"Forget it. It was a pretty weird night. In a good way, I think, but it might take a while to really wrap my mind around it."

"No shit. I guess I just wasn't ready to see Jill like that," he sighed.

He continued, a little awkwardly, "We've got to go early. I checked my messages once I had cell reception, and some crap came up at work. I've got to f

Suddenly she just sat bolt upright, taking me deeply. "Wow! I just had the most incredible vision." She looked around to see if our spouses were paying attention. She sounded as excited as a school girl.

First, let me say that the names of the women involved have been changed to protect their identity. Should this story get out, it's not right that their reputations should be ruined, over a required class project.

Second, my story may be more torrid and salacious than would be normally acceptable. In some parts it is quite explicit about activities

Several times I came within a gnat's ass of interrupting, and making them aware of my presence. There have been moments when I wish I had. Those moments are few and far-in-between. Most of the time, as warped as it may seem to you, the reader, I thank my lucky stars that I stayed hidden and kept my trap shut. I give thanks to the gods of chance, th

I thought that was bullshit. She was using that as an excuse. I was good enough for the moment, but she was interviewing others to see who would be an upgrade and take my place. Three weeks before summer break after my sophomore year, Rachel and I stopped seeing each other.

Then there had been Courtney (also not her real name). Courtney was a quiet incoming freshman, who always had her nose in the books. She was in two of my classes, and we ended up both trying to get the same book for one of our papers. I had it first, but she seemed nice, and I knew she was smart. Real smart, to be in some of the classes she was in. So I told her we could share.

We did an all-nighter in the library, barely speaking except for the work. I snuck in a snack in my backpack, and we shared it. She had chocolate. We both got A's. When the next assigned paper came, we just looked at each other. We met in our same place in the lower stack of the library, combining our reference resources. She had brought a picnic. I had managed to get my hands on two wine-coolers.

So I explained. I told her what I'd accidentally overheard. How I had found out the ugly truth.

She was quiet. "You're in Dallas, aren't you?"

"Prosper, north of Dallas," I told her.

"Listen Sweetie, I'm in west Ft. Worth, less than an hour from you. Could we get together tomorrow? I think you and I need to have a heart-to-heart conversation, and I

Her lips parted as I slid my finger inside of her. I pumped it back and forth, listening to the wet sound. "Very."

"Anything else you can think of?" Her voice was soft, almost pleading.

I kissed her soft lips, and her tongue pierced my mouth eagerly. "You turn red sometimes. Like now."

"What do I want, Travis? What do I need from you?"

I moved

I slid two fingers in as deeply as I could. "Curl them up like your trying to pet the topside, with just your fingertips."

I did as she asked. "Longer movements," she said, wiggling her hips a little. After a few more times she smiled. "Right there, try that a while."

It was more difficult, I felt like I was straining my fingers, but she seemed to

It wasn't going to be that night. It was the last day of classes. There was supposed to be a big party at one of the houses, and Teri said she'd be coming home late. I guess she was going to try what Mom had taught her with Kyle. I'll be honest, the idea pissed me off a little.

I'm not warped or anything. My sister deserved better, that's all. She

She took my hands in hers. "Maybe I expect too much of you," she whispered. "You've been the rock around here ever since your father passed. We need you. Teri's having a difficult time. The last thing I need is to worry about you. Please don't drive if you're drinking. Give me a call, or call Teri. We'll come get you. Try not to have too much to dr
