

129 Chapter 129

Kate's gaze darkened when she saw the phone in Erin's hand. She was on it again, threatening Kate by telling lies to their mother, so she'd get a small heart attack that might be fatal because she had a weak heart and a constantly weakened body. 1

Kate didn't understand how Erin became this cruel to their mother. Erin never had to feel any grievance, except when Kate reported her father, who ended up with him spending time in jail, breaking their family apart in the end.

She felt guilty for ruining their family. Kate understood that Erin needed to be comforted the most since she was the youngest, so Kate tried her best to fulfill any demand that Erin wanted, whether it was to do an easy task, such as bringing her a glass of water, to something harder like doing her homework or giving Kate's part-time salary for Erin because she wanted to buy a new toy. 2

Kate spoiled her back then to compensate for the broken family, but she then came to the realization that Erin had been spoiled rotten by the time she was in high school.

Erin became a mean girl that everybody was scared of, and she bullied a lot of students.

But no matter how often their mother got called to the school for Erin's misdemeanor, she'd always get out scot-free because their mother would always try to save Erin no matter what.

'After all, she has always been the golden child...' Kate thought. Since Erin was just a toddler during their parents' divorce, their mother latched on to the toddler as an emotional crutch while completely ignoring Kate, who had destroyed their family and reputation. 3

'In the end, my mother and I are both at fault for raising Erin like this. She turns from such a sweet little girl into a spoiled, bitchy monster that would stop at nothing until she gets what she wants,' Kate grieved in her heart.

"So, what do you think, sis? Do you want to let me into your apartment, or do you want your mother to die of a heart attack?" Erin taunted. She made that exaggerated shocking face to taunt her even further, "Oh no, what would people say if Mrs. Hilda Ross, the old widow of that perverted priest died out of heart attack because her daughter abused her own poor little sister?" 1

"Maybe they will condemn her, saying that she deserves to die horribly because her ex-husband touched so many little girls for his evil desire," Erin chuckled. "Or maybe they will condemn you too, saying that you're evil, just like our father, hihi~."

Erin noticed the heaviness in Kate's expression. Her taunt seemed to work because Kate had that expression as if she couldn't wait to kill her.

Erin loved seeing that expression on Kate's face. It had become her habit to torment her sister so she could see that angry face. It was fun to see and even funnier to tease! 1

"Meanwhile, me? People will see me as a pitiful beauty who got bullied by her sister and lost her mother. Ah, I'm so sad, wuwuwu..." Erin faked her cries to the point that she actually had tears in the corner of her eyes. She looked so convincing, acting as a poor woman, even though she was the vilest bitch Kate ever saw in her life. 3

Kate clenched her fist. She tried to regulate her breath as she got worked up and said, "Fine, you can come in, Erin." 2

Erin stopped her fake crying act and followed Kate, who unlocked the door with a card and went in.

Erin closed the door behind her as she entered the apartment. She followed her sister, who was silent the whole time.

Erin wondered if she might have taunted her sister too far, which made her want to taunt her even more!

"You know, Sis. I wish you're not a barren bitch sometimes," Erin said out of the blue. "I mean, it'd be funny to see you getting pregnant and then hyperventilate because I torment you too much. You might be under too much stress and then... plop!"

"You might get miscarriage because of stress and your fetus might just fall out of your vagina, hihhi!" Erin giggled as she found that image to be really funny. "I bet you will die of a heart attack because of that fetus. But oh well... you won't be able to do that since you're just a barren bitch, right?" 2

Kate's body trembled as she actually began to imagine that situation. She was so angry that she almost lost it and lunged at Erin. Just the idea of losing her baby almost made her go crazy.

Kate ignored her sister and continued walking until they were in the living room. She then halted her step and asked, with her back facing Erin, "What do you want from me, Erin?"

"Oh~ I'm glad that you finally know your place, sis. I know that you could be counted on whenever I'm in a bad situation," Erin giggled.

"Oh, what should I do without you, my dependable big sister." 2

"Just say it, Erin. Stop trying to make me angry," Kate said curtly.

"Gee, okay, so it's about Henry and Michael at work," Erin said. "I know that they are already in my grasp. They are crazy over me!"

"Isn't that good?" Kate sneered. "You want the attention of all men around you, right?"

"Yup, it's good. But then I realized that they're still prioritizing work over me," Erin rolled her eyes. "Can you imagine that? They have an absolutely beautiful girl waiting for them to fuck, but they choose work over me? Ugh!" 3

"I know that you're the Chief Editor, so you naturally have a very strong position in the company, right? After all, you ran that company for months just to keep it afloat," Erin grinned as she finally mentioned her intention, "Sis, I want you to force them to give all their time for me, and if they refuse to do so, then you should threaten to resign so they will comply." 4