

Chapter 7305

Yanni bid Rachel farewell and turned to leave the four-person dormitory.

As she left, she didn't even glance at the other three kneeling on one knee.

After the four respectfully saw her off,

The other three immediately approached Rachel and knelt respectfully on one knee again.

One of the girls said humbly, "Congratulations, Miss Getty."

"On your outstanding contributions!"

"We hope Miss Getty will continue to mentor us in the future!"

Although they were all scholars,

Since Rachel got together with Robert Routhchild,

The other three had immediately become her foils,

Her supporting characters at Stanford.

They had previously harbored some resentment,

But now they realized the vast difference between them.

Perhaps no other female scholar would receive such treatment from Rachel.

They were no longer on the same level.

At this moment, envy and jealousy vanished,

Replaced only by admiration.

Rachel understood this, so she said to the three,

"Get up. As long as you cooperate with me,"

"I will definitely help you and your families gain more benefits in the future."

The three were immediately thrilled and thanked her in unison.

Rachel was excited and wanted to tell her mother the good news immediately,

So she told the three,

"I'm going back to my room to make a call."

"Don't disturb me."

The three nodded respectfully and watched Rachel go back to her room.

Once back in her room, Rachel immediately called her mother.

On the phone, she told her mother about the reward she received,

The dragon-patterned bronze talisman,

And the six-month supply of antidote.

Her mother remained silent for a long time on the other end of the line,

But Rachel could hear her mother sobbing.

Their lineage had endured hundreds of years of hardship,

And today they had finally seen the light at the end of the tunnel.

Because the Getty family was unaware of the mother and daughter's true parentage,

The mother dared not be too agitated.

She could only hide in her room, softly sobbing as she told Rachel,

"Rachel, you must persevere."

"At this rate, if you can marry Robert,"

"Your child might never have to be a scholar again!"

The Warriors Den's aim in infiltrating top families wasn't to transform their descendants into scholars.

They understood better than anyone that a family would truly value mixed-race offspring.

Therefore, Rachel marrying into the family as an undercover agent was enough.

If they risked transforming Rachel's child into a scholar,

And the Routhchild family discovered this,

Not only would the child be abandoned,

But Rachel would be eliminated immediately.

Although the Routhchild family didn't possess the Warriors Den's power,

Their methods were no less ruthless;

Otherwise, they wouldn't have remained standing.

Her mother was obsessed with ending the scholar's life.

She felt that if Rachel no longer had to be a scholar,

Then the DNA of this lineage could be passed down without worry,

And no one would be coerced by the Den anymore—this was liberation of the bloodline.

But Rachel knew in her heart that,

Charlie not only could ensure that her descendants would no longer be scholars,

But also that she and her mother would no longer be scholars.
