Chapter 106 His concern (6)

PEI Munian had strong self-control since she was young. As the successor of the PEI family, the first thing she had to learn was to control her emotions. This way, she would not let others see through her thoughts and lead her by the nose.

However, in front of su Wanwan, for the first time, he experienced what it meant to be unable to control his emotions. He knew that the road ahead might be a bottomless abyss, but he was still like a moth flying into the fire.

Before he went to the SU family to visit Su Wanwan, he still retained a bit of sobriety and rationality.

But when he saw her lying on the bed in a daze from her illness, her mouth was still unconsciously muttering his name. She even hugged him and told him a lot of her thoughts in his ear.

That day, she did not say that she liked him, but every word she said was like the most beautiful words of love.

At that moment, his heart had completely fallen for her.

His arms held her tightly in front of him. He said, su Wan, as long as you have a part of your heart, I will not turn back!

Su Wanwan was sick for a full seven days. He accompanied her the whole time and her hand was always holding onto his clothes. Every time she was injected, she subconsciously shrank into his arms. He simply hugged her and helped her breathe gently when she felt pain.

Just like now.

The time he spent with su Wanwan was actually very, very short, so short that he didn't know why he loved her so deeply.

A casual movement from her could set off huge waves in his heart.

When su Wanwan fell asleep, she felt as if her whole body was put into a stove. Her body was so hot that it was about to melt. Her body struggled involuntarily, wanting to break free from the thick blanket wrapped around her body.

But she just broke out half of her shoulder and was not able to feel the cold. The next second, her shoulder was covered again. Su Wan frowned in dissatisfaction and continued to break free, but the result was the same as before. No matter where she broke away from, she was quickly covered back.

Su Wanwan's temper also rose. A sick person is sensitive and fragile. When she was awake, there were already so many repressed things. Now that she was sick, why couldn't she indulge a little?

Su Wanwan's hands and feet suddenly exerted force and instantly lifted the quilt.

PEI Munian had been guarding su Wanwan by the side to prevent her from acting like this. At first, he was quite patient and helped cover her with the blanket, but who knew that she would be impatient and directly lift the blanket.

Three years later, the SU Wan he saw had almost no shadow of that year. In front of him, she was a yes-man and careful. He almost forgot how delicate and difficult it was to serve the SU Wan at that time.

But he didn't hate her being pampered and hard to please at all.

Only when you truly like someone would you show your truest side to the other party without any scruples.

So, at that time, he really thought that su Wanwan liked him and loved him.

There was even a moment when he humbly thought that even if she wasn't sincere and was lying to him, he would be willing if she could lie to him for the rest of his life.

However, his happiness only lasted for less than twenty-four hours before she ruthlessly and coldly shattered his hopes.

He had thought that he would never see this side of her again in this life.

A trace of nostalgia flashed in PEI Munian's eyes. He patiently covered su Wanwan with the blanket again. His hand couldn't help but touch her face, his fingertips lingering. His voice was the gentlest as he said, "Wanwan, be good."
