

Ex Convict 3031

Chapter 3031

"That's because as a mother, I save money and spend it all on buying expensive things for my child."

"Really?" Valda smiled slightly. "You saved up for it? Are you sure you can afford it just by saving up?"

As she spoke, she pointed to the shoes on Simon's feet and said, "These shoes are a limited edition children's shoe from this brand. There are only 10 pairs in each size, and only super VIP customers of this brand are eligible to purchase them. And the official price of this pair of shoes is 300,000. Do you think you bought them?"

With these words, there was a commotion around them. Who would have thought that a child's shoes would cost 300,000?

The middle-aged woman's face turned red. "That...that's fake. I bought a pair of imitation shoes that look the same."

"Oh?" Valda continued, "What's your child's name? The child's school bag is right next to you, and there must be homework books or something in it. The child's name should be written on

1. If you know the child's name, why not say it? We can open the child's school bag and find his homework book to compare if you're right!"

With these words, everyone looked at the middle-aged woman.

The woman looked even more embarrassed, and her mouth moved for a while, but she couldn't say the child's name.

Valda shrugged. "It seems you don't know, but I know the child's name. My boyfriend knows the child's name too, and we even know what his parents' names are because we are friends with his mother!"

Although not really friends! Valda silently added in her heart.

With these words, there was a commotion around them, and Simon looked at Valda and Brian in surprise.

Are they... Mommy's friends?!

When he found out that his biological mother was actually the “bad woman” that his grandparents and mother had talked about before, and the person he had always called “mom” was the real villain, he felt like the whole world had collapsed and all his happiness was gone.

He doesn’t know what to do? He also doesn’t know who to call mommy.

At this moment, the middle-aged woman was so angry and embarrassed by Valda’s words that she suddenly rushed towards her, intending to hit her.

Brian took a quick step forward and grabbed the other person, saying, “If you dare to touch her, I will make you regret ever being born.”

The cold and fierce voice made the middle-aged woman shudder, and a sense of fear rose from the bottom of her heart.

Who is this man, exactly?

Valda approached the child and comforted them, saying “It’s okay, everything will be fine. Auntie will call the police and they will take care of the bad person.”

Valda spoke and took out her phone, dialing the emergency number.

When the woman saw that Valda had called the police, she struggled even harder to get away, shouting, “Let me go, let me go!”

But how could Brian have let go?

The onlookers have now realized the truth and are blaming the middle-aged woman, especially those who were eager to help the woman earlier. They are so angry that they want to rush forward and beat her up.

Chapter 3032

“She actually pretended to be the child’s mother. Is she planning to kidnap the child?”

“How could there be such a heartless person! Kidnapping children, may they be struck by lightning and have a miserable death!”

“If this child is really taken away by this woman, what will happen to him? The child’s family might be ruined!”

“This kind of human trafficker should be sentenced to a heavy penalty!”

After a while, the police arrived and took the middle-aged woman into custody. They then asked Valda and Brian to come to the police station to give a statement.

So, Valda and Brian ended up at the police station again, not long after the crayfish incident.

This time, however, it is in the name of assisting from the sidelines.

And Simon also went into the police station together.

Valda told the police Simon’s name and his father’s name.

The police officers at the station had heard of George’s name and quickly called the Gregory family to inform them of the situation.

They asked the Gregory family to come and pick up their child.

The Gregory family is currently searching for their child and things have become chaotic. When they heard that the child was at the police station, they immediately responded and said they would come to pick them up right away.

After hearing Valda say her own name and her father’s name, Simon looked at her in a daze and asked, “Are you really my mommy’s friend?”

Valda crouched down and said to him, “Not right now, but both your mommy’s friends and I are good friends! I know your mommy’s name is Amber, I know she’s been through a lot in the past, and I also know that even though she’s not in Deer Capital now, she loves you very much.”

Simon’s eyelashes trembled, and then he stubbornly denied, “She doesn’t love me, otherwise why would she leave!”

Valda patted the little one’s head and said, “She left because she suffered too much here. Staying here would only bring her more pain. But that doesn’t mean she doesn’t love you.”

The little one still had a look of disbelief.

Valda couldn’t say much more, as her knowledge of Amber was limited to what Brian had told her on the plane.

So Valda decided to tell the little one some comic book stories, about the heroes and characters that little boys usually like.

SiiuPIS

This trick worked and the little one relaxed, slowly starting to talk more with Valda.

Brian watched Valda and Simon interact and was lost in thought.

He thought that if they had children in the future, she would surely often talk about topics that interest children with them.

She would definitely be a great mother!

Chapter 3033

After about 20 minutes, the Gregory family arrived, led by George.

When George saw Brian among the people with his son, he was clearly surprised.

Brian was one of the people who helped Amber before. Without him, Amber might not have been rescued from the Mitchell family so quickly.

And now, did Brian save his son again? George walked up to Brian and said, "Did you help my son and prevent the traffickers from taking him away? Thank you!"

In a previous phone call with the police, George learned that his son had almost been abducted by human traffickers on the street.

Brian looked at George in front of him. This man looked more tired and thinner than the last time he saw him. Although Grace was dressed in a suit and had neatly combed hair, there was a lifeless look in his eyes.

That is a lifeless feeling that seems to only exist in people who have lost faith in life.

"It's just a small favor, no need to thank me. But if you had really lost the child, Amber would probably hate you even more," said

Brian. "However, today's incident can also be a lesson for the child. He should know better about danger in the future."

When George heard the name Amber, his body trembled and his thin lips quivered. After a long time, he hoarsely asked, "Is she okay?"

"I'm not sure, all I know is that she's in Emerald City right now," said Brian. "If you want to find out, why don't you investigate yourself? It should be easy to find out, right?"

A bitter expression appeared on George's lips.

Yes, if he investigates, he can easily find out how Amber is doing now.

But... he didn't dare.

Because he doesn't know what kind of answer he wants to get.

If she doesn't live well, he feels bad, but if she lives well, he also feels bad.

And with such a large sum of money, she will probably live very well in Emerald City, which also means that she no longer needs him.

To her, he is just the person who causes her pain! If it weren't for their child, who is a common bond between them, she would probably want to treat him like a stranger.

George approached Simon and Valda, glanced at Valda, then at Brian, and asked Brian, "Who is this?"

"My girlfriend, Valda," Brian introduced, then turned to Valda and said, "Valda, this is Simon Gregory's father, George."

George was surprised to learn that Valda was Brian's girlfriend.

After all, men like Brian have many options when it comes to finding a girlfriend, such as high society ladies or popular female celebrities. However, Valda appears quite ordinary in comparison.

Brian's gaze towards Valda was gentle.

This made George realize that Brian truly cares about this woman, with genuine feelings rather than casual dating.

The atmosphere surrounding the two individuals is relaxed and pleasant.

In the past, there was a similar atmosphere between him and Amber, but... it was ultimately shattered by his own hands.

Chapter 3034

Thinking of this, George's heart was filled with even more pain.

Valda looked at the other person and simply said, "Hello."

After all, she doesn't have a good impression of George, and it can be said that all the suffering Amber has endured is due to her relationship with George.

If George had trusted Amber from the beginning, she wouldn't have suffered for so many years.

George said, "Hello, I want to thank you for helping me protect Simon today. If you ever need any help from the Gregory family in the future, don't hesitate to ask. I will definitely help."

This is also his promise to them.

After saying this, George turned to his son and said, "Simon, let's go. It's time to go back. Your grandparents are very worried about you."

At the moment, Simon seemed somewhat unwilling as he walked from Valda's side to his own father's side.

As he was leaving, Simon quietly turned back and looked at Valda several times.

Valda couldn't help but feel a twinge of heartache in her heart.

Actually, this child is just a child who longs for love.

When they returned to their hotel room, Valda said, "I feel like Simon actually wants to see his mother. On one hand, he really hopes that his mother loves him, but on the other hand, he doesn't believe that she does."

"Do you feel sorry for that child?" Brian asked.

"Mmm," she said, "it's quite heartbreaking. I couldn't bring myself to say anything like 'his mother will come back' while I was in front of the child."

Because if it were Amber in her place, after suffering so much harm, she wouldn't choose to come back.

"Fortunately, you were able to notice Simon today. Otherwise, he might have really been abducted by that woman. It would have been difficult to find the child then," said Brian.

“At that time, I noticed him because I thought he looked a lot like me when I was a child,” said Valda.

“Like the way you were when you were a child?” Brian was taken aback.

“It seems very lonely,” Valda said. “When my parents passed away, even though I was taken in by my uncle’s family, that feeling of loneliness never left me. At that time, I often didn’t want to go home after school and would frequently stay outside by myself.”

Brian hugged Valda with a heart full of pity and said, “I won’t let you feel so lonely again in the future.”

“Okay,” Valda hugged Brian tightly, burying her face deeply in his embrace. “Brian, I won’t let you be alone anymore in the future.”

Perhaps, both of them were once lonely individuals, but after meeting each other, they finally no longer have to be alone!

Chapter 3035

The next day’s comic exchange meeting, Brian attended as a participant with Valda as his translator. Valda was in awe as she watched Brian fluently converse with comic artists from other countries in their native language.

You should know that he doesn’t just communicate with others in English, he also knows Japanese, Korean, and more.

Valda feels that it’s necessary to refresh her understanding of Brian.

And he knows even the most specialized terminology, sometimes even better than the professional translators present.

There were several translators, some even came over to talk to Brian.

“How many languages have you actually learned?” Valda asked in a moment of pause.

“Just six languages, and for the others, I only know a little bit,” he replied.

“Six countries?!” Valda gasped. If he only knows a little bit of the other languages, then he must be fluent in these six languages?

He’s really a language genius!

Compared to him, she felt like a language idiot. Even the only language she had been studying for years, English, she had to work hard to pick up and only managed to have basic conversations.

“You know, if I had met you when I was studying, maybe my grades would have improved dramatically, and I might have learned a few more languages,” Valda sighed.

“What’s wrong with now? You don’t have to study hard, I can help you translate,” he said.

Valda realized he was right.

At the communication meeting, Valda also met many of her admired comic artists. Of course, she couldn’t miss the opportunity to get their autographs and take pictures with them.

After learning that Valda and Brian were in a romantic relationship, the comic artists all gave their blessings.

Valda had a pleasant few days at the exchange meeting. She not only got closer to many comic artists, but also discussed various comic techniques and their views on the future of comics.

Valda feels that she has gained a lot in these past few days.

During the day, she often discussed various issues with the cartoonists, and Brian was the best translator.

At night, she and Brian wandered around the streets and alleys of Deer Capital, as if they were tourists visiting the place.

“If you want to, you can stay here for a few more days when the time comes,” said Brian.

“What about your job?”

“For work, I can arrange it. A few days’ time can be adjusted,” he said.

She couldn’t help but say, “Brian, are you being too accommodating to me?"

"I just want to accommodate you more," he said.

I just want to treat her better, so well that she can't let go of me!

After the exchange meeting ended, Valda and Brian decided to stay in Deer Capital for three more days to do some sightseeing.

On the very first day, an unexpected situation occurred.

Valda was surprised to see Simon appear in front of them, and stared at him.

George apologized and said, "Simon really wants to see you again. Do you plan to stay in Deer Capital for a while? I also want to show my gratitude for saving Simon last time. I haven't properly thanked you yet."

"No need to be polite," said Valda.

Brian doesn't really like George, so he says, "Mr. Gregory, my girlfriend and I already have plans for today, so we appreciate your kindness, but we want to explore Deer Capital on our own."

This statement is equivalent to a refusal, and someone like George naturally understands it.

"Is that so? Well... it would indeed be inconvenient to disturb you," said George, then he lowered his head and said to his son, "Alright, you've met Auntie Valda and Uncle Brian, let's go back."

He was about to take his son's hand when Simon took a big step forward and went straight to Valda, grabbing her hand. "I want to play with you guys, is that okay?"

"?" Valda was surprised, "You want to join us?"

Chapter 3036

"Today is Saturday, no need to go to class," said Simon, with a glimmer of anticipation in his beautiful eyes.

Looking at those hopeful eyes, Valda couldn't refuse anymore.

George said, "Simon, come here!"

But Simon seemed to ignore it, while Grace held onto Valda's hand.

Valda looked hesitant, glancing at the child and then at Brian. "Brian, this..."

"I'll listen to you." Brian directly handed over the decision-making power to Valda.

Valda thought for a moment and said to George, "Mr. Gregory, if you're comfortable with it, why don't we let Simon play with us today? We'll make sure to send him back to the Gregory family afterwards."

George said, "How can this be appropriate?"

"I actually quite like Simon," said Valda. She just doesn't like

George sighed as he looked at his son who was holding Valda's hand tightly and refused to let go.

"Alright then, I'll trouble you with this. But you don't have to go out of your way to send Simon back to the Gregory family. I'll come and pick him up myself."

"Okay," Valda replied.

George then gave some instructions to his son before leaving.

Valda, Brian, and Simon started their journey for the day.

For the sake of convenience during his trip, Brian had arranged for a car to be provided by the subsidiary of Hart Group, Deer Capital, at this location.

At the moment, Brian is driving while Simon and Valda are sitting in the back seat.

"Do you want to come out and play with us? Today we're just visiting some ordinary sights in Deer Capital that you've probably already been to, so you might find it boring," said Valda.

"I just don't want to stay at home and deal with my grandparents and dad," Simon said with a bit of an old-fashioned tone.

Valda was surprised, "Oh, why? They should treat you well, right?"

She heard from Brian that the Gregory family only has one child, Simon. Because of this, Amber had thought about getting custody of the child, but the Gregory family was not willing to give it up.

"It's good, but... my grandparents don't like mommy. I've heard them say that mommy is a bad woman and that she's the reason why daddy is like this now. And they keep talking about finding me a new mommy all the time!" Simon said.

Upon hearing this, Valda could only sigh and think that every family has their own difficulties to face.

"So what about you, what do you think?" she asked. Children at this age are generally precocious and have their own ideas.

At this moment, Valda didn't treat the other person as a child, but asked them in an equal and inquiring tone.

Simon remained silent, and Valda didn't push him. It was as if he could speak if he wanted to, but if he didn't want to, then he didn't have to.

After a while, Simon said, "I don't like it when they speak ill of Mommy. It was clearly Daddy who caused Mommy's suffering! I've read many reports and even searched online. Many people online say that if Daddy had helped Mommy at that time, she wouldn't have suffered so much."

"Your father must be regretting it now," said Valda. Although she didn't like George, she could tell from his eyes that there was a sense of despair towards life.

The impact of these things on that man can be imagined.

"I don't want a new mommy either," Simon said. "I don't want to stay at home, and I don't want to go to school. It seems like everyone is being very careful around me, whispering behind my back and not wanting me to know what they're saying. But actually, I know what they're talking about!"

Chapter 3037

Valda can relate to this. When her parents passed away, relatives, teachers, and classmates were all very careful around her, but they also talked behind her back.

Actually, she was very clear about what they were saying and discussing.

At that time, she seemed to have become someone special, who didn't fit in with those around her.

"Simon, we can't stop others from discussing whatever they want, but we can make ourselves stronger. We can confidently express our own thoughts and not avoid interacting with people because of fear or annoyance. If you do, you'll only become more and more avoidant in the future," said Valda.

Simon was listening, but it's unclear how much he actually absorbed.

Valda didn't expect the child to understand everything at once, as many things require gradual guidance.

"There's one more thing that's very important," Valda couldn't help but say. "Simon, in the future, you must learn to distinguish right from wrong. Don't let appearances blind you and make decisions that you'll regret for the rest of your life. In this world, there are some things that can be corrected, like mistakes that can be erased with an eraser and replaced with the correct answer. But there are some things that cannot be corrected. Once you make a choice, you can't turn back."

"Like my dad and mom?" Simon asked.

Valda didn't say directly, but instead said, "If we think someone else is wrong, then in the future, we should try to avoid making the same mistake ourselves."

Simon listened, seeming to be deep in thought.

They arrived at their destination, a tall tower by a lake in Deer Capital.

The three of them strolled by the lake and then climbed the tower together.

Since Simon had been there before, he acted as a tour guide and showed Valda and Brian around the scenery.

When they reached the top of the tower, Brian saw that there were amulets for sale, so he bought three.

One for each of them.

Valda looked at the amulet in her hand with some surprise, then looked at Brian.

"What's wrong? Don't you like it?" he asked.

"No, it's just that I don't think you're the kind of person who would buy something like this," Valda said.

"Maybe it's because sometimes people become more superstitious about things they care about," murmured Brian. And she, the one he cared about, "I hope this amulet can really keep you safe and protect you from disasters."

Valda smiled at the words and said, "Then I'll keep this safe."

Then she squatted down again and said to Simon, "You also need to keep this safe. Uncle Brian bought it for us specifically to keep us safe."

The little one looked at the peace charm for a moment, then raised their head and looked at Brian. "I also want to buy one for my mommy. Uncle Brian, can you give it to her when you see her?"

Brian paused for a moment and said, "I can help you pass it on to your mom's friend, who can then give it to your mom."

"Uncle Brian, aren't you my mommy's friend? Dad told me that you saved mommy," Simon asked.

Chapter 3038

"I saved your mommy before, but I wouldn't consider myself a friend."

"I see," muttered Simon. He reached into his backpack and pulled out his child's phone. Then, he walked up to the stall selling peace charms and scanned the code to buy one.

Watching Simon skillfully scan and pay with his phone, Valda couldn't help but sigh with admiration.

Simon bought a peace charm and handed it over to Brian, saying

"You must make sure to give it to mommy's friend." The little guy's expression was very serious.

"Okay." Brian took the peace charm and responded.

In the afternoon, the three of them returned to the Mason Swansonty area and planned to find a restaurant for dinner. While Brian was parking the car in the parking lot, Valda suddenly exclaimed,

"Oh!"

"What's wrong?" Brian asked.

"I think I saw Grace," said Valda.

I saw Grace getting out of the car with her three children in this same parking lot.

Brian parked the car and Valda got out of the car holding Simon's hand. They shouted towards Grace's direction, "Grace."

Grace looked towards the voice and saw her. She immediately responded with a greeting and waved at her.

After a moment, Brian and Jason also got out of the car. When they saw each other, they silently faced each other for a moment.

Who would have thought that we would meet in Deer Capital, it's such a coincidence.

Two groups of people approached each other.

Valda looked at the three children with Grace, two of whom were Mick and Jasper, the triplets, and the other was William from the Barlow family, whom she had seen before at the birthday party for the Reed family's youngest daughter, Jasmine.

At the same time, Grace also looked at the children with Valda, who were... Amber's children, Simon.

Although Grace recognized the little one, she had only seen pictures of Amber's children in the information before and had not really seen them in person.

"How did you guys..." both sides said in unison, then laughed together.

"Jasper is participating in the piano competition at Deer Capital today, and Mick and William also want to watch the competition live, so Jason and I brought them here to eat dinner after the competition." Grace spoke first.

"I came to Deer Capital to participate in a comic exchange meeting, and Brian accompanied me. After the exchange meeting ended, I wanted to stroll around Deer Capital. Simon happened to come to find me today, so I brought Simon to play together."

Sure enough, it was really Amber's son, Simon! Grace thought to herself.

Just then, Brian took out the amulet he bought for Amber and handed it to Grace. "Here, this is for you to give to Amber."

"For Amber?" Grace looked confused.

"It was bought by Simon for his mommy," said Brian.

Grace suddenly realized and looked at Simon, "Is this what you want to give to your mommy? Auntie Grace will definitely hand it over to your mommy herself."

Simon looked at Grace and asked, "Are you Mommy's friend?"

"Yes, I am your mommy's friend," Grace replied. "I also know that your name is Simon!"

The little one blinked and then asked, "So... do you happen to know how Mommy is doing in Emerald City?"

"I know some," said Grace.

The little one had a look of wanting to know but feeling too shy to ask.

Grace smiled and said, "Shall I tell you what I said earlier?"

Suddenly, a glimmer of joy flashed in those dark eyes.

Chapter 3039

Grace looked at Valda and Brian again. "Since we've coincidentally met, why don't we have a meal together? I also want to talk to Simon about his mother's situation."

"Okay," Valda responded.

Brian and Jason didn't have any objections, so the group headed to the restaurant.

In this shopping mall, there is a popular children's restaurant that Jasper really wants to go to. Mick Reed and William also have an attitude of liking it as long as Jasper likes it.

And Simon, clearly, is also interested in this restaurant.

So, no one raised any objections.

After entering the restaurant and ordering some dishes, a few children started chatting away. Of course, Jasper was the most talkative, while Mick rarely spoke. William mostly followed Jasper's topics, and Simon would occasionally ask some questions.

Jasper is clearly confident about her piano competition. Even though the results won't be out for a few days, she doesn't feel particularly drawn to any of the peers who participated in the competition.

"I thought I would never meet another kid who plays the piano as well as William," grumbled Jasper.

Grace said, "So, do you really want to meet another kid who plays the piano really well?"

"Of course, if there is someone like that, I would definitely pull them along and play many wonderful pieces!" said Jasper. In fact, she wasn't too eager to win awards. What she really desired was to meet someone her age who played the piano well.

William, who was sitting next to Jasper, lowered his gaze gently and his body stiffened slightly, almost imperceptibly.

Jasper, do you want to meet another child who plays the piano well?

Isn't he enough on his own?

A sudden panic arose in his heart.

If one day, another person who plays better than him appears beside her, would she like that person more?

Even though she said he was a very important friend to her and that she really liked him, this panic was something deeply buried in his heart.

"Is playing the piano interesting?" Simon asked curiously.

"How interesting." Whenever the topic of piano comes up, Jasper naturally has an endless supply of things to talk about. He starts telling Simon stories about famous pianists and the beauty of playing the piano. He even mentions some unique ways of playing, which Simon Gregory finds quite fascinating.

"Simon, do you want to learn piano? I can give you a lot of sheet music! And I also have notes from when I learned piano as a child!" Although she called them notes, when Jasper was only 4 or 5 years old, those notes were really only understandable to herself.

However, her enthusiasm made Simon feel a bit embarrassed to refuse. "Then next time, I'll try to learn it too. It seems like it would be fun to play together with you."

"Great, great!" Jasper nodded repeatedly.

But suddenly, William Atkinson interjected, "You won't be able to learn it."

Simon furrowed his brows, sensing a hint of hostility from William.

Naturally, boys don't like to admit defeat.

"Who says I can't learn it? If I want to learn, I will definitely learn it!" Simon said confidently.

Chapter 3040

William pursed his lips tightly.

Jasper said, "William, how could you say that to Simon? It's a good thing that Simon wants to learn the piano. You should apologize to Simon."

A hint of sadness flashed in William's eyes, but he still said to Simon, "I'm sorry."

The apology was not something he wanted to say himself, but rather because Jasper wanted him to apologize, so he did.

"Alright, alright, the food is here. Let's eat first and then we can go play later!" Grace called out.

This restaurant also had a small amusement area with some well-made attractions that children loved, and as a result, it had received many positive reviews online.

Jasper cheered and immediately began to eat, and the other children followed suit.

The dispute between the children seemed to end there.

After finishing their meal, Valda and Grace accompanied the four children to the amusement area to play.

Meanwhile, Brian and Jason were still sitting at the table, sizing each other up.

"It seems like you get along well with Valda," Jason spoke up.

"Yeah, we do," Brian replied.

"If I didn't know any better, seeing you guys with Simon earlier, I would have thought you were a family of three," Brian said.

"So, what do you want to say?" Brian asked directly.

"I want to ask, when are you going to marry her?" Jason inquired.

"I'll marry her if she's willing to marry me," Brian replied frankly.

"Then I look forward to that day," Jason hinted.

"Why, are you afraid that I won't get married and that Grace will keep caring about me?" Brian asked back.

"Yes, I'm afraid Grace will care," Jason spoke frankly, "I don't want the person I love to keep thinking about you and feeling guilty because of you."

"I don't actually need Grace to feel guilty about me. I've actually come to terms with it a long time ago. It's just that sometimes, falling in love with someone isn't something you can control. You can't force yourself to love someone, and you can't force yourself not to love someone!" Brian sighed.

"So, have you fallen in love with Valda?" Jason asked.

Brian didn't answer, he just looked over at Valda who was playing with the children.

Did he fall in love with her? But even today, he still couldn't give a definite answer.

Then his gaze shifted towards Grace, who was standing next to Valda.

That is the person he has loved for so many years and held onto for so many years.

He once thought that after losing Grace, he would never be with another woman again in his life. But who could have imagined that Valda would unexpectedly enter his world like this, and the bond between him and Valda is getting deeper and deeper.

"So if this time, you encounter a situation like last time where Grace and Valda are in the same danger, who would you save?" Jason's voice rang in Brian's ear once again.

He suddenly jolted and then looked at the other person with a slightly embarrassed expression on his face, "Do you find it interesting to ask such questions?"

"You don't have to answer me, but the answer to this question represents who is the most important person in your heart," said Jason.

"Then, if it were your child and Grace in danger at the same time, who would you save first?" Brian asked in response.

"Grace!" Jason answered without hesitation, "If it's my answer, then I would choose to save Grace because she is the most important to me. But if Grace chooses for me to save the child, then I will follow her choice, save the child, and be with her."

It seems to represent everything.
