

Chapter 430 She Will Always Be His!

Just like Sabrina had guessed, Tom was Damon's alias. She saw Damon's figure when she went to the magazine company that day.

At that time, she just had a feeling that the person she saw a glimpse of was someone she knew, but she couldn't confirm it.

Later, after her chat with Eddie, she concluded that if Tyrone truly wanted to protect her and was just keeping a distance from her for her own good, he would definitely send someone to follow her around and ensure her safety.

Sabrina remembered Tom, who helped her expose Evan's plot, and then she thought of the man who helped her get rid of her annoying next-door neighbor. And there was Eddie's revelation as well as the familiar figure she caught. She somehow found a connection between all of these events in her mind.

She believed that if Tyrone assigned a guard to watch over her, that person would tail her whenever she ventured out after dark to ensure her safety.

While she was discussing with the policeman at the police station moments earlier, she stood near the window, surveying her surroundings. In the distance, she spotted a familiar figure.

The hooligans that approached her came at a convenient time. Seeing her chance to confirm her guess, Sabrina irritated them, thereby forcing Damon to rush to her rescue.

Since his identity had been discovered, Damon flicked his nose and asked, "How did you know it was me? Did Eddie tell you?"

"I figured it out by myself. Allow me to treat you with a cup of coffee."

In a cafe nearby, with her arms crossed over her chest, Sabrina leaned against the back of the chair and said, "Come on, tell me what happened."

"What else could it be? Haven't you figured it out?" Damon spread his hands in a gesture of helplessness.

"Did Tyrone ask you to come here?"

"Who else could it be?"

After confirming that Tom was Damon, Sabrina began to believe what Eddie said.

She wondered what was on Tyrone's mind. He must be crazy. How could he choose to disassociate himself from her like that?

"Have you been following me since I arrived in Philade?"

"I arrived a day after you."

"Tyrone was accused of economic crime. Do you know what happened?"

"Someone must have framed him. He is incredibly intelligent. If he actually made such a mistake, he would have already handled it. There's no way he would just sit around and wait for someone to come arrest him."

Sabrina nodded. It clicked. Then, it must have been Blayze's uncle's doing.

"Do you know why someone would want to frame him?"

"I don't know."

"Why wouldn't you know about that?"

"Well, do you know something?" Damon challenged.

Sabrina stuttered, unable to reply. She raised her mug of coffee to her lips and took a small sip. The room was quiet for a few

"It's useless for you to go back now."

"I know." Sabrina just wanted to go back and head to the police station to mock Tyrone.

When Sabrina returned home, she lay on the bed, tossing and turning.

She didn't expect that what Eddie said was true. Tyrone asked Galilea to act out a drama with him just to force her to leave the country and distance herself from him.

Sabrina had no idea what Galilea had demanded from Tyrone before she agreed to put on an act with Tyrone. What was on Tyrone's mind? How could he make such a decision without consulting her? The way he uttered those harsh words made her fall for them. Tyrone was such a great actor! Sabrina gritted her teeth.

When Sabrina finally got the agent's feedback, she quickly handled those photos and sent the updated photos two days later.

This time, the agent didn't request any further modifications to the photos.

Sabrina also sent those photos to the editor-in-chief.

The editor-in-chief and the agent had a lengthy discussion about which photos to choose.

The editor-in-chief had the daunting task of selecting both visually stunning photos and appropriate ones under the agent's preferences. However, they didn't reach an agreement, which resulted in them spending a long time combing through the photos repeatedly.

After hours, the editor-in-chief was losing her patience. "Stop talking. Just use these five photos I have chosen."

"Okay. Well... But that one is very beautiful..." the agent still wanted to protest.

"Shut up!" the editor-in-chief snapped.

"Alright. By the way, the photographer is highly skilled. I'd like to work with her again if I have the opportunity." The agent was pleased with Sabrina. When he showed the photos to the actor, the actor was satisfied with them.

The editor-in-chief remarked with a smile, "You know how picky I am when it comes to work. You can trust my taste."

Then, the agent went to Sabrina and asked about how much she wanted to get paid.

The amount charged for the business photos would depend on the quantity of photos taken.

The combined salary from the two business contracts exceeded that of a one-month salary at Saleel Studio.

Furthermore, Sabrina had just started her photography career and was charging a low price. If she were to become well-known in the future, she could easily increase her rates and make more money.

However, Sabrina bought a flight ticket back after she finished her work here. She didn't tell anyone except Damon.

She had asked Damon not to tell Tyrone about it.

Sabrina only took a small bag with her, carrying her essentials such as her mobile phone, charger, ID card, and passport. She traveled light without any luggage to weigh her down.

After disembarking from the plane, Sabrina hailed a taxi and went to the police station where Tyrone was being detained. She retrieved the necessary documents she had prepared for her visitation application.

The policeman took her to the visiting room.

After a while, Tyrone was led into the visiting room by the policeman.

At the sight of Sabrina, Tyrone was stunned. His heart galloped uncontrollably and he had to fist his bound hands to control his excitement.

He didn't expect to see Sabrina here. Didn't she leave the country? Why was she here all of a sudden?

Sabrina studied Tyrone. It had been almost two months since they last saw each other. He looked a little gaunt and disheveled.

Tyrone exhaled deeply and took a seat across from Sabrina. He fixed her with a steely gaze and asked impatiently, "Why are you here?"

Sabrina composed herself and turned to face him, a sneer forming on her lips as she declared, "I'm only here to mock you!"

Stunned, Tyrone gaped at her.

Sabrina lifted her chin defiantly and continued, "So, I've come to see you, the chairman of the Blakely Group and the devious man who has deceived me repeatedly. What brings you here?"

Mixed feelings overwhelmed Tyrone. It was the first time Sabrina had openly mocked him in such a way. The girl who had once been obedient was now looking at him arrogantly. She must hate him so much. If he were her, he would feel the same way.

Although he had expected this result when he carried out his plan, Tyrone still couldn't help but feel a pang of heartbreak.

The pain in his heart was so intense that it was hard to catch his breath. His heart felt bitter.

However, he couldn't afford to show his feelings or appear hurt.

Tyrone pressed his lips together in a tight line and said with a cold edge to his voice, "Sabrina, don't get too comfortable. The investigation has not been concluded yet, but you are already eager to add insult to injury. When I do get out, I will have to teach you a lesson!"

"Oh, I'm so scared!" Then, Sabrina sneered, "You want to teach me a lesson? Let's talk about it when you come out. By the way, what happened to you now makes me understand one thing."

"What?"

"God is smart."

Again, Tyrone was left astonished.

"By the way, I forgot to mention that I have a boyfriend in Philade. He is kind and thoughtful. Don't worry about taking care of your grandma and Jennie. I can handle it. Just make sure you take care of yourself while you're here." With that, Sabrina gracefully hung up the phone and beamed at him. Then, she got up from her seat and left.

Tyrone's ears were buzzing. He was so shocked he couldn't do anything but stare at her empty seat.

Sabrina just said she had a boyfriend in Philade... It was impossible. How could it be... But why would she lie to him since she came here to mock him? So, she really had a boyfriend.

Tyrone was heartbroken.

A moment later, a hint of cruelty flashed through his eyes. So what if she had a boyfriend? She would be his all her life!

He had to get out of here as soon as possible and teach her so -called boyfriend a lesson.
