

Chapter 418 Something Happened To Tyrone

Sabrina returned and submitted a resignation letter to Liliana, who promptly approved it. Liliana expressed her regret, acknowledging Sabrina as a rare and excellent photographer. Liliana conveyed helplessness in the face of the recent incident but tried to make amends by recommending a friend to Sabrina.

Liliana's friend held the esteemed position of editor-in-chief within a magazine company and often collaborated with photographers.

Sabrina was grateful for Liliana's support and connected with Liliana's friend on WhatsApp.

Perhaps Liliana had mentioned Sabrina to the editor-in-chief, who responded kindly and offered to recommend Sabrina for any suitable job openings.

After leaving Saleel Studio, Sabrina learned some history about the Wilson family.

Originating in the nineteenth century, the Wilson family held a prominent position as a wealthy household in Philade. Despite facing a period of decline during the scientific and technological evolution phase, the family's fortune took a turn when one of its leaders returned from studying abroad. Implementing vigorous reforms to align with the times, the Wilson family experienced a resurgence and regained its affluence.

As the head of the Wilson family, Keilani's father held significant authority, which allowed Keilani to have a certain level of freedom to do as she pleased.

This time, Keilani's attempt to tarnish Sabrina's reputation

Sabrina needed the backing of a large corporation to deal with any issues caused by Keilani.

Without such support, her future in any studio or company seemed bleak.

However, before Sabrina could figure out what to do next, she received two private orders to deal with. One was from an international student, and the other was Bella's friend.

Despite being busy with these private orders, Sabrina kept an eye out for other opportunities and was fortunate enough to receive a chance to work on a business order.

Until now, Sabrina had only worked on private shoots, but she was determined not to pass up the opportunity to work on a business order.

The business order was for the Daily Company which needed a new product advertising commercial. This type of shoot differed from the portrait shoots Sabrina was used to, but she had some experience directing commercial shoots during her time at the Blakely Group. Although she had never shot one, she felt confident in her abilities.

On the day of the shooting test, Sabrina arrived at the location provided by the other party. The receptionist showed her to the lounge next to the studio upstairs and offered her a coffee, saying, "The studio is busy now. Please wait. Someone will call you when it's time to shoot."

Sabrina nodded in acknowledgment. "Okay, thank you."

After the receptionist left, Sabrina's gaze wandered around the well-decorated lounge. The eastern wall adorned a poster featuring an actress who appeared to be the company's spokesperson. The actress sported a radiant smile as she gracefully held the company's product in her hand while applying the product to her face.

Meanwhile, the western wall showcased an array of the company's flagship products, each vying for attention.

The company was a well-established local enterprise in Philade, and its products ubiquitously lined the shelves in everyday supermarkets.

There were several rows of magazines on the shelf beside the sofa. Sabrina flipped through one that detailed the company's history, founding, and founders.

After reading a few pages, Sabrina replaced the magazine and retrieved her phone.

As she navigated through various apps, a shocking news caught her attention. "Tyrone Blakely, chairman of the Blakely Group, arrested on suspicion of economic crimes."

This news left Sabrina stunned, and she found it difficult to believe. What happened? It seemed unfathomable.

Subconsciously, she clicked on one of the news articles, but it only provided a simple description of the events, lacking further details.

Despite the limited information, this shocking news had become a trending topic on Twitter.

Sabrina found herself grappling with disbelief.

It wasn't a matter of lingering emotions for Tyrone. Instead, she was astounded at the revelation of his incarceration for economic crimes.

The questions echoed in her mind. How did this happen? Did Tyrone truly succumb to committing a financial crime? Why would he do that?

"Hello, you're here to take the photographer's test, right? Are you Sabrina? Please follow me."

Sabrina was in deep contemplation when she heard an unexpected voice that startled her.

Her thoughts were in disarray. But for now, she had to set them aside and focus on the test at hand.

Sabrina was required to capture a total of sixteen photos.

To begin with, Sabrina carefully reviewed the product introduction, allowing her to devise a tailored shooting plan based on the product's key selling points. Subsequently, she instructed the assistant to arrange props to complement the photography.

The shooting lasted over four hours, during which Sabrina meticulously executed her plan.

Following the shoot, Sabrina transferred the photos to the computer and performed basic Photoshop touch-ups. She then presented the final photos to the director, explaining her shooting method and creative vision.

After an additional hour, the test concluded, and Sabrina left the company feeling relieved.

Sabrina took a deep breath and retrieved her phone, dialing the number for the Blakely family.

Given that Tyrone was now the chairman of the Blakely Group, any adversity that befalls Tyrone would have significant repercussions for the entire Blakely family.

Even the slightest misstep could lead to the downfall of the Blakely family.

Tyrone had made it abundantly clear that he no longer considered Sabrina a member of the Blakely family and would not provide her with any support. He emphasized that even if the Blakely family suffered a downfall, it would have no bearing on her.

Despite this, Sabrina had stayed with the Blakely family for ten years, and it was due to Tyrone's grandpa's hard work and dedication that the company was a success. It would be a great shame if all of that effort were to go to waste.

Sabrina was concerned about the potential impact on Wanda and Jennie.

It was the housemaid who answered the call. She informed Sabrina that Wanda and Jennie were away on a trip, and she was unsure when they would return.

Sabrina hung up the phone and breathed a sigh of relief.

It seemed that Tyrone had anticipated the potential disaster and spared them by sending Wanda and Jennie away in advance.

However, something didn't add up. If Tyrone had sensed the danger beforehand, why didn't he take steps to prevent or mitigate the threat ahead?

Sabrina shook her head, attempting to clear her thoughts. She recognized that the situation with Tyrone was beyond her control and not her responsibility.

Her primary concern was the safety and well-being of Wanda and Jennie.

As for Tyrone, Sabrina acknowledged that his fate was in his own hands. Despite any inclination to help, she knew her limitations in influencing his circumstances.

In the evening, during a conversation with Bettie, the topic of Tyrone's situation surfaced. Bettie probed Sabrina with concern, to which Sabrina responded with a chuckle, "I did see the news but don't worry. His business has nothing to do with me. I won't do anything stupid."

"Good! You should maintain that mindset." Bettie was relieved.

Two days later, Sabrina received the gratifying news that she had successfully passed the test with the Daily Company.

The next phase involved collaborative work with two other photographers to capture the advertising content for the new products, encompassing photos, endorsements, short video clips, and more, until the products were ready for release.

A successful outcome would likely lead to continued collaboration with the company on additional products.

Sabrina was elated by it.

It was her inaugural business order, so Sabrina was pleased with the opportunity.

Sabrina was aware of the consistently high standards associated with business orders and, by successfully passing the test, validated her skills and capabilities.

She planned to become a photographer in this regard and work as a private photographer during her free time.

Bella was thrilled for Sabrina and invited her out to celebrate.

A few days earlier, Bella discovered that Sabrina had resigned from Saleel Studio. Bella inquired about the reason, and Sabrina briefly explained without delving into details.

Bella felt sorry for Sabrina and inquired about the identity of the woman who had slandered her. Although Bella was eager to seek retribution on Sabrina's behalf, Sabrina declined to provide her with the woman's name.

Bella suggested that Collen should approach William to seek justice for Sabrina, but Sabrina intervened and prevented them from doing so.

Sabrina was aware of William's connection to Blayze, and if she wanted to address the issue, she could reach out to Blayze. However, she decided against this approach, preferring not to involve herself in any potential conflict with the Wilson family. Sabrina had no desire to cause trouble for Bella.

They gathered at a club that evening, marking Sabrina's first visit to such a venue.

Alongside Bella, two of her friends, both of whom Sabrina had previously met, were also in attendance.

The atmosphere was lively, with the group engaging in

Bella briefly stepped out to answer a call. When she returned, she was irritated and complained, "She is so annoying! Wherever I go, I seem to run into that stupid pig!"

One of Bella's friends, Daisy, asked with a smile, "Keilani again? You called her a stupid pig. Why are you still annoyed at her then?"
