

Chapter 369 The Island Is Destroyed

Ryan came out of the Foster family mansion with a dark face.

His whole body was emitting a biting cold aura. His expression was so gloomy and frightening that no one dared to approach him.

Nobody even breathed a word.

The sky had already turned dark. Under the street lamp, his face appeared even more terrifying.

Xavier and Michelle stood behind silently. Whatever happened caught everyone off guard. They did not know what do to.

Jackson came out and saw Ryan’s cold face. He knew that Ryan was very worried about Elena.

Elena’s whereabouts was unknown. From Spencer’s words, he also seemed to not know about Elena.

Jackson came to Ryan’s side. He thought for a moment and said with a serious tone, “Ryan, if sister-in-law did not take Spencer’s help, she couldn’t leave easily. It hasn’t been long since she left the headquarters. She must be somewhere nearby. I have some friends in the traffic department. I’ll go and look for sister-in-law with them. You also inform the headquarters to look for sister-in-law. The entire Western Europe is our territory. We’ll definitely find her soon.”

Other than these words, Jackson did not know how to console the man.

Ryan was expressionless. He did not react hearing Jackson’s words. It was hard to tell his thoughts from his emotionless face.

Jackson sighed. He could understand Ryan’s current mood. He patted Ryan’s shoulder and turned around to Xavier.

After telling Xavier to take care of Ryan, Jackson got into a car and let to find Elena.

Ryan stood in front of the Foster family villa motionlessly without any intention of leaving.

Xavier got very anxious when he saw Ryan like this. He looked at the time. It was already past 11 o’ clock in the evening.

They went to deal with Clarence in the afternoon. Elena went missing afterwards and they came to the Foster family mansion to look for Spencer.

In all these running around, it’s already near midnight now.

In front of the Foster family mansion, Ryan was standing as silent as a statue.

With Xavier’s understanding of Ryan, he should have turned the entire Western Europe upside down in order to find Elena. But Ryan was unusually silent.

Xavier could not take it anymore. He called out, “Mr. Monor?”

However, he got no answer.

After a long time, Ryan turned around and glanced at the Foster family mansion. His dark eyes flashed.

Spencer took a private plane and went to the place he had sent Elena before.

Ryan had discovered his island. Therefore, in order to avoid Ryan, Spencer contacted one of his close friends and rent a whole island. He sent Elena’s children and Paul there.

Ryan would definitely investigate him again, but Ryan would not doubt that he had sent Elena to a rented island. Even if he did, Spencer would have sent Elena and her children to another place afterwards.

Everything was arranged perfectly, but now Spencer did not know why he couldn’t contact anyone in the island.

By the time Spencer and James reached the island, it was already dawn the next day.

Spencer had never visited this place before. But his friend had given him an outline of the island. He followed the map and went to the manor which was in the northern direction of the island.

Unlike his island, the manor in this island was situated at the edge of the sea.

There were no cars so it took them some time to reach there. But when they finally arrived, they were shocked by what they saw.

The island was filled with people, but those were not theirs.

There were many people wearing black bodyguard suits and carrying weapons standing everywhere.

What’s more shocking was that there was nothing in front of them. The whole manor was destroyed.

It seemed that they used grenade to bring down the building. Because the manor was ruined to the point that it was impossible to tell there was a building here before.

Seeing this, Spencer quickly ran over. But he was immediately stopped by one of the men. The man shouted fiercely. “Who dares to come here? Hurry up and get lost!”

“Where are the people in this manor?” James asked.

"They naturally went to where they should go." One of the men said impatiently.

“What did you say? Who allowed you to step in this place? This is my island!” Spencer shouted at the bodyguard.

“Your island? What proof do you have to claim it yours?” The bodyguard was unmoved.

Spencer glared at the bodyguard. Without giving any answer, he pushed the bodyguard and tried to go near the manor.

However, a shotgun was pointed at Spencer in the next second. The bodyguard did not let them continue forward. “If you dare to take another step forward, don't blame us for being impolite. Every island and every inch of land in Western Europe is owned by the royal family. This island comes under the royal family. You unruly people dare to take over the property of royal family! You better go away right now. Otherwise, only your dead body will leave this place.”

Spencer wanted to argue with them, but James pulled him back. There were only two of them while the other party were in groups with weapons and armaments. They were no match for them.

The two brothers had no choice but to walk away.

Spencer kicked the ground in anger. He did not expect this island to come under the royal family.

This manor had already been destroyed. If Elena’s children were inside, then wouldn’t they. . .

Spencer did not even dare to think about it.

“It’s all my fault! I shouldn’t have sent them here!” Spencer grabbed his hair in annoyance. He really regretted for not investigating this place beforehand.

Elena had entrusted him with her children. If something happened to the twins, how would he face Elena?

James saw Spencer’s appearance and did not know how to comfort him.

He was about to say something when he suddenly caught a glimpse of something.

“Brother, look over there!” James shouted.

Spencer looked at the direction James was pointing. He vaguely saw a boat moving forward on the vast sea.

Spencer observed carefully and saw that the man standing on the boat was Paul.

Spencer was overjoyed. If Paul got out of here safely, Elena and her children would also be with him.

“Paul!” He shouted for Paul.

Paul, who was on the boat, suddenly heard someone calling his name and turned around. He did not expect to see the Foster brothers here.

Paul immediately ordered his people to turn the boat around and pulled the two young masters on to the boat.

Spencer glanced at the few people present. Everyone was injured with blood gushing out their bodies. Even Paul was heavily injured with his head broken.

Everyone was in a sorry state.

It was evident that it was a sudden attack, otherwise, Paul and his other subordinates, who were skilled combatants, wouldn’t be injured like this.

“Mr. Foster, why are you here?” Paul asked in surprise.

Spencer pulled Paul’s cloths and asked impatiently, “Where is Elena? Where are the twins?”

“Isn’t Miss Lewis in Western Europe?” Paul was dumbfounded.

“I sent her here yesterday! Where is she? Why are you guys here?” Spencer grew even more anxious.

Hearing this, Paul was shocked. “What did you say? Miss Lewis came here? Our people saw that someone was coming to attack. Before we could even react, those people started to destroy the manor. Half of our people died. We found this boat on the last moment and decided to escape. But we did not see Miss Lewis during this time.”
