

Chapter 257 Truth Behind the Car Acciden

Ryan sneered when he heard Amanda’s question, "I have already done my best by not sending you to the main street."

"What do you mean?" Amanda could not believe it and looked at Ryan in disbelief. He had snatched Roman's position and bought Monor family's company. Was he still not satisfied?

Ryan got up and opened the drawer of this table, taking out a piece of information in front of Amanda. He raised his hand and threw all the information on Amanda's face.

"It was my mother, who claimed to raise me for more than twenty years, who arranged a car accident and almost killed me."

"You. . . What do you mean? I don’t know what you are talking about." Amanda panicked when Ryan brought up the accident.

She had handled that matter cleanly back then. How could there be any evidence left behind?

"You don't know what I am talking?" Ryan sneered, "Back then, my car had its brakes cut off by someone. The brakes were malfunctioning before it collided with the car on the other side. Later on, I found out that the person who cut off my brake line was the butler of our Monor family, and most importantly that man was brought here by you from the Gills family. Besides you, who else can order the people brought by you around?"

Amanda's pupils constricted and her face turned pale. She looked at Ryan with a dumbfounded expression.

After the accident, she had already paid the housekeeper and personally helped him escape overseas. The butler had said that he would never come back in his lifetime again, so how could Ryan possibly know about this matter?

Ryan looked at Amanda’s face, which was changing color like a colorful palette and his thin lips curved into a cold smile.

"You don't have to look at me like that. The money you gave him has already been spent. Of course, he wants to come back and make another profit. Unfortunately, I met him when he came back. And he admitted everything in front of me."

Amanda fell to the ground after hearing that. She never thought that the butler would come back and more over he would bump into Ryan. Ryan actually had a chance to turn the tables.

"You. . . You. . ." Amanda trembled and could not speak.

"I did not send you to prison. Just take it as repayment for all the years of your care and upbringing."

When Ryan was young, he did not know that he was not born by Amanda. Seeing that she was so good to his brother, he was very envious. So he did everything the best and wanted to get her attention. Studies, completions, sports, in every possible field, he did his best and got the best position, just to get some affection from this woman, whom he called “mom” for twenty-five years.

He did not expect that in the end, it would all be a dream.

"You deserve it, you deserve it! Do you know how much I hate you? As long as you exist for a day, I will remember that my husband was with another woman. I am the eldest daughter of the Gills family, and I have endless glory. I never thought that marrying into the Monor family would have such a stain on my reputation. You look exactly the same as Layla. Do you know how much I hate that woman? I wish I could destroy your face every time I see you! Ryan, you bastard! Why didn't you die in that car accident?"

Amanda sat on the ground, crying and cursing. She blamed all the grievances she had suffered all these years on Ryan.

Ryan closed his eyes and shook his head, totally not putting Amanda's curses in his heart.

Amanda sat on the ground, crying and laughing like a lunatic. "Do you know how happy I was when I heard that you had a car accident? As long as you die, everything will be as I wish. If I knew after surviving, you would be like this, I would have taken off your oxygen mask and kill you by my own hands!"

However. . . When Amanda saw Ryan lying on the bed with a pale face and an oxygen mask, she actually softened her heart and begged the heavens in her heart not to take Ryan away.
