

ANCIENT TEARS BLOODLINE

Chapter 2 - Bloodline Inheritor

In the aftermath of the battle between the gods of the multiverses, stars exploded and triggered nearby planets to extinction.

Far away from that place was a habitual planet traveling aimlessly across the galaxy. This lively and usually radiant planet was called Rogue Planet.

The Blood of God spilled across the universe called Ancient Tears. A mysterious god-like aura radiated from its midst which would cause anyone to look at it with reverence.

The God Blood carried by a meteor eventually crosses a path with Rogue planet.

A meteor soared across the surface of the planet and soon reached a stretch of barren land where a hunter couple lived with their one-year-old child in a small hut.

Surrounding temperatures gradually started to increase and the air got extremely hot as the meteor neared the land. The meteor fell not too far from the couple, causing a huge explosion of fire that later turned into hot flowing lava.

The couple looked in the distance at the fast-approaching lava and knew in themselves that chances of running away or surviving were futile. The mother of the child looked down at her oblivious, cheerful baby with teary eyes, "Even if we die Zack, you have to live."

The child's father took the child and hoisted him up on a very large rock, "He should be fine here." The child's mother fell on her knees in tears and her husband took her in his arms. They stayed in each other's embrace by the rock as the lava edged closer to them.

The temperature of the rock increased as the lava flowed beneath it and the young baby on top started crying. Ancient blood rose from the scorched earth and immediately started searching for a body to inhabit. It quickly vanished as it entered the body of the small, crying child.

The blood separated into two parts, a fragment entered the boy's soul and the rest occupied his small, fragile body.

Occasionally missing content, please report errors in time.