

Enchanted 643

Cassie glared at him irritably. How can he be so despicable?

"What's wrong? You were happy last night, weren't you?" Roy sat down and held her, with his slender fingers slipping down, and then whispered beside her ears, "The sheet was wet by your sexual secretions."

Cassie trembled out of rage while he continued, "Your pussy is so tight, which gave me great pleasure. Honey, you are so tight. Do you feel happier when I don't wear condoms in the early morning?"

Her face turned pale, and her heart almost stopped beating.

She couldn't remember how many times they had sex, but now she was reminded by his words, and the memory of this morning was back again. The man's panting was suffused in her mind, which gave a violent strike to her mind.

She vaguely remembered that Roy pressed over her body this early morning, and she was weak enough to withstand his violent impact.

When he almost reached the orgasm, he didn't wear a condom like the previous few times but ejaculated directly inside her body.

She could even feel the hot temperature pouring inside her.

He was such a despicable man!

"I will sue you! You are a monster." She felt weak, not because of the drug action but because he tortured her for the whole night. She was too weak to argue with him.

After hearing this, Roy smiled and asked in reply, "What are you going to sue me? Are you going to sue me for raping you? But even the security guard knew that it was you who drove me back last night. And I didn't force you to get into my house last night. Do you have any evidence to sue me? Do you think the police will believe you that raped you last night? Don't waste time because no one would trust you."

"You are so despicable." Cassie was so eager to kill him by stabbing a knife into his chest.

However, he smiled and said in a low voice beside her ears, "Don't worry. The real despicable thing will come soon."

Cassie was shocked and confused by his words, but soon she heard the doorbell ring.

Roy stood up with an evil smile, pinching her cheeks, and said, "I have a surprise for you."

After a few seconds, she heard footsteps coming.

She was startled and hastily pulled the blanket, but as soon as she covered her body with the blanket, the door was opened by someone.

The man stopped when he saw the scene in the room, while Cassie was also tired of earthly life at that moment.

It was Fredrick who opened the door.

Roy sneered behind him and snorted, "Take her back."

Fredrick balled his fists, and the blue vein protruded.

"Roy, you are a jerk!" He gnashed his teeth and raised his fist to Roy.

However, Roy held his fist and pressed Fredrick against the wall, sneering, "But it is me, the asshole, who led your woman to orgasm several times! Fredrick, I am afraid that you have never brought her such great joy!"

Fredrick looked like a raging beast, pushing him away and slapping his face violently, "Go to hell."

"That's enough!" Cassie shouted, and her voice teetered on the edge of hysteria.

They stopped together and found Cassie huddled there as a shrimp with a hand covering her ears. Her face was so pale. Finally, she cried out and then passed out.

The meaning of the rumor was to release people's pressure and add some color to people's life. It didn't have any social or reference value, and its products may be a maliciously fabricated and fictional exaggeration. Nevertheless, it rapidly spread because people were all interested in such gossip. Therefore, though it generated quickly but would vanish soon, and that was why rumor could only be regarded as information but not news.

The rumor about Ruby's sexual orientation was also just a rumor, and because of her identity as the daughter of the Lake family, people paid great attention to this gossip. Of course, it would pass sooner or later, but the negative impact of this period brought great suffering to the person concerned.

But Joseph's promotion of status in Runestone Group was unmistakable news.

The media reported that the board of directors of Runestone Group would encounter a reform, pointing out that through the second stock adjustment after the death of former chairman Henry, the general manager of the Runestone Group held almost the same stock with the only son of the Lake family, Roy.

Some outsiders speculated the significance of this stock adjustment, and some even pointed out that the establishment of the Runestone Group had something to do with two enterprises, and it was a result of corporate restructuring. In addition, people were interested in whether the internal decision-making authority of Joseph's family, represented by him, would overwhelm the authority of the Lake family.

This explosive news soon overcame the rumors about Ruby. However, Ruby could still not cross this ridge, but luckily Joseph promised to help her cope with this dilemma.

In fact, Joseph did not need to spend much effort coping with these things. At the moment when Ruby agreed to transfer her stock to him, the rumors ended at that time. What happened was without extra effort for Joseph.

The rumor was like a flood that needed people's instruction.

Of course, someone had to pay the price to achieve one's goals. For example, Ruby had the right to vote since she agreed to transfer her stock right, but it was just a drop in the ocean while Joseph's position rose quickly. It was not only for him but also for the social status of Jordan, who had never been to Runestone Group and improved rapidly.

However, even if the news caused much gossip, Runestone Group was still operating normally. The staff of Runestone Group didn't care who was in charge of the company; they just cared about whether they would be cut down and their salary would improve.

Joseph was busy from morning to night, as if he was Robert. He had endless meetings, social engagements, and business negotiations. He had to visit the mining site, review model design, and market sales. He also had to accelerate the deep development and cooperation in the first-tier city market, investment management of various projects, and capital operation of the stock market.

He was busy with his work until midnight, and after four hours of sleep, he would devote himself to work again. It seemed that Joseph had forgotten that Daisy was also a woman. She was almost exhausted after dealing with the endless document and arranging the schedule for him.

Joseph just kept silent without any mood swings. Daisy tried to find out any clues about his mood swings but failed often.