..."

Before the other participant could finish their sentence a loud finger snapping sound rang out across the battlefield.

And that was all it took...

BOOOOOOOOOOOOMMMM!

A reddish with a mixture of dark purplish wave of destruction blasted across the battlefield, instantly obliterating everything in sight.

The spectators jaws dropped as they witnessed the spectacular sight of the reddish wave of destruction spreading across space and even rolling towards their direction.

Thiiingghhh~ Thiiingghhh~ Thiiingghhh~ Thiiingghhh~

Barriers appeared all over the spectators area as the tongues of reddish waves rolled over. Purplish lightning bolts toiled across the place along with them.

Bang! Bang! Bang! Bang! Bang!

Cracks soon began to appear on the barriers surrounding the spectators area as the reddish waves slammed against them furiously in a bid to vaporise everything in its path.

"Keep enhancing the barriers!" Handler One instructed.

"But they already have up to fifteen layers," Handler Three said.

"Do you not see the destructiveness of this attack? Do it!" Handler One yelled.

Handler Three nodded and went to join the other Handlers who were currently infusing their energy into the barriers and adding extra layers.

They began groaning as they realised the barriers were getting destroyed very quickly and eleven layers were gone almost instantly.

"We have to redirect the energy!" Handler Three yelled.

The others around nodded in understanding while they spread their hands forward to touch the barriers.

Shadowy arrows began appearing all over the reddish and dark purplish waves of destruction. The Handler joined their strength and redirected the waves away from their location in space.

The blast soon appeared in a different spot in space and obliterating everything around it, causing the death of a star.

- "That was terrifying,"

- "To think an IYSOP participant is capable of such destruction,"

- "Who did it?"

The spectators were left in awe as they peered forward and noticed that half of the space battlefield was gone. The island sized floating battlefield had been completely reduced to half its size and now it was only as big as four football stadiums.

The battlefield had been artificially created and induced with the best materials for construction so as to make it extremely sturdy. It was created to withstand powerful attacks so destroying a huge chunk of them was supposed to be impossible.

The crumbling that happened every one hour was triggered from within since they had put charges that would make it disengage from the inside out while in the process of creating it. This was because it wouldn't be possible to do it from outside due to how extremely sturdy the foundation of the battlefield was....

Yet...

What they were staring at before them was something they never saw coming.

Zing~ Zing~ Zing~ Zinh~ Zing~ Zing~ Zing~ Zing~

Fortunately all of the participants that had been in the eye of the blast got teleported to the spectators area safely. They also couldn't believe their eyes but this meant they were practically disqualified already.

Some of them were glad as they'd rather get disqualified than obliterated. I'm just one go three hundred and twenty seven participants were disqualified.

A couple of Dracons found themselves in the spectators areas and looked around with awe.

"Where is the captain?" One of them questioned.

...

"Looks like you managed to make it," Gustav voiced as he stood before a slightly scalded figure crawling on all fours.

"Absolute C..." Before the figure could complete her sentence a kick to the face sent her spiralling across the air.

Bang! Fwwhiii~

"That is to be expected when I drained the orb of fifty percent of its power," Gustav voiced after Ostril crashed into a rock up ahead.

"The real battle begins now," He chuckled lightly while stepping forward.

The walls Gustav had erected before he activated the planet destroying orb's blast had been completely obliterated. Despite the fact that Gustav made this particular orb weaker than its original power, it would have still erased the entire battlefield if not for the modicum of control he had over them.

He had managed to stop the waves from destroying this particular part, leaving the rest of the participants on this side unscathed.

Some of the Dracons had managed to make it over the wall before the charge spread across the place but every other participant from the groups they gathered were all gone. Gustav had managed to get every single one of them disqualified.

Currently only twenty four out of the original fifty planets were left on the battlefield. A lot of them were clueless as to who was responsible for what had just happened but Ostril and the other earth participants knew well who the culprit was.

#####

In the Upside Down facility, Vikrush Insa suddenly opened his eyes widely and sat up before yelling.

"Pika Ta!"

"Pika Ta!"

"Pika Ta!"

The researchers around him struggled to hold him in place as their faces were laced with confusion.

"What in the world is he saying now!?" One of them yelled.

"I don't know," Another one groaned while trying to restrain him.

Vikrush whose eyes remained widened reached out to grab one of the researchers before pulling him closer.

"It is time!" Vikrush yelled in English.

"Time for what?" The researcher voiced with a fearful look.

Vikrush didn't answer... instead he looked up.

"Let us sedate him now!" An earth researcher yelled.

But in the next moment, the environment dimmed. A sudden chill spread across the vicinity as the researchers found their figures rooted in place due to deep fear.

"What is... that...?" One of them questioned as his fingers shook.

Thrrriihhhh~ Thrrriihhhh~

The whole facility began to tremble greatly but this wasn't just happening here, it was happening on every single disk of Planet Ozious.

A strange dim had suddenly permeated the entire planet, turning day into nighttime as every single living being dwelling on the face of Planet Ozious gazed into the skies with looks of fear and disbelief.

"WHAT IN THE WORLD IS THAT!?"

Chapter 1318 Let There Be LIGHT!

A strange dim had suddenly permeated the entire planet, turning day into nighttime as every single living being dwelling on the face of Planet Ozious gazed into the skies with looks of fear and disbelief.

"WHAT IN THE WORLD IS THAT!?"

Up above a massive hole had appeared deep in the sky. It was incredibly gigantic and sent forth a wave of energy that had every single inhabitant across the nine disks frozen in fear.

Tremors spread across the disks as space trembled as well. Cracks began to appear on the golden grounds and buildings.

FEAR... this was an inescapable feeling that plagued the hearts of every single inhabitant.

"A mouth?"

...

Few minutes earlier, on the space battlefield, a person in laboratory outfit stood before Miss Aimee and Grand Commander Shion.

"The Lord Is Sending * * Angels... we haven't been able to translate the rest yet but this is our progress so far," He voiced.

At the same time he was giving this report, one of the Ozis was also giving the same report to Handler One.

"Sending angels?" An MBO general voiced with a tone of confoundment.

"We don't know what is between yet so we can't say for sure," The researcher stated.

"This is unnerving," Grand Commander Shion said with a troubled tone.

"We need to figure out what we're up against and if we should be expecting any dan..." While Grand Commander Shion was speaking, Miss Aimee's face suddenly turned dark.

"Something is here..."?She voiced while peering towards the western part of deep space.

Miss Aimee's grim expression caused their faces to turn confused.

"What are you talking about?" Grand Commander Shion happened to be clueless just like the others but they soon understood how serious the situation was when Miss Aimee's eyes emitted a bright white glow.

Thiiinnghhh~

Powerful energy rose from her figure, drawing the attention of every single spectator around as this part of space began to twist and turn. Her hair floated upwards as her eyes remained fixated in the western direction of deep space.

In the next moment they realised what she was talking about...

On the floating battlefied, Gustav stepped forward to deal with Ostril and left the others to his teammates who were gathered around him.

He suddenly paused as he sensed something.

[Warning!]

[Warning!]

[Warning!]

[Warning!]

"Not this again," Gustav's face darkened as he stared at the system warnings before him.

'System! System.... System...' Gustav called multiple times yet there was no answer.

"Shit!" He cursed out loud as he turned to stare in a particular direction of space.

A subtle chill suddenly permeated the entire vicinity.

TWWOOOOHH~

Millions of feet away from their position, space suddenly ripped apart as a gigantic existence appeared in place.

Fwwwwhoosssshhhh~

Icy dark colored winds spread across this part of space as the collapse continuously expanded.

With the appearance of this gigantic existence, a shade of darker dim spread across space. The stars in the distance dimmed along with space rocks and blazing meteors. The dim casted a net so wide, it reached the first disk below.

The first disk was the largest part of Planet Ozious which was hundreds of times larger than earth, yet it covered it completely in just a moment and went on to spread across the rest of the disks.

-"What is going on!?"

-"What in the world is that!?"

Loud yells of confusion and panic spread across the space battlefield and spectators area as they witnessed this unimaginable sight.

Despite the appearance of this existence being millions of feet away from their position, it's incredibly massive size made it seem as though it appeared right above them.

To make matters worse, the collapse of space continued spreading which meant its full size wasn't revealed yet.

Every single earth participant and spectator immediately got a sense of deja-vu as they stared at this massive dark entity.

The last time they saw something like this, it was an eye and now it was a mouth. Was there a connection somewhere?

It was already two times the size of Planet Ozious and still increasing.

"#%&@^%>,;@%^@@&,"

A loud and incredibly disturbing unknown language rang out from the massive dark hole.

"Its a mouth," Gustav voiced as he felt an indescribable force rummage through his insides.

"Gurrrhhh~" E.E vomited a mouthful of blood onto the battlefield as he fell to his knees.

"KOOORR~" Everyone under the cast of the dim began puking out blood as well.

"CLOSE YOUR EARS!" Handler One yelled with a loud voice.

Everyone quickly did what they could to cover their ears as it was determined that the words coming out of the massive dark mouth was the cause of this.

Gustav stood in place with bloodshot eyes as the system warning continuously rooted him to the ground.

"This isn't good... unlike the last time when it wanted to self destruct, this time its hindering my body functionality," Gustav muttered as he tried to move his hand but his body wouldn't listen.

Unlike the many others who were puking out blood and having blood leaking from their ears as well as their noses, Gustav had managed to stay without suffering these effects.

He did feel strange from the words coming out of the massive dark mouth but it wasn't enough to harm him just like Miss Aimee and the other powerful spectators currently available.

Ding! Ding! Ding! Ding! Ding!

A loud alarm began blarring across the battlefield loudly as the gravitational force of space that was manipulated to allow them to move freely began coming apart.

Objects began to obey the original law of gravity, floating above the ground of the battlefield.

"The second Premonition is five months early! What is going on!?" Endric yelled as a green glow gleamed from within his helmet.

"I don't understand either... Something is wrong," Husarius answered with a tone of bafflement.

Endric couldn't believe his eyes as he stared at the massive mouth that continued to expand and rip through space.

"It is irregular too... It has appeared for longer than it is supposed to," Endric began stepping forward, passing through the midst of participants that were kneeling and puking blood.

He pulled the helmet off his head and the green glow on his forehead shone brightly across the entire battlefield.

"As a time candidate, it is my duty to restore order in cases of time anomalies," He voiced loudly attracting the attention of the participants around, Gustav included.

"Lend me your power, Husarius,"

Right before everyone's eyes Endric grew taller and visible facial hairs appeared on his face.

...

"This is a threat beyond anything we have ever seen! Our first priority is to send everyone back down!" Handler One yelled with a greatly disturbed look.

"What about the finals?" One of the Handlers asked.

"That doesn't matter right now! Bring everyone down safely!" Handler One instructed.

"Understood!" The handlers voiced before setting out towards the battlefield.

Miss Aimee who had sensed the threat before everyone did had already appeared in the eye of the gigantic dark hole.

She was like a speck of dust before its massiveness. Dark waves spread from it, corroding space and everything in its path. Purplish aura burst forth from Miss Aimee's figure, intercepting the waves of darkness spreading forth.

"Not on my watch," She muttered with a calm tone before spreading her arms.

"Since you are an epitome of darkness... let there be LIGHT,"

A burst of white glow suddenly surged forth from Miss Aimee figure, spreading across space with incredible speed.

The spectators still present watched the scene ahead with immensely awe stricken expressions. It was like being in the presence of two true deities as no one present could perform the feat Miss Aimee had just achieved.

Bang! Bang! Bang! Bang! Boom! Boom!

Darkness clashed with light emitted from Miss Aimee's figure but the light managed to push it back, causing the dim that cast itself across the entirety of Planet Ozious to shrink.

Miss Aimee singlehandedly brought forth a few seconds of relief as the participants and spectators felt the strangeness within them vanish.

Meanwhile the handlers were already getting the participants off the battlefield and towards the first disk. Now only around a hundred of them were left.

-"You need to stop her now!" Husarius yelled as Endric's forehead gleamed brightly.

"I know," Endric blinked and reappeared millions of feet away from his initial position.

He was now a couple hundred feet behind Miss Aimee.

"STOP!" He yelled but his voice didn't reach her.

Endric created a force around him to prevent himself from getting swept away by the chaos presented by these two incredible entities.

The chaos was not directed at him yet he struggled to move even a feet further. With the collision of light and darkness at this center point, space was being ripped apart.

Endric couldn't use blink to appear right behind her yet he needed to get to her right away.

- "You don't have time! It has to be now! Husarius yelled with a strained tone.

"I'm trying!" Endric groaned as his reached forward with trembling hands.

- "Less than three seconds left! We are going to lose her!" Husarius yelled as the dark mouth up ahead shrunk.

"We are not going to lose her!" Endric yelled back while his eyes emitted a blue silvery glow.

- "There's no guarantee that would work,"

"I have to try..." Endric voiced at the last second before chanting...

"SPACE DISRUPTION... UNIVERSAL EMERGENCE!"

Chapter 1319 Evacuation Protocols!

Space was already in a state of dissonance so it was now or never.

"I have to try..." Endric voiced at the last second before chanting...

"SPACE DISRUPTION... UNIVERSAL EMERGENCE!"

The surroundings around Endric instantly changed as a world emerged from the center of his being.

Miss Aimee instantly found herself in a different location. She walked upon a glass pane that reflected the view of a different universe.

Constellations, planets, moons, satellites and all sorts of Orbital bodies could be seen lined up mythically across the place.

Endric stood behind her as she took in the view for a moment before turning around with a murderous expression.

"Why did you do that?" Miss Aimee yelled.

"If I had been a second later, you would have been lost to us and I cannot have my big brother bear such pain because I am aware of how much he cherishes you," Endric explained swiftly.

"What do you mean?" Miss Aimee tone softened.

"I understand that it seemed like you were driving it back but do you recall how being in the presence of the first Premonition felt?" Endric questioned.

"Yes... it was..." Miss Aimee's face displayed a reminiscent expression, "More tenacious,"

"This particular one is five months early. It is an anomaly and if i had been a second latter in dragging you into my universe, it would have exploded in full vigor and forcefully swallowed up your light..." Endric explained.

"How would you know? I could face difficulty with this sort of entity but I would never get consumed," Miss Aimee argued.

"I saw it. You were gone," Endric pointed out, "Or rather you would have been if I hadn't dragged you here,"

"You have Premonition?" Miss Aimee was a bit surprised as she inquired.

"Not entirely but I did look into the fates sometime back so I was aware of how things would have gone with the second Premonition. However, it wasn't supposed to appear now or even here," Endric gave a brief explanation before turning to the side.

Krrrychhhhh~ Krrrychhhhh~

Cracks suddenly began to appear in deep space within Endric's universe.

"We need to leave now!" Endric's face turned dark as he grabbed Miss Aimee's left shoulder.

Krrrychhhhhh~ Boom!

The universe shattered like glass in the next moment while Endric blinked.

Thrrrihhhh!

Him and Miss Aimee vanished from their standing point instantly, reappearing millions of feet away.

Endric's universe was void of the law of time so time had stopped flowing when they were within. This made it like time paused but in actuality they were just in a place where time didn't exist.

The dark hole ahead was an entity beyond time who was capable of witnessing events outside of time. It was responsible for destroying Endric's universe.

The moment they left the shattered universe...

Boooooommmmm!

Blistering darkness blasted forth from the hole spreading across millions of miles in space. It was like space was shattering as well as the darkness spread beyond the imaginable.

This new wave of darkness was extremely more potent than the previous one as it seemed they were corroding the existence of reality itself. This darkness consumed everything in its path and was turning space to white and swallowing up stars.

The first disk was immediately consumed by this new wave of darkness and dissapeared almost instantaneously.

With how it exploded with speed, Miss Aimee realised Endric was right. It would have consumed her but she knew it wouldn't be able to kill her. However, Endric mentioned that she would have gotten dragged into the other dimension.

Endric had already predicted this as well and used blink three more times to appear on the third disk.

Miss Aimee stood on the second and raised her palm to send forth a charge of bright light that encapsulated the entirety of the second to ninth disk.

Planet Ozious was currently in great turmoil as the inhabitants and spectators were at loss as to what was going on. It had struck fear in their hearts and every single spectator witnessing this across galaxies couldn't believe their eyes.

One second they were watching IYSOP finals and the next people were running for their lives. The planet had been put in a state of peril and it was looking like everyone was going to perish.

Miss Aimee's creation of light had temporarily given them a barrier but she was well aware that it wouldn't last.

"How can we help?" Grand Commander Shion inquired.

"Best to get everyone off the planet and find Gustav," Miss Aimee said to him.

Grand Commander Shion old head nodddd in response and his figure blurred as he vanished with the rest of the MBO officers.

They moved as swiftly as possible and began rounding up everyone from earth.

Dhiiinn~ Dhiiinn~ Dhiiinn~ Dhiiinn~

Alarm warnings were blarring all across the rest of the eight disks. Planet Ozious technological defense mechanisms activated and sent forth massive red destructive blasts towards the net of darkness trying to consume the planet from above.

Unfortunately, no matter how many powerful planet decimating attacks were sent at this entity, none managed to have any effect. The wave of darkness continously consumed them.

Grand Commander Shion had already informed Handler One of the analysis on the entity and how it would be best to leave immediately. The planet was in a greater state of chaos as the announcement was given for inhabitants to make their way to spaceships as soon as possible.

Miss Aimee was depleting her energy at a very insane rate despite how incredible her reserve of energy was. She estimated that everyone had an hour to evacuate and this was only plausible if the mouth above didn't do anything else crazy.

"Where is big brother?" Endric could be seen blinking from place to place across the third disk.

- "There is too much interference from everything going on so I cannot pinpoint his location," Husarius voiced.

"I sensed the intentions of the entity when we were up there... they want big brother. This whole thing won't stop until they get him," Endric revealed as he blazed across the air on a flying telekinetic.

Below him, millions of feet stamping on the ground reverberated loudly as the inhabitants did their best to follow the instructions of Handler One.

- "They are not supposed to be able to keep it going for this long," Husarius voice tinged with immense discomfort.

"Yet they are... this planet will be consumed. The best I can do is restrict and contain the anomaly to a certain extent," A lot of things didn't make sense to them but since there was no answer to the questions plaguing their minds, they had to do what they could to salvage the situation.

Miss Aimee was currently doing the heavy lifting so this gave Endric the chance to focus on finding Gustav.

"Vera would know where he is," Endric suddenly realised this and blinked.

Thwwowoosshhh~

He reappeared on the fourth disk.

"Blink!"

Thwwowoosshhh~

"Blink!"

Thwwowoosshhh~

"Blink!"

Thwwowoosshhh~

"Blink!"

Thwwowoosshhh~

"Blink!"

Thwwowoosshhh~

He soon appeared on the ninth disk which happened to be extremely rowdy. Spectators were running helter-skelter and moving towards the spacecraft that had brought them here.

Endric swiftly headed in the direction of the Earth's participants accomodation area.

Swwoosshh~

The moment he arrived within, he spotted some of the others, loitering around with worried expressions.

"Endric, you're safe!" Sheila yelled with a look of relief as she jumped into his embrace.

The others patted him on the back with a slightly relieved expression.

"Where is Gus?" E.E questioned.

"So he isn't here too?" Endric questioned.

Aildris and E.E both shook their heads in response.

"We thought he was with you," Angy voiced from the side with a worrisome expression.

"He is not... but they haven't gotten him yet since this whole thing is still ongoing," Endric pointed out.

"What do you mean?" Angy inquired.

"This whole thing is related to the ones after him," The moment Endric mentioned this, they all had an expression of realisation on their face.

"That... how does one even fight against that?" Fildhor felt like his mind was going to explode.

"You all need to get to the spaceship now!" An MBO general and a few officers who had been within the accomodation area all this time, voiced out once more.

"We told you, we can't leave until everyone is accounted for and Gustav still hasn't been found," Angy said with a strong tone.

"Where are the others?" Endric asked as he noticed that only sixteen of them were here.

Besides Gustav, Matilda and Vera were missing.

"They went with the other MBO officers to get transport Falco out of the facility he was kept along with Old man Deji," Angy responded.

"Damn it," Endric cursed before turning around.

"I need her help finding big brother," Endric stated while walking away.

"Let's head there together. We were initially waiting for you and Gustav to return. We could go find Gustav together after we meet up with those two," Angy suggested.

"Alright, let's go," Aildris voiced and everyone else nodded before E.E conjured a massive vortex.

Chapter 1320 I Need To Find Big Brother Immediately

"Alright, let's go," Aildris voiced and everyone else nodded before E.E opened a massive vortex.

"These kids are going to get me in trouble," The MBO general gritted his teeth as he tagged along. His objective was to get them to the spacecraft safely so he couldn't leave their side.

The group stepped out of the vortex and appeared within the facility where Falco was held. However, the moment they got here, what appeared in their line of sight was decimation and chaos.

Vera's body was spotted up ahead, traveling across the air in a arc.

Aildris leapt forward and caught her in mid air.

Bam!

He landed several feet away and stared at the dark humanoid creatures with horns and whistish eye sockets.

"What the hell are these!?" E.E yelled.

Fwwhoosshhh~

Angy sped forward and grabbed hold of one of the dark creatures. In just the next moment, it's body could be seen stabbed through a mettalic piece from the rubble up ahead.

Everyone swiftly sprung into action and dealt with the rest of the four dark creatures in the vicinity.

Vera eyes sprang open while she was still in Aildris grasp.

"They took him," She voiced.

"Took who?" Aildris inquired.

"Falco," Vera announced.

"What the hell?" Yonda said with a tone of frustration.

Everyone felt like the situation was going from bad to worse. Gustav was already missing and now some unknown dark creatures were said to have carted Falco's unconscious body away.

"Matilda!" Angy cried as she ran towards a particular direction and pulled a figure out of a small pile of rubble.

"Koorrh! Korrhh!" Matilda coughed out droplets of blood as the silvery patches across her skin began to slowly vanish.

E.E handed Angy a pill, who quickly made Matilda consume it.

Matilda's face which was initially ashen, slowly regained color as her eyes sprang open.

"Tell us everything that happened," Angy voiced the moment Matilda regained consciousness.

Matilda went on to explain that by the time they got here, the entire facility was already plagued by these unknown dark creatures. They had successfully managed to get their hands on Falco and took him out of where he was kept but Matilda and Vera intercepted them.

Matilda mentioned that amongst all the thousands of dark creatures wreaking havoc here, they had spotted one family figure.

"Captain Irand..." Matilda coughed twice after revealing the name.

"Vikrush Insa? That means he escaped when this whole ordeal began," The MBO general behind voiced with a troubled tone.

Matilda added that herself and Vera were no match for him. He gave off such intense energy that they felt they were fighting against someone of Gustav's calibre. Vikrush Insa managed to get away with Falco's unconscious body and now Deji was laying at the corner unable to gain consciousness.

Things were very the definition of worse.

"I need to find big brother immediately," Endric reminded them that the clock was ticking.

"We'll have to split up," Aildris voiced, "One group goes after Falco and the other goes in search of Gustav,"

"There is no need for that. I only need Vera," Endric shook his head before grabbing Vera by the hand.

"We'll find Gustav, the rest of you can go after Vikrush Insa," He added.

Vera looked up to stare at Endric's mature face and nodded in response.

"I want to come with," Angy said from the side.

"It's best you go with them. They need as much help as they can get," Endric shook his head before ascending with Vera.

Thwwisshhh~

Whitish streak tore through the sky and vanished instantly.

Angy gritted her teeth in frustration but she knew Endric was right. Falco had been captured but Gustav wasn't since this whole ordeal had not ended yet.

"Which direction did they head in?" Angy asked Matilda who had mostly recovered already.

#####

"Can you sense him now?" Endric asked Vera who was in his arms as they floated above the fifth disk.

"He is not here," Vera shook her head.

Twwhiisshh~

Endric blinked and appeared on the fourth disk next.

"What about now?" He inquired again.

She shook her head in response.

Twwwwhiisssh~

Endric blinked once more hoping she would be able to sense him when they arrived at the third disk. He was expending a lot of energy using blink at its full power continuously.

"How about now?" Endric inquired.

Vera shook her head once more.

Endric's face displayed a look of frustration as he looked upwards. Miss Aimee was currently on the second disk giving off light to barricade the entire planet. Although she couldn't send her senses to scan across the entire planet at this moment, she would have been able to sense it if Gustav was on the second disk.

The current predicament was an enigma to Endric as he wondered if Gustav had found himself in another unfortunate situation like before the Medallion Challenge.

"Wait..."

Endric was suddenly pulled out of his thoughts by Vera's voice.

"Huh?" Endric mumbled.

"I sense him..." Vera stated with a tone of enthusiasm.

"Where!?" Endric asked swiftly not caring about the fact that she was unable to sense him just a while ago.

"In that direct... huh... wait," She her finger which pointed at towards the southeast slowly lowered as her face was plagued with a look of confusion.

"What is it?" Endric inquired as he noticed her strange expression.

"I can't sense him anymore... its like he's no longer here," Vera answered.

"What do you mean!? You just said you sensed him," Endric's face darkened a bit as he yelled.

"I don't know... I just..." Vera mumbled.

"Did he leave?" Endric felt like something was wrong somewhere.

"Wait... I am sensing him.again... its like he just came back," Vera revealed.

"What in the world is going on?" Endric wondered with a look of confusion.

"And now he's gone again..." Vera announced before Endric could make sense of the situation.

"Direct me to where you sensed him," Endric instructed.

Vera nodded and fully pointed in the direction she initially wanted to.

Fwwwhisshhh~

The invisible board made of telekinesis cut swiftly across the air as it headed towards the south east.

...

"Elevora have you pinpointed his location?" Aildris questioned as the group made their way through a mob of people. The golden streets were full of people of different races.

The air was crowded with technological flying vehicles and saucers as well. With hindrance in the sky and on the ground, the group was having difficulty navigating a path.

"I can't find him," Elevora shook her head above. She was hundreds of feet above the ground so they were currently communicating through MBO communication device.

Aldris leapt from the top of one building to another, following after her purplish figure which was in mid air.

Angy on the other hand, blitz through the crowd beneath. She was moving a little slower than normal to avoid turning bumping into anyone by mistake but she was still moving the fastest regardless.

E.E was on the far west of the ninth disk, scanning from the top of a massive three thousand feet tall structure.

Fwwhii~

He jumped forward after a while and a vortex appeared beneath, instantly swallowing him up. He reappeared tens of thousands of feet away, beside three other earth participants.

"I know where Falco is," Gandalf the newly added teammates voiced through the comms.

"I can see them," He added.

"What? How do you know where they are?" Yonda yelled through the comms.

"That doesn't matter right now," Aildris stated before adding, "Gandalf, are you sure?"

"Yes, they are closing on the third disk heading for the second disk right now," Gandalf answered.

"That far?" Aildris had a conflicted look as he realised they must be very fast to have gotten to that distance already.

"E.E can you open a vortex to the second disk? We will intercept them there," Aildris instructed.

"Sure thing," E.E nodded before crossing his middle and index fingers.

Thrrriihhhhhh~

A pool of energy began gathering around him as his afro shook a little. This was the first time E.E would be opening a vortex that could cross such a far distance.

The distance between the ninth and second disk was over ten times farther than travelling from the earth to the moon.

It wasn't that E.E wasn't capable of this before but it would be at the risk of expending all of his bloodline energy.

Winds gathered and space collapsed around them as a large vortex slowly spiralled into existence.

Fhooommm~

It grew very large and everyone else quickly hurried towards E.E position and began getting in.

The MBO general and a few other MBO officers jumped in last before the vortex could close up completely.

#####

-Third Disk

In the eye of a region with glowing green rocks scattered across the place, a figure placed his hand on his chest with a distraught expression.

This figure kept glitching in and out of existence.