

Dungeon S 1792

Chapter 1792 King Of Bearling -Part 30

"Gah! Commander! Aren't you supposed to take care of that big rascal? Why is he interfering with my fight!" Click complained as she continued to run towards the second Mecha Acid Dragon and did the same thing now that it had fallen from the punch of her Necro Titan. She turned on her flamethrower and started to burn it as her backpack was building mini rockets so that it could complement the damage that she was doing to it.

"If you think about the size, of course it will feel slightly intimidated by your Necro Titan! Duh!" Jin said as he ran as fast as he could and used a combination of lightning flash steps as well as Green Panda Energy to catch up with the Gigan Dragon, whose size was more than enough that when it flapped once, the amount he traveled was more than sufficient to cover several blocks within the city's district.

When Jin felt it was sufficiently near, he took out his demigorgon and infused Maqi in it. "You better ledge on it, Demigorgon. I know that I am supplying you with more than enough Maqi to do it." Jin said as he threw his sword with as much strength as he could. And attached to the Demigorgon sword was Maqi materialised like a long rope.

When it managed to pierce the dragon's metal plate, Jin used the materialised Maqi like an automated grappling hook and shot up into the sky to get to its feet. "Gosh, thank goodness you did not ledge on the tail. Great job, Demigorgon." Jin said and it seemed like the demigorgon eye was sentient enough to appreciate the compliment. It not only screech but also moved its eye around the sword once more.

"This never gets old... seeing that eye moving around like it is part of the sword," Jin said to himself as he took a deep breath in. "System, you ready to teleport this badass dragon away from this particular existence?"

"Ready whenever User is."

"I have also approved of your application to extend the dungeon time by using your points. A hundred thousand points for an extra minute." Syn popped out to give him the go ahead for a request he had submitted to the Synthesis World AI Administration for a long time.

"That's rather sudden but I appreciate that you tell me that. Also, why is it so cheap?" Jin said that while he was hanging on its leg and the Gigan Dragon was about to have a brawl with the Necro Titan."

"In appreciation for attempting to save the capital of Bearling and the surrounding cities while withholding the challenge," Syn said and Jin laughed.

"You should just give me the Royal's location as the reward for defeating this horde of Mecha Dragons. Now I understand why you want me to play through this entire Royal bullshit. There is no way the other nations could win if the Royals were able to have such a horde with them." Jin added as he could feel the impact of the Necro Titan's punch against the Gigan Dragon, causing him to be knocked back.

"Alright, no time to play, or else I will be squashed!" Jin said as he and the System instantly activated their Dungeon Instance teleporting the Gigan Dragon into its instance and giving the rest some breathing space.

The Queen saw what had happened to the Gigan Dragon and was shocked that it could just disappear in thin air as if it did not exist at all. Yet, none of the attendants cared for the Queen as they quietly tolerated and watched how their Queen was not doing anything and merely watching the shitshow that was happening to their city, their homes, and their friends with ...pleasure. Some even harboured the thought of killing her, right here and now. However, they kept their hands to themselves at the moment, knowing that if Jin were to succeed in stopping this particular horde of dragons, he would be more than welcome to kill the Royal Highness with open arms.

"That is a huge relief, isn't it Necro Titan?" Click said to her summon and somehow the Titan felt disappointed that it got away. "What do you mean you are sad that it's gone? Do you want to fight such a huge monster by yourself? It barely even showed much of its power right now. You might be dead if Jin did not remove it away from this reality!"

Yet, the Necro Titan continued to feel sad as it moved towards the Mecha Acid Dragon that Click was still flaming on. His expression was more than enough for Click to stop her barbeque session as it had decided to use the Acid Dragon as its punching bag now that the Gigan Dragon had disappeared.

"Welp, I guess I really do not need your help, Yinn." Click replied and saw that Page, Tellie, and Lynn were still fighting. "Perhaps you could assist either Lynn and Tellie or Page." Just as Click finished her sentence, suddenly a huge towering block of ice emerged at the eastern side of the city, and in an instant, it disappeared once more as it had been dropped onto their target.

"Okay, I think it's better you help Lynn and Tellie. Those Ice Dragons seem like a pain in the ass compared to the rest of the Dragons."

"If you are done complaining, perhaps you could aid me while Yinn moves to Lynn and Tellie?" Page requested as Click finally saw the two Mecha Lightning Dragons in the skies were fighting with not a Fortress Golem but Page herself. She had abandoned her Fortress golem to have more mobility and utilising what Mechasmith Flammet had given her as well as the rest of the Grey Bears. The Mind Jacker Hover external module.

With that module, she was able to fly to the skies and made them avoid the rest since the city required electricity to move their trains and Mechanoids would be fried if they got into contact with those Mecha Lightning Dragons. But now that they are in the skies, they are able to fight unfettered.

Occasionally missing content, please report errors in time.