Mia repeatedly apologized, scrambled to clean up the mess, returned to the kitchen to prepare a bowl of soup and fruits, carefully walked to Irish, and then put the dishes on the coffee table one by one.

"It must have been premeditated." Irish agreed with Cassie, frowning tightly and gnashing her teeth.

Cassie was about to open her mouth when he saw Mia knelt on the ground, and they were startled.

"Doctor. Irish, you should scold me." Mia cried, her fingers trembling.

Irish was stunned, "You...."

"The house was stolen that day. Actually, I knew it for a long time." Mia was crying.

"Make your words clear." Irish felt an ominous foreboding, staring at Mia, whose voice turned cold.

Mia raised her hand, wiped a handful of tears, and told her the story.

As it turned out, Shirley knew from nowhere that Mia was their nanny and had come to her one day, preparing a large sum of money for her and telling her to improve her life. She did not want her to be a nanny all her life. In fact, she was buying and using her. Her condition was simple: to take ambiguous photos or videos of Joseph and Irish when they didn't notice. As long as she took these things to her, Shirley promised that Mia's life would be without worries.

At first, Mia refused. She worked as a nanny for many years and knew nothing about business-related things. So she did not know Shirley, nor did she know what was going on. She didn't even know what her background to Joseph was. The woman who suddenly came to the door claiming to be Mrs. Lake did not make her take the woman seriously.

Mia had germinated the idea of resignation and thought of the future life, so she dialed Shirley, who had left her phone number. After meeting with her, Mia confessed that she had not taken any photos and had no video in her hand but could give her a set of keys to the suite. As for the evidence, she would find it after entering the room.

Shirley agreed at the time, and when she got the key, she gave Mia a large sum of money, and a burglary case soon after took place.

"Dr. Irish, please, believe me, I'm really seduced," Mia said the above words and immediately explained.

After a long time, Irish gazed at Mia and asked, "Why did you have the idea of resigning?" Perhaps the reason for her resignation was the important reason she chose to stand with Shirley.

Mia hesitated to look at Cassie and then looked at Irish again, then she lowered her head and wept, "Because I have always admired you and your husband and thought you were a natural couple, I thought you were either lovers or couples because you both looked so good that there was no doubt at all until the young man, Mr. Jordan, he had told you that even if his brother divorced, he couldn't marry you. After listening to these words, I realized that you were the third person."

"Who are you talking about?" Cassie yelled unhappily, "Those two people have not married, why were they not allowed?"

"I didn't know the truth until later, but it was too late. The pictures and everything came to light. Dr. Irish..." Mia came forward to hold on to the sleeve of Irish and said, "My wages are all given by Mr. Dover. I really didn't want to betray you, but at first, I really thought you were a bad woman who destroyed a family. I thought about resigning, and I was sad, but I had to live after that, so I took the wrong step."

"Why haven't you gone?" Irish's were sad.

Mia cried and shook her head, "I knew I was wrong after I knew the truth. I always wanted to find a chance to confess to you, but I didn't dare. I was afraid." Then she suddenly got up and rushed out of the living room, and came back a moment later, again kneeling on the ground with a big bag in her arms and putting it before Irish, "This is all the money that the woman gave me, and I didn't spend any here," she said, "Doctor Irish, I beg you, please forgive me, okay? I'm really wrong."

Irish looked down at it and then at the open bag. It was full of green shadows.

Cassie stretched out her hand to open the bag and sneered, "It's really a big deal."

Mia sobbed.

Irish remained silent for a moment, looked at Mia, and asked, "Are you telling the truth?"

Mia hastened to vow, "If I tell a lie, let me go out and be hit by a car and killed by thunder!"

Cassie saw the situation and looked at Irish, "Call the police."

Irish's teeth clattered, her face darkened, and her eyes almost blazing. Cassie looked at her in fear. As soon as she wanted to talk to her, Irish stood up and said, "Today, I'll show her who I am."

At the end of the speech, she grabbed the car keys and rushed out of the door. It happened so fast that Cassie was caught by surprise, and when she reacted, it was too late. She was startled to see two people standing at the door, who were in the same surprise.

"Where's Irish?" Leo, who had been staying at the gate, at first reacted and grabbed Cassie.

He nearly broke Cassie's wrist, and she frowned with pain. "She's probably going to Lake's house."

"Why?" The other was Mary, who was stunned by the words.

Cassie didn't answer, seeing Leo change his face, and rushed to the elevator without saying anything.

Mary felt ominous and rushed to run to the elevator with Cassie.

The speed of Irish was so fast that she had probably driven her red Jeep to the speed point where God could get it because when Leo drove with Mary and Cassie to get to the Lake's house, Irish and Shirley had already quarreled!

Henry was not at home, probably because of the incident of sexy photos that had already involved the Runestone Group. However, the matters in the company made him unable to separate himself, so he did not think at all that when he was faced with problems at the company, the fire in his home was already flourishing.

William was also not at home; since his scandal was discovered, he was like being defeated. He rarely went to the company, went home, and often stayed in the coffee shop, thinking nothing.
