

Ex Convict 3331

Chapter 3331

The child fell asleep because he had just finished eating. As a newborn baby of only a few days old, he basically eats and sleeps all day long.

"After the baby was born, his/her eyes haven't opened yet. We don't know when they will open," said Valda.

"After a week or two, the baby should open its eyes," Brian said.

"How do you know? Did you ask the doctor?" she asked.

"No, but my mom said I was like that when I was born," he replied.

Hearing this, she felt a little relieved. "I wonder who the baby will look like," she said.

Since the baby was only a few days old and hadn't opened its eyes yet, it was hard to tell who it resembled more.

However, the baby had a lot of hair and red skin. According to Lisa, the redder the skin of a newborn, the whiter it will be in the future.

"I hope she looks like you," Brian said. Although he didn't mind who the baby looked like, he secretly hoped that she would resemble his wife more.

The thought of having a little Valda made him inexplicably excited.

Valda suddenly felt like laughing. Both she and her husband hoped that their baby would look like each other.

"Don't waste your good genes. I want a baby that looks like you.

You were so cute in your childhood photos," she said.

Valda is very envious of her mother-in-law. If she were a mother-in-law herself, she would probably be hugging and kissing her adorable son all the time and not want to let go.

According to Brian's grandmother, he was a cold child and since he was able to understand things, he particularly disliked his grandmother's hugs and kisses. If his grandmother used a "firm" approach to hug and kiss him, he would look very unhappy, making it difficult for his grandmother to continue.

However, Valda thinks that her mother-in-law wasn't persistent enough in her efforts at the beginning.

Brian's personality may yield unexpected results if he persists in his pursuit.

"Then you can take a look at my childhood photos, it's the same thing," said Brian.

Valda was a bit speechless, how could they be the same!

"By the way, should we come up with a way to return the red envelope that was given to us by my in-laws? The amount is too big and it makes me nervous. I'm afraid that my bank account might get hacked," Valda said.

"Since they gave it to you, it's yours. Why return it?" said Brian.

"But, such a large sum... I've never had this much money in my entire life, I don't even know what to do," said Valda.

However, after she finished speaking, she was met with his strange gaze.

"What's wrong?" She didn't say anything wrong, did she?

"You said you've never had this much money in your life?" Brian asked with a smirk.

"Yes," Valda nodded.

"Do you know how much you're worth now?" he asked again.

"20 billion?" She hesitated for a moment.

"300 billion," he said, spitting out a number.

Valda was stunned, staring at Brian, wondering if the number he said was the same as what she thought, or if there was a misunderstanding between them.

“Me – 300 billion? It took Valda a while to ask

“Yes, we’re married, so half of my death naturally belongs to you,” Brian said.

“But... isn’t that premarital property?” she asked.

Chapter 3332

“Do you remember the documents we signed when we got married? So there’s no such thing as prenuptial property between My half, whether it’s before or after marriage, is yours,” Brian smiled.

Valda was stunned. She remembered signing a bunch of documents, but she didn’t ask what they were for. She thought they were just part of the wedding process!

But she didn’t expect that he had given her half of his property directly.

“So, this 2 billion is not all of your current assets. Just keep it well. It’s my parents’ way of showing their love, don’t think too much of it,” he said.

“Okay...” Valda still hadn’t fully processed her current net worth. She suddenly realized that she was super rich, and it felt like she hadn’t woken up yet.

After chatting with Brian for a while, Valda yawned and felt tired.

“Are you sleepy?” Brian asked.

“Yeah,” Valda nodded.

“Then you should get some good sleep now. When the baby wakes up later, you won’t be able to sleep again.” He said softly.

“What about you?” she asked with concern.

“I’m not sleepy yet. You go ahead and sleep. Your body is already weak after giving birth, and I usually don't need much sleep. If I do get tired, I'll go to sleep," he said.

"Okay then, remember to sleep when you're tired," she said, slowly closing her eyes and falling asleep.

Brian looked at Valda's sleeping face with tenderness in his eyes. "Valda, rest well. I'll be here with you."

He now feels incredibly content as he is with his beloved wife and their newborn daughter.

And he knew that all this satisfaction was given by her.

She gave him warmth and happiness, and he will spend the rest of his life loving and protecting her, making her very happy... very happy...

Grace and Lina went to the hospital to visit Valda and her newborn baby, and of course, they also brought gifts.

After seeing all the gifts, Valda couldn't help but say, "You guys brought too much stuff. Kyla and Amber brought a lot yesterday too. I don't know when I'll be able to use it all for the baby."

"This batch can't be used up, it can be saved for the next one,"

Lina joked.

Grace said, "We couldn't decide what to give, so we just bought everything. Have you picked a name for the baby?"

Valda replied, "Her name is Harley Hart. I hope she can be safe and warm like summer."

"Nice name," Grace said.

"But why hasn't the baby opened her eyes yet?" Lina walked to the baby's bed and stared at her.

The baby was moving around and sucking her fingers, but her eyes remained closed.

"She hasn't opened her eyes since birth. Brian said she'll open them in a few days. He was like that when he was a baby," Valda explained.

"I wonder whose eyes she has. Her eyelashes are long, so her eyes should be big," Lina commented, then couldn't resist picking up the cute baby.

Her own daughter was already in kindergarten, so Lina's maternal instincts were strong for newborn babies. If it weren't for the fact that newborns aren't suitable for adults to kiss, Lina would probably not be able to reset gtg the baby a few sne

"She's so cute, I wish I could have another ons, Lina avclaimed.

"Let it go, you scared your spouse half to death when you gave birth to one," Grace said.

Chapter 3333

Lina looked regretful and said, "I think Hadwin is overthinking and worrying too much. But since he is genuinely scared, I can't insist on it. Besides, to be honest, having a second child doesn't make much of a difference in my family. Most of the time, it's just like having two children."

Her future son-in-law often drops by for a visit and they even have a special room in the house just for him to stay overnight.

In that room, the future son-in-law's personal belongings are increasing day by day.

Grace and Valda couldn't help but laugh at the words.

Valda is very curious about Lina's future son-in-law, but she hasn't had the chance to meet him yet.

"When can I have the chance to meet your other child at your home?" Valda asked.

"After you finish your postpartum confinement, I'll bring my two children to visit you at your home," said Lina. "Originally, both of my children were with me today and I could have brought them over, but Grace was worried that they would be too noisy, so I didn't bring them."

"Okay, next time you must bring it to show me," Valda said.

The three of them chatted for a while, and the topic turned to the Abbott family tragedy.

After all, the three of them were aware of the tragedy that had befallen the Abbott family.

"How is Jasper doing now?" Valda asked with concern.

"Her mood is still very low," Grace said. "Unless we can find Lawrence, there's nothing we can do but wait for time to heal her."

"Can the child still be found?" Lina also asked.

Grace shook her head. "The hope is very slim. In about a week, the police will stop searching."

After all, the police will not use a large amount of manpower to search for a person indefinitely. After a certain period of time, they will stop searching.

"So, from now on, we can only rely on our own resources?" Lina said.

"Yes," Grace sighed. "But I will continue to search. No matter what, no matter...life or death, I will find him."

Sometimes, she would think that if they hadn't gone to find Lawrence, the Abbott family would still be living in poverty, but at least Wilona wouldn't have borrowed money at high interest rates to gamble, and she wouldn't have been killed.

Sometimes, a sudden change in life can make people greedy.

It was their family that changed the fate of the Abbott family.

"Since Lawrence was able to escape from those people before, I don't think it's so easy for him to die," Lina said.

"Hopefully," Grace said.

Meanwhile, in the waiting room outside the hospital room, three men were sitting. "Congratulations, you have a daughter and become a father," Hadwin said.

"Thank you," Brian said.

“What’s the baby’s name?” Jason asked.

“Harley,” Brian replied.

Jason raised his eyebrows, “I thought you would combine your and Valda’s names to make your baby’s name.”

Brian’s face showed a hint of discomfort. He had actually thought about naming his child Valda Hart. However, his parents vetoed the name, stating that it would be confusing to call out Valda and have both the older and younger children respond.

Chapter 3334

Finally, Valda took Harley.

“Harley, that’s a nice name,” said Hadwin. “I heard Valda had a smooth delivery this time. Among the few of us, your wife had the smoothest delivery, didn’t she?”

Is it smooth? Brian imagined the scene of Valda giving birth and broke out in a cold sweat for the rest of his life. At that moment, he truly understood what it meant to be powerless.

No matter how much money or power one has, it cannot replace the suffering of losing the person they love the most.

“Brian murmured, ‘I feel like giving birth is really painful for women.’”

“Yeah, but there’s no way to replace it,” Hadwin said with a heavy heart. “It’s just that it hurts so much, and yet some people still want to have a second child. With so many children, what’s the point?”

As the man with the most children present, Jason listened and smiled, “I think it’s great, more children bring more blessings.”

“Is that so? You seem to do well when competing for attention with your children at home,” pointed out Hadwin without hesitation.

Okay, favoritism is indeed a problem. Even Jason couldn’t find the words to say for a moment.

Just then, Grace and Lina brought the baby out, and Jason and Hadwin finally saw the baby.

"Come and take a look, the child is so cute!" Lina said, "So adorable! I really want to have one myself just by looking at it."

Hadwin gave Lina a look, "Don't even think about it. If you have another one, you'll be an elderly mother."

Lina was speechless, "I'm just thinking about it, I don't really want to have one." She also knew that she was getting older now, and having a child was not that easy.

Jason looked at the baby, who was chubby and strong. Compared to his own daughter when she was born, the baby looked much better.

Thinking of his own daughter being born prematurely, Jason's eyes dimmed. His daughter had stayed in an incubator for a long time before slowly recovering.

However, even so, her physical condition was still weaker than that of ordinary children, and she was more prone to illness. Even a small cold was more likely to develop into pneumonia than other children.

Feeling Jason's change of mood at the moment, Grace raised her hand and gently pulled her husband's arm.

Jason turned his head and met Grace's caring gaze. He smiled slightly.

After being married for many years, even if they don't say anything, they understand each other.

"After Valda," Jason said after a moment, looking at the newborn Harley.

"How did you figure that out?" Grace asked curiously.

"With more children, you naturally start to see the resemblance," Jason replied.

"..." Grace suddenly didn't know what to say. Why didn't she see it?

“But since the baby’s eyes aren’t open, it’s unclear whose eyes they resemble,” Jason added.

Brian’s face lit up when he heard that the baby looked like Valda.

After Jason and the others left, Brian turned to Valda and said,

“Jason said the baby looks like you.”

“Like me?” Valda was a little surprised.

“Yeah, he said the baby’s bone structure looks more like yours,” Brian said. “We just don’t know whose eyes the baby has. It would be great if they looked like yours too.”

Valda chuckled, “Don’t you think it would be a shame if your beautiful eyes didn’t get passed down to your children?”

“But me, I prefer looking into your eyes,” said Brian.

Valda felt a wave of sweetness in her heart. Although she thought her eyes were just ordinary, well... this is probably what they mean by “beauty is in the eye of the beholder”.

“If everyone was like me, then where would your genetic traits be displayed?” Valda said.

“Blood type, the child’s blood type, is the same as mine,” said

Brian.

Valda chuckled and then lowered her head, looking at the little baby in her arms. “I hope our Harley can open his eyes soon!”

She really wants to see what the baby looks like with its eyes open, and she also wants the baby to see her as its mommy as soon as possible.

Chapter 3335

On their way back, Jason and Grace brought up the Abbott family once again.

“I will expand the search range beyond Emerald City. The person who took Lawrence has not been found yet. If we can find that person, we should be able to locate Lawrence’s whereabouts.”

“Has the police found any leads?” Grace asked.

“There are some leads, but they are few. With just these leads, it’s not enough to find the person,” Jason replied.

Grace sighed, "The Abbott family's situation is also my responsibility. I knew Wilona had a gambling problem, but I didn't really help her quit. As a result, she went to borrow from loan sharks and ended up like this."

"This is her own problem, not yours. You don't need to feel guilty about it. It's like someone wants to use a kitchen knife to harm others. Should we blame the seller of the knife?" Jason said.

"Although that's what you say, but..."

"Grace, this is Wilona's own choice, not someone else's forcing her. She chose this path herself. If you feel guilty about it, how many things in life will you feel guilty about? Maybe in the future, you will be afraid to do anything, even to be kind to others, for fear that they will become greedy like Wilona. Isn't that right?"

"We helped the Abbott family, but whether they choose to do good or bad with our help is their own choice. Since they made their choice, they should bear the consequences themselves,"

Jason comforted.

"I understand. I won't dwell on it," Grace said. "By the way, is Philip and William coming to Emerald City tomorrow?"

"Yes, tomorrow. They will be staying for about a week this time. I have arranged a hotel for them," Jason replied.

"William has arrived, and Jasper's mood might improve a bit." Over the years, the relationship between the two children has been deepening. Since their own two sons couldn't help Jasper let go of Lawrence's matter, perhaps William could.

The next day, William arrived at the Reed family's place as soon as he got off the plane.

"William." As soon as Jasper saw William, he rushed forward and hugged him tightly.

For her, two friends are very important: Lawrence and William. Lawrence is currently missing, and she suddenly feels afraid that one day William might also go missing!

She doesn't want to lose any more friends.

William hugged Jasper and said, "Sorry for coming to see you so late."

After learning about Lawrence's accident, he immediately wondered how she was doing.

But Deer Capital and Emerald City are so far away, and he couldn't come by himself. So he could only comfort her through video calls and then ask his father to bring him to Emerald City.

Chapter 3336

In the video, he saw her looking sad and upset, but he couldn't do anything except say some comforting words. He couldn't hug her or stay with her all the time.

"William and Lawrence still haven't been found," Jasper choked up and said, "And... when he got into trouble, he once called me."

This is also the most heartbreaking thing for her, she didn't receive that phone call at the time.

If she answers the call, can she tell her mom and dad earlier and ask for their help to save Lawrence?

"This is not your fault, anyone can miss a phone call," said William.

Jasper choked up and said, "I want to find Lawrence. Mommy, Daddy, and the police have been looking for him, but they haven't found him yet."

"I will find out, and I will also ask my father for help," said William.

"William, thank you," said Jasper.

On that day, the Barlow family had dinner together with the Reed family, and after dinner, William accompanied Jasper to his room.

William noticed that on Jasper's desk, there was a photo of Lawrence and Jasper together.

She has very few photos with Lawrence, only a few, and this is one of them.

In this photo, she and Lawrence are looking at each other and smiling, both of them seem to be very happy.

Her smile was bright, while Lawrence, though a bit shy, smiled sweetly.

William looked at Lawrence in the photo, and the way Lawrence looked at Jasper with such affectionate eyes reminded him of himself. He must have looked at Jasper the same way.

He had a complex feeling that he couldn't quite put into words when he found out Lawrence was missing.

Once, he had hoped that if Lawrence had never appeared in Jasper's life, she wouldn't have focused so much attention on him.

He doesn't like how much Jasper cares about Lawrence, it makes him feel anxious as if Jasper might be taken away by Lawrence if things continue this way.

But despite seeing Jasper so sad and upset, he would rather have Lawrence there.

When she feels bad, he also feels bad, even worse than when Lawrence is around her.

"By the way, have you visited Auntie Valda's newborn baby?" William intentionally brought up a lighter topic.

Jasper shook his head and said, "Not yet. Mom and Dad have already gone to see the baby. They said we'll have to wait until Auntie Valda is discharged from the hospital before we can go see the baby. It might take a few more days."

"Then let's go see the baby together when the time comes. I also want to see the little one," said William.

"Okay," Jasper replied.

William intentionally shared some interesting stories and experiences he had in Deer Capital with Jasper, hoping to distract her from constantly thinking about Lawrence and feeling guilty and sad.

Meanwhile, in the living room downstairs, Philip was chatting with the Reed family.

"I didn't expect Lawrence, this child, to have such a big impact despite not knowing Jasper for long," said Philip.

"Yes, these two kids got along well, but we never expected this kind of outcome," Grace sighed.

"If that child really died, it would be even harder for Jasper to accept. But now that he's missing, it's a silver lining in a bad situation, at least giving people some hope," said Philip.

"Hope?" Jason said calmly, "They only knew each other for a few months. Jasper is still young. After five or ten years, she will eventually forget."

"That's true, but they were just friends who knew each other for a few months," said Philip. "What about you guys? After the police stop searching, do you plan to continue looking for him?"

"We will," Jason said. "We will increase manpower to search for at least a year. If we can't find him within a year, then we'll have to rely on luck."

In other words, if no one can be found nationwide within a year, the chances of finding someone afterwards are very low.

Chapter 3337

"Anyway, we should go register at the place for finding missing persons. It's just a pity that the police only have DNA data for the Abbott couple and not for Lawrence!" Grace said regretfully.

If there is DNA data available, the chances of finding Lawrence will be much higher as long as he is still alive.

After all, as time passes, the appearance of children at this age will also change significantly. Moreover, if Lawrence suffers from amnesia and forgets the past, it will be even more difficult to find him.

The DNA data, on the other hand, will not change no matter how many years have passed, making it a strong piece of evidence.

The three of them discussed some ways to find the missing person. Philip checked the time and realized it was already past 10 o'clock without him noticing.

"It's getting late, William and I should go back," said Philip.

"I'll go call out William," Grace stood up and walked towards her daughter's room.

When she pushed open the door, she saw two children lying on the bed.

Jasper leaned against William's chest, tears still streaking down her face, while William held her in a comforting embrace, as if consoling her from before.

Grace looked at the two children, and a soft expression crossed her eyes.

Their behavior reminded her of a situation from a few years ago. At that time, William had not yet returned to the Barlow family and was living with the Reed family. Jasper often slept with William and would sometimes bring him to her room or go to his room.

Sometimes fate can be so strange.

Before, she never imagined that one day Lily's child would become friends with her own child.

Her imprisonment back then was all because of Lily's selfishness.

And Lily ultimately got what she deserved for the past grudges of the previous generation. She only wanted to leave them in the past and not pass them on to the next generation.

Jasper and William getting along so well is actually really great, maybe it's even some kind of destiny.

I hope William can really make his daughter happy.

Grace approached and gently tucked in the blankets for the two children before leaving the room.

Back downstairs, she turned to Philip and said, "William is asleep now, so I think we should let him spend the night here."

"Asleep?" Philip raised his eyebrows and then smiled slightly. "Then I'll trouble you to take care of William for me."

"No problem at all. William came here specifically to comfort Jasper, and I'm grateful," Grace said.

Meanwhile, on the bed in Jasper's room, William, who should have been asleep, slowly opened his eyes and looked at Jasper, who was already asleep next to him. His beautiful dark eyes seemed to be thinking about something.

Chapter 3338

The next day, when Jasper woke up, she found William sleeping next to her and was stunned for a moment.

Although she was still young, she was already aware of the difference between boys and girls. Although she used to sleep with William when she was younger, they had hardly done so in the past three or four years.

"Um...um..." She scratched her head and for a moment didn't know how to speak, but her face turned slightly red.

William had already woken up by now and looked at Jasper's embarrassed expression. "Good morning."

"Good morning!" She quickly replied, blushing. "I'm sorry, I fell asleep hugging you last night."

William asked in a strange tone, "Why are you saying sorry? Haven't we often fallen asleep together before?"

"But... but we have grown up now. You are a boy and I am a girl, we cannot sleep together anymore," said Jasper.

William paused for a moment and asked, "Don't you like sleeping with me?"

"No, I didn't," Jasper shook her head and said. In fact, she slept quite well last night. It had been a long time since Lawrence disappeared, and she hadn't slept so well in a while. It felt very comfortable.

"Since there's no dislike, what's wrong with it? We're just sleeping together, like we did when we were kids," said William. "Anyway, Jasper, no matter when or how old you are, if you want to sleep with me, you don't have to apologize."

Jasper looked at William with a dazed expression for a while before asking, "Why?"

"We're good friends! Jasper is my best friend!" said William, but in his heart, he silently thought – because she is the most important person to him.

As long as she needs him, he can do whatever she wants him to do, no matter what it is!

After the two children finished washing up and had breakfast, one of them said, "Jasper, didn't you say that the new amusement park in Emerald City is really fun? I haven't been there yet. You said you would take me to play together last time, remember?"

Although Jasper didn't really feel like going to the amusement park, he nodded when he saw William's hopeful expression and said, "Okay, let's go to the amusement park."

She turned her head and looked at Grace, saying, "Mommy, can

"Sure, I'm free today, I'll take you guys there," said Grace. Then she caught a glimpse of a triumphant little smile on William's lips.

She immediately understood that William didn't really want to go to the amusement park, but rather it was for Jasper. He wanted

Jasper to think about sad things as little as possible, so he suggested going to the amusement park.

Grace went to the amusement park with her two children. Today, there weren't too many people at the park, which saved them a lot of time waiting in line.

Today, William is more lively than usual. He is often curious and asks Jasper what this and that are. He even makes Jasper his guide, keeping him busy introducing fun places and explaining how to use different facilities. Jasper hardly has any free time.

William and Jasper went shopping together at the amusement park's stores. They bought some cartoon-themed merchandise such as small aprons, capes, and headbands. William even convinced Jasper to wear them with him.

After putting them on, the two children looked very cute. Even Grace couldn't resist taking many photos of them with her phone.

And on Jasper's face, a smile gradually appeared.

Two children played on many amusement rides.

Chapter 3339

At noon, Grace went to the restaurant inside the amusement park with her two children to have a meal.

After ordering the meal on her phone, Grace asked her two children to wait for her at the table while she went to pick up the food.

William was flipping through some small brochures that were handed out by others in the amusement park, while asking Jasper, "What else is there to do later? Can you take me to play? I haven't had enough fun yet."

"Sure," Jasper agreed readily, then curiously looked at the small booklets in William's hands, "What are these?"

"It seems like there are some events organized by the amusement park and some companies outside," said William. "Some of these events are happening in the next few days. If there are any fun activities, let's go together. I rarely get to stay in Emerald City for a whole week."

William spoke, but did not hear Jasper's response.

He looked up and saw Jasper holding a flyer, staring at it

On the brochure, there are many cartoon characters holding different instruments and singing and dancing. The bold letters on top say, "A music feast that brings joy to children!"

This is a promotional flyer for a children's musical.

William glanced at the name of the theater company on the brochure and recognized it as a well-known company that specializes in children's plays. They have performed in Deer Capital before.

He just wasn't interested, so he didn't go see it.

Looking at Jasper's focused expression, he asked, "Do you want to go see this musical?" The date displayed was the day after tomorrow.

"Um...I want to..." Jasper replied in a low voice.

"If you want to go, then let's go together. I also want to see the musical!" William said.

But suddenly, Jasper's eyes turned red. "Before, I told Lawrence that we would go see this musical together!"

Now, the musical is finally starting in Emerald City the day after tomorrow, but Lawrence is nowhere to be found.

William's eyes dimmed. So this was their promise, he realized.

He felt a sour and uncomfortable feeling in his heart that he couldn't quite describe.

At this moment, he didn't realize that he was actually jealous!

He was jealous of Lawrence, jealous that Lawrence could have such an impact on her emotions.

"Tomorrow, I'll go with you to see the musical. Let's say it's for Lawrence, so if you find him later, you can tell him what the musical was about," said William.

He didn't want the musical to become a regret in her heart.

Since she had promised to go see it with Lawrence before, he could replace Lawrence and accompany her to see it!

Just then, Grace returned to their seats with the food and saw her daughter's red eyes. She was a bit puzzled and asked, "What happened?"

After all, it was impossible for the two children to quarrel. Basically, William would always give in to Jasper. Even if Jasper was being unreasonable, William would probably unconditionally support her and not get angry with her.

Chapter 3340

So Grace was very puzzled. She had only left for a while, so what could have happened?

Jasper didn't say anything, but William said, "I want to go see the musical with Jasper, but I don't know if she wants to."

"The musical?" Grace was stunned for a moment, then she saw the flyer for the musical in her daughter's hand.

Then she suddenly remembered that two months ago, when her daughter and Lawrence were still on good terms, they had indeed mentioned that they wanted to go see a musical together.

Because the tickets were difficult to purchase, the daughter specifically asked for her help in buying them.

Later on, the topic of buying tickets was never brought up again because of the conflict that arose between the daughter and Lawrence.

Right now, Grace said to her daughter, "Jasper, do you want to go see a musical with William?"

"I..." Jasper hesitated for a moment and whispered, "I don't think we can buy tickets now."

"If you want to go with William, Mommy will take care of the tickets," said Grace.

"Jasper, would you like to come with me to see it?" William asked earnestly.

Jasper looked at William for a while and finally nodded, "Okay...

let's go together to see it."

William smiled, and Grace gently touched their daughter's head. "Mommy will go buy tickets, and we'll all go see a musical together the day after tomorrow."

"Okay," Jasper responded.

She will go to see it the day after tomorrow, take notes, and when she finds Lawrence later, she can tell him all about the musical.

And she had a lot, a lot of things she wanted to say to Lawrence.

She wants to say to him – I'm sorry!

If only she hadn't argued with him back then, and if only she had answered his call at that time.

He lost his family, but she will treat him like family from now on!

In the evening, Jason asked Grace in their room, "Is Jasper going to see the musical with William?"

"Yeah, originally she planned to go see that musical with

Lawrence. I don't think William is very interested in that musical, but he acted interested just for Jasper's sake," said Grace.

Although William tries hard to show his interest in musicals and really wants to go see them, he is only a 10-year-old child after all. Sometimes he can come across as too deliberate, and he hasn't yet learned how to completely hide his thoughts.

In addition, Grace being a lawyer and having met all kinds of people, she can naturally see through William's intentions.

It is precisely because of this observation that one naturally understands the child's intentions towards Jasper even more clearly.

Thinking about the jokes she and her husband used to make, Grace really feels that if the two children can really fall in love in the future, having a husband like William who treats her well is also a blessing for Jasper.

"That's fine, how about the day after tomorrow? I'll accompany you guys since I'm free anyway," said Jason.

"Okay," Grace responded. "When do you think Jasper can start to lessen the shadow of the Abbott family situation?"

Although Grace never gave up on searching for Lawrence's whereabouts, deep down she knew the chances of finding him again were very slim.

"No matter how many years pass, it will eventually fade away.

Jasper is still just a child now. In the future, let's help her find some new friends, and she will naturally forget about Lawrence over time," said Jason.

"Is it really that simple?" Grace doubted.

"But some people will be remembered in the heart for a lifetime," said Grace.

"Do you think Lawrence has the ability to be remembered by Jasper for a lifetime?" Jason said skeptically, "He's just a kid who plays the piano well. But in the future, Jasper will meet many more geniuses who play the piano even better than Lawrence. Even if she doesn't forget Lawrence, she won't be so sad and heartbroken like this again."

"Is it really true?" Grace doubted.

However, only time can verify this kind of thing.
