

Enchanted 451

Some people came up and joked, "Irish's body is so good. It's really good to be your boyfriend."

"You don't have a boyfriend yet, do you? Why don't we introduce our friends to you?" Because everybody was familiar with her, there was no limitation in speaking naturally. A girl closed and reached for her arm, Irish, and then reached out to touch her cleavage, said with a bad smile, "Do not waste your body."

"You are so frank." Irish smiled and patted the girl's hand off.

Another girl came up, deliberately reached her arm to Irish, and wrapped her arm around her waist. "Honey, if I were to pursue you, my dear, I would never be tired of you every night. Look at this small waist, your hips, especially such a deep line in your boobs," she said, "How many men must be drunk in you."

"Well, I'll stop looking for a boyfriend and follow you." Irish was also playing a joke.

When the voice spoke out, there was another joking voice. "If you don't find a boyfriend, what shall I do?"

All of them stopped laughing, and one after another, looked back, and so did Irish. At the door, Leo was unexpectedly standing, holding a large bouquet of flowers. When his eyes leaped over the girls and landed on Irish, he could not help but feel surprised and then whistled.

"You are so beautiful." He could not help admiring her.

Irish blinked, wondering, and then said, "How do you come here?"

Someone recognized Leo, whispering for a moment, the little girls in the administrative department looked at him with admiration in their eyes.

"As soon as I got home, I heard that you had returned to work at the Runestone Group, and I came to congratulate you," Leo said hello to the girls one by one, went straight to Irish, and handed her the flowers. "This bunch of flowers is right for you."

Irish hastened to explain, "I'm trying for someone else."

"The owner of that dress should not see you, or she wouldn't have dared to wear it." Leo smiled and handed the flowers into her arms.

"Don't talk nonsense." She was afraid the little girl in the administrative department would be unhappy.

"Am I lying? Let's see how you are beautiful." Leo was quite good at activating the atmosphere.

Everyone laughed and responded, and at the same time, everyone looking at them felt ambiguous, then someone asked boldly, "Doctor Irish, are you a couple?"

When Irish wanted to explain, Leo started, "Irish was not so easy to chase, I have been chasing her for a long time."

Irish was speechless.

The other little girls looked envious.

"Doctor Irish, why not agree?"

Irish could not interrupt them and it was no avail to explain. Leo, smiling at her playfully, said, "Look, everyone is so warm, be with me."

Those words made the little girls cry again and again.

Irish, confused, was about to warn Leo not to talk nonsense, and she heard another man's voice rising outside the door, which was strict.

"You don't have to work?"

A cool voice, as pale as water, made everyone feel chills.

Everyone stopped talking and laughing, surprised after seeing the tall shadow at the door, "Mr. Dover."

His tall figure almost filled the door, which made people even more nervous.

Irish did not expect to meet Joseph under such circumstances. Her heart was happy for a moment. But when a pair of his dark and obscure eyes were on her, the heart could not help shivering and subconsciously covered her chest with flowers in her hand.

The wedding dress really caused trouble. Joseph should have just returned from the outside, even if far away, Irish could feel his coldness.

Following him was Daisy. Seeing this scene, her mind turned sharply. For the first time, she took the initiative to break the cold atmosphere set by Joseph. She smiled softly. "Doctor Irish, you look beautiful in the wedding dress."

Irish looked up and wanted to stare at Daisy's eyes, but she could not alter her as she caught a glance of Joseph's increasingly gloomy black eyes, like a haze fiercely looking at her.

"I'm sorry, I am just helping someone. Now I'm going to change." She knew she was wrong, and Daisy gave her a good time to escape, and she had to go away at once.

Just about to turn around, Leo suddenly caught her waist, laughing, "Why so urgent? Beautiful things are to be shared with others."

"Leo," Irish called his name in a low voice, hating him for continuing to mess up.

"You look beautiful in the wedding dress. Am I wrong?" Leo laughed.

"Stop." Irish was sensitive to the fact that Joseph's face was getting heavier and gloomier.

Not surprisingly, he spoke with a cool voice. "Leo, this is not the Runestone Group nor your place. You have to consider the occasion if you want to chase a woman."

As soon as Irish heard Joseph's words, her hair seemed to stand up. She knew that he had completely misunderstood her and said, "As I said, I tried this wedding dress for others."

He should not think that Leo had bought her a wedding dress.

Leo, however, quickly answered, holding her waist, "I really come here to witness her beauty. Joseph, let her go an hour ahead of time, is it okay? I'd like to have a meal with Dr. Irish."

Irish looked at Leo with astonishment, and he looked into her eyes.

The two people appearing intimate made Joseph look even colder, and people saw that shuddered.

"Sorry, our entire staff work on time, and our company rules do not allow them to leave early."

"Don't be so boring, you, as a boss, should be reasonable," Leo said lazily. "Besides, your employees often work overtime, and it's reasonable to leave early."

But Joseph smiled faintly, but that smile was not heartfelt, he said, "It's a pity that Dr. Irish has never had the habit of working overtime, so she is not qualified to leave early."

Irish wanted to die at this moment. Leo was surprised after hearing the words, turned to her, and she nodded sheepishly. Finally, Leo slowly sighed, "You are good."

"So, so." She said in a low voice. "Then I'll wait for you to get off work." Leo didn't give up.

Before Irish refused, she listened to Joseph's voice. "Dr. Irish, send me the nearly two months' staff psychological assessment report early tomorrow morning."

"What?" She was shocked and stared at him.