

Chapter 7233

Victoria had a bad feeling.

It wasn't that she didn't believe in the Grand Elder's strength,

Recently, she had been very unlucky against the mysterious enemy.

In countless secret battles,

She always took the losses in countless secret battles.

Not only had all four earls been defeated,

But even the assassin's strongholds had been wiped out one after another.

What was most infuriating was that she had sent out a lot of manpower and resources to search everywhere,

But had found no clues.

This time, Brovnen had clearly gotten into a fight in Antarctica,

So she instinctively felt that he was probably in grave danger.

After all, she didn't know how many people the enemy had,

But she knew Brovnen's situation very well.

He went to Antarctica alone,

And had almost been hunted down and surrounded by the US military recently.

These circumstances indicated that his situation was likely to be fraught with difficulties,

And now, fighting with other cultivators, his chances of survival were slim.

At this moment, Revendor said with a puzzled expression,

"Lord, the Grand Elder went to Antarctica alone,"

"And even had the entire Japanese scientific expedition team help him explore Antarctica."

"There are already many suspicious points here."

"Now it has been proven that there is more than one cultivator in Antarctica than the Grand Elder."

"Do you think there is something really good in there that attracted them?"

Victoria nodded, her expression solemn, and said,

"You are right."

"Brovnen must know some kind of legend about Antarctica."

"And it is very likely that he knew it before he went into seclusion."

"That's why he chose Antarctica without hesitation as soon as I sent them out to seek opportunities."

As she spoke, she continued to analyze,

"It seems that he is not the only one who knows this legend."

"There are other cultivators as well."

At this point, she was already feeling quite anxious.

She knew that there must be a great secret in Antarctica,

But what exactly that secret was,

She was still completely clueless.

She couldn't wait to know what was attracting Brovnen to Antarctica,

And what was attracting the other cultivators?

Revendor noticed Victoria's doubts and quickly stepped forward,

Asking in a low voice,

"Lord,"

"Should we send the other two elders to Antarctica to investigate?"

Victoria frowned, pondered for a moment, then shook her head, saying,

"No, I suspect Brovnen is likely dead."

"Sending them there would only disrupt morale."

"Besides, it's difficult to break through the Roaring Forties now."

"Even if we go, we should wait until after the Antarctic winter."

"Remember, do not reveal this to anyone."

"If Brovnen doesn't return by the end of the Antarctic winter,"

"I will go to Antarctica myself."

"If he is indeed dead,"

"I will announce to the other two elders that he has defected,"

"And say nothing else."

Revendor's expression hardened,

And he immediately said respectfully,

"Yes, Lord, I understand."

Victoria sighed, somewhat dejected, and said,

"Alright, you can go now."

"Let me have some peace and quiet."

"Your subordinate obeys!"

Revendor respectfully withdrew, and Victoria let out a long, helpless sigh, rubbing her nose.

Although she appeared calm and collected in front of Revendor,

She was actually very worried.

Brovnen was the strongest person in her organization after her.

And his strength was formidable.

If he were to die, it would not only be a great loss to the Warriors Den,

But also prove that other cultivators in the world are even stronger than him.

The only uncertainty was whether the cultivator who fought him in Antarctica was the same person or from the same camp as the cultivator who had been secretly opposing her all along.

If so, it would be adding insult to injury!
