

Deeply 377

377 Silent love (3)

Previously, PEI Munian and Xi Zhiwei's relationship had been announced in such a high-profile manner that many reporters and paparazzi had been following the new developments between them. Now that they were preparing for their wedding, there was no more news.

If the PEI family was going to hold a wedding, there should be news about it. However, she had not seen any news about their wedding recently.

However, Wanwan might still be in the preparation stage, so she didn't announce it yet.

Su Wanwan smiled bitterly. She didn't know why she was still paying attention to and caring about these things. Whether it was PEI Munian or Xi Zhiwei, they had nothing to do with her, right?

The days of pregnancy were calm and peaceful. Su Wanwan went to bed early and woke up early every day. After dinner in the evening, she would go to the park opposite the apartment for a walk as if she was exercising.

She signed up for the mother-to-be class and went to class regularly to understand her body and to learn about her baby.

All of su Wanwan's focus in life fell on her child. She devoted herself to taking care of her body and ensuring that her baby could grow up healthily in her stomach.

During this period of time, she rarely thought about PEI Munian. Perhaps she had deliberately ignored him, or perhaps her memory was getting worse. For the first time, she felt that having a bad memory was a good thing. She could slowly forget PEI Munian and forget all the pain in the past. One day, when she met him on the street, she would be able to smile calmly.

of course, there were also times when she was bitter and melancholic. for example, she walked alone in the park and watched the loving couples. another example was when she went to the classes in the mother-to-be's classroom. basically, the husband would accompany his wife to the classes, and she was the only one sitting alone in a double seat.

On this day, su Wanwan had just finished class when it started to rain heavily outside. She didn't bring an umbrella. On this rainy day, there were very few taxis and it was difficult to hail one. The mothers-to-be who were in class with her were all picked up by their fathers-to-be. Su Wanwan called the Auntie, but for some reason, the Auntie didn't pick up.

Su Wanwan stood under the small eaves. The rain hit her body and the chill kept invading.

Su Wanwan called the Auntie again, but no one picked up. She couldn't wait any longer. If she fell sick, it would affect the baby. She raised her eyes and looked left and right. There was a convenience store diagonally opposite her. She could take shelter from the rain there.

However, the convenience store was about a few hundred meters away from her, so she still had to walk in the rain.

Su Wanwan only hesitated for a moment before taking off her coat and covering her head. She planned to walk as fast as possible to avoid catching a cold.

It was raining and the road was slippery. Su Wanwan was already very careful as she walked forward. Who knew that when she was halfway there, she suddenly felt a sharp pain in her head, causing her to be in a trance and didn't notice that a motorcycle suddenly appeared on the other side of the road and quickly drove towards her.

When su Wanwan saw the car, the car was already very close, as if it was going to hit her in the next second. Her black pupils suddenly enlarged, she exclaimed and subconsciously hugged her stomach.

Just when su Wanwan thought that the motorcycle would hit her, her whole body was suddenly rolled into an embrace by a force. She was turned around and then she heard a heavy muffled groan.