

Ex Convict 4271

Chapter 4271 Seeking help from the Quentin family

Adele didn't say anything else because she understood that at this point, there was no way to salvage their already-ended marriage.

"Can Chandler really lure out the gu?" she asked, worried.

"I will go to the Quentin family again," Mr. Hunter, who was silent just now, suddenly spoke up.

"The Quentin family?" Colin was surprised. "But the Quentin family..."

Like the Hunter family, the Quentin family kept a low profile. However, due to Chandler's connection with Tina, the Hunter family gradually started to make appearances. On the other hand, the Quentin family remained even more mysterious.

The Quentin family excelled in medicine and possessed many secret techniques that were not widely known. Even in this era of advanced medicine, the Quentin family still held a special position among the Crypt families, indicating the extent of their medical prowess.

The relationship between the Quentin family and the Hunter family in the Crypt family was not good, but it wasn't bad either.

However, convincing the Quentin family to help Chandler lure out the gu wouldn't be an easy task. Even if the old Mr. Hunter personally intervened, given the Quentin family's eccentric temperament, they might not agree to help.

"What if the Quentin family refuses?" Colin expressed his concern.

"I will offer conditions that the Quentin family would be willing to accept," the old Mr. Hunter said.

Upon hearing this, Colin couldn't help but be taken aback. It seemed that obtaining the Quentin family's agreement would require a considerable price to be paid.

But for now, to save Chandler's life, they had no other choice.

"Then I will accompany you to the Quentin family," Colin said.

"No need, I can go by myself!" the old Mr. Hunter said.

At this point, whether Chandler could be saved might depend on the Quentin family.

Tina learned from her parents about the compensation terms proposed by the Hunter family for their divorce.

What surprised her was that her parents had agreed to all of them.

Lina explained, "Quinn will spend four months with the Hunter family when she grows up. I know that you won't bear to be the Hunter family are not harsh! And..."

functions proposed by

"Mom, I understand!" Tina said. "I just didn't expect that my divorce would cause such a loss for you!"

"It's just money," Hadwin said. "We're doing all this just to truly live happily."

At that moment, Tina didn't feel happy. When Chandler signed the divorce agreement, it felt like a piece of her heart was also empty!

It was already a month later when she saw Chandler again.

At the Hart family's banquet, Tina saw Chandler.

The Stephenson family, the Hunter family, and the Hart family all had a good relationship, as they were familiar with each other.

After Tina returned to Emerald City, the Hart family visited her several times. Despite losing her memory, Tina got along well with Harley and felt like she was a lovely sister.

Today was Harley's birthday, so the Hart family naturally invited relatives and friends to celebrate. It wasn't strange for Tina to see Chandler here.

To her surprise, Chandler today looked thinner than the last time she saw him, with a paler complexion. He appeared somewhat sickly.

Wasn't he only tired and not seriously ill when he was hospitalized last time? So why did he look like this now?

Tina couldn't help but wonder.

Chapter 4272 The Look of Loving Someone

For a moment, Tina just stared blankly at Chandler not far away. Everything around her seemed to be overshadowed by him, leaving only Chandler in her eyes.

As if sensing her gaze, Chandler, who was originally chatting with someone, turned his head and looked in Tina's direction.

Their gazes met in an instant!

At that moment, Tina felt her heart pounding vigorously.

But after a while, Chandler averted his gaze, as if it had merely swept past a stranger.

At this moment, the words he said to her in the hospital flashed through Tina's mind.

So now, does he see her as a stranger?

Apart from matters concerning their daughter, do they have no relationship anymore?

Tina always felt like there was a void in her heart.

Tina continued to watch Chandler, standing motionless in place.

Perhaps she had been staring for too long, as people around her started looking in her direction!

The gazes of those around her assessed the situation between her and Chandler.

Many people knew that she and Chandler had divorced, so the looks from the crowd toward the two of them were somewhat strange!

Lina and Hadwin were originally chatting with Brian, but when they unintentionally witnessed this scene, Lina instinctively wanted to go forward but was stopped by Hadwin.

"This is the children's matter. Don't go, Tina has to face it alone!"

"But..." Lina looked at her daughter standing there dumbfounded under the gaze of the crowd, looking at Chandler, but Chandler seemed to not have seen her at all and didn't look at his daughter.

This situation made Lina, as a mother, feel very sad.

"This is Tina's own choice, no matter what, she has to face it. Even if you can help her this time, can you help her forever?" Hadwin said. "Besides, if she really has no feelings for Chandler, then she wouldn't feel upset."

"What if she feels upset?" Lina asked.

The way our daughter is now, she doesn't seem indifferent no matter how you look at it.

Hadwin said, "If that's the case, it means she does have feelings for Chandler, she just doesn't realize it."

"Then..."

"No matter what, it's something she has to deal with on her own," Hadwin said.

When it comes to our daughter's feelings, he doesn't want to interfere. But after our daughter makes a decision, he will be her support and protect her from all storms.

Fortunately, at this moment, Harley walked up to Tina and said, "Tina, are you looking at Chandler?"

Harley's approach helped Tina snap out of it and finally resolved the awkward situation.

The people around shifted their gazes away.

Tina looked at Harley and nodded.

"Did you really divorce Chandler?" Harley asked again.

When she asked this question, her eyes were clear, purely asking this question, not like many others who ask such things just to know gossip.

"Yes, we divorced," Tina said.

"But you clearly still like Chandler, Why did you get divorced?" Harley asked in confusion.

Tina was taken aback, "You misunderstood, I don't remember anything from before. I divorced him because I didn't have feelings for him anymore."

"But the way you looked at Chandler just now, it was clearly the look of someone who likes him," Harley said.

Chapter 4273 Eavesdropping in the Garden

Tina was shocked.

Was she looking at Chandler with the gaze of someone who likes him?

Like... that can't be!

Even if she had some liking for Chandler in her heart before, after knowing his true intentions in approaching her, she no longer likes him!

"You misunderstood, Maybe it's just because he was someone I liked before I lost my memory, but I don't remember anything from the past anymore," Tina said. "I don't want to be bound by past feelings."

Harley couldn't help feeling sorry for Chandler, "But in that case, isn't Chandler pitiful? He loves you so much."

Tina remained silent, does he love me? Unfortunately, Chandler's feelings for her are not pure love, It's hard to say who is more pitiful between her and Chandler now.

Harley seemed to realize his rudeness and quickly said, "Tina, I'm sorry, I didn't mean to say you shouldn't get a divorce, I just..."

"I understand." Tina smiled faintly, "I'm going to take a breath in the back garden."

"Then I'll accompany you," Harley said.

"You are the protagonist of the party today, don't accompany me. I'll take a breath and come in later." Tina said, walking towards the back garden.

The meticulously maintained garden, although it was night, was not pitch black because of the many hanging lamps and lamp posts placed in the garden. Instead, it gave a different beauty than during the day.

Tina walked into the garden, the silence here was different from the hustle and bustle in the hall, which allowed her to relax a little.

Maybe because she and Chandler both attended this party today, she could always feel many gazes on her.

Even those people whom she might have been familiar with before.

But for her now, most of these people could be considered as strangers whom she had only met a few times.

Just as Tina was looking at the scenery in the garden, suddenly footsteps could be heard not far away.

Tina frowned, turned around, and hid in a dark corner nearby.

At this moment, she just wanted to be quiet, she didn't want to greet anyone, nor did she want to face the various strange gazes of others.

Originally, she thought that the person would quickly pass by, but when the footsteps got closer, they stopped.

Then a young man's voice rang out, "Have you really decided to have no more involvement with Tina?"

Tina's body suddenly stiffened, could it be that among the people who came, there was...

"Yes!" When the familiar voice sounded, Tina's body couldn't help but tremble.

It was Chandler!

"If she helps, the curse on your body can be easily resolved, but you actually plan to bypass this shortcut, it really makes people puzzled."

"I don't want to force her."

"So you got a divorce?" the other person sneered, "If it were the old Tina, after knowing your situation, I don't know if she would still divorce you."

"She wouldn't," Chandler said in a low voice.

The other person's voice carried a hint of surprise, "She wouldn't? Does the old Tina know about the curse?"

"Yes, she knows," Chandler said with a nostalgic smile on his lips. It was really good back then.

"If a person loses their memory, they lose their emotions as well. It seems like her feelings for you aren't really strong," the person continued.

"Lornell, don't say that. It's because I'm not good enough," Chandler said softly.

Chapter 4274 If you love someone, you will understand

"Lornell, I never realized before that you are this kind of person," Lornell said. "I always felt that you were the one in control in your relationship with Tina, but now it seems like Tina is the one in control."

Chandler didn't say anything, he just lowered his head and looked at his hands.

On his middle finger, he used to wear their wedding ring even when she was missing.

But ever since he signed that divorce agreement, he took off the wedding ring.

And in that moment of taking it off, it felt like something was being stripped away from him, painfully so.

"But even if you ask the Quentin family to help you extract the curse, even my grandfather doesn't have a hundred percent certainty," Lornell continued.

"I know," Chandler said.

His own grandfather went to the Quentin family himself. He also heard from Lornell that the two grandfathers had a long discussion in a secret room and finally came out.

His grandfather agreed to personally extract the curse from his body, but the price was that the Hunter family had to leave behind all the records of the curses and the worms in the Quentin family.

This meant that the Quentin family would know the secrets that originally belonged to the Hunter family.

"If the extraction fails, the backlash you will suffer will be severe. Even if the Quentin family can save your life, it may cause irreversible damage to your body," Lornell said.

After learning about the Hunter family's curse, he was shocked for a long time.

After all, such things seemed too vague and unreal in modern times, like a story.

But this story just happened to exist, and it happened to the person he had known since childhood.

"I know," Chandler said with a faint smile. "Since I've decided to ask your grandfather to help me extract the curse, I'm mentally prepared for the worst outcome. However..."

"However, what?"

"If it fails and my body suffers severe damage, I hope that the Quentin family can keep it a secret and not tell the outside world the reasons behind my injuries, especially Tina."

You really care about her. Even though you're the one suffering for her, why don't you just have a child together? It would have been so simple," Lornell mocked.

"A child shouldn't be born for such reasons. A child is not a tool," Chandler said. "Besides, Tina doesn't owe me anything. It has always been me who has gained more from Tina."

"I don't understand why you can do this for Tina to such an extent," Lornell said, puzzled.

"Do you love Harley?" Chandler suddenly asked.

"What?" Lornell was taken aback.

"If you truly love Harley, then you would understand why I went to such lengths," Chandler said.

Lornell frowned, "I don't need to love Harley, I just need to fulfill my duties as a fiancé. Besides, if I'm destined to get married and have children to continue the family line, then I'll just find someone who I find pleasing to look at."

"Is Harley just someone you find pleasing to look at?" Chandler questioned.

"What else?" Lornell retorted.

"But it was you who specifically asked her to be your fiancée," Chandler reminded him.

"At that time, I just wanted to know what it feels like to have a fiancée, and she happened to need the Quentin family to save her life. So, it was a fair exchange of conditions," Lornell admitted openly.

Chapter 4275 He knew she had heard

"But matters of the heart are never fair," Chandler said, looking at Lornell now, he somehow felt a sense of familiarity, "Lornell, don't take everything for granted. If you love Harley, love her wholeheartedly. If you don't love her, then don't hold her back. Harley is a good girl, worthy of being loved."

Lornell furrowed his brow, "Chandler, you don't need to concern yourself with what happens between Harley and me."

In other words, he hoped this topic would be dropped.

Chandler smiled, understanding the unspoken meaning behind Lornell's words, "I just hope you won't end up like me in the future."

"Of course, I won't be like you," Lornell said, "I won't sacrifice myself to fulfill others, and I certainly won't torment myself like you have all in the name of so-called love."

Chandler looked at Lornell's youthful face, but some things are easier said than done. If matters of the heart were so easily controlled, there wouldn't be so many unrequited loves in this world.

Just then, Harley's voice came, "Lornell, come over here for a moment!"

Lorne left-first.

"By the way, have you seen Tina? Where did she go? She said she was going to the garden to get some fresh air!" Harley's voice came again after a moment.

"No, it was just Chandler and me in the garden," Lornell replied, his voice fading away.

Tina, hiding in the shadows, breathed a sigh of relief. It seems she hadn't been discovered.

However, Chandler, who was in plain sight, suddenly stiffened.

His face changed, and after Lornell had walked away, he surveyed the garden and suddenly said, "You heard, didn't you?"

Tina's body became tense. She heard Chandler's voice again, "Whatever you heard earlier, don't pay it any attention!"

After saying these words, Chandler's footsteps could be heard leaving.

Has Chandler left?

Tina suddenly emerged from the shadows, but Chandler was nowhere to be seen!

The backyard was empty, with only her in it.

AS Tina returned to the hall, Harley approached her: "Tina, where did you go just now? Couldn't find you anywhere!"

"I was just taking a walk," Tina replied, her gaze instinctively searching the hall for Chandler's figure, but he was nowhere to be found.

Harley leaned in and asked, "What are you looking for?"

"Nothing," Tina replied uneasily.

"If you're looking for Chandler, he's already left," Harley said.

"He's gone?" Tina froze.

"Yeah, it seems Chandler wasn't feeling well, so he left early," Harley said.

Tina pursed her lips, thinking about his previous hospitalization. Her mother had said that ever since she went missing, Chandler had been tirelessly searching for her, neglecting his own health in the process.

Could it be that he hasn't fully recovered yet?

Tina was absent-minded, her mind filled with thoughts of Chandler and the conversation she overheard in the garden. today.

When the birthday banquet ended, Lina was about to take her daughter home when Tina suddenly let go of her mother's hand. "Mom, I have somewhere else to go, You and Dad go ahead."

Where else do you want to go?" Lina asked.

"I have something to do, I want to go ask Chandler!" Tina took a deep breath and said.

Yes, she wanted to get some clarity!

Chapter 4276 Seeing another side of him

Tina arrived at Chandler's residence.

She had been here many times with Chandler since she lost her memory, so it wasn't unfamiliar to her.

She pressed the doorbell, but there was no answer.

However, she could see the lights on inside the house from outside, so Chandler should be in the villa.

Was he refusing to open the door because he knew it was her outside?

At the thought, a bitterness welled up in Tina's heart.

What should I do? Should I continue ringing the doorbell? Or...

Suddenly, she faintly heard a hoarse roar coming from inside the house.

But then it disappeared.

4

As if the roar she had just heard was just an illusion.

But a wave of unease surged in Tina's heart.

Hesitating for a moment, she placed her thumb on the fingerprint recognition of the keypad lock.

If Chandler hasn't reset the pa*sword lock...

Ding! The lock made a sound, indicating that it was unlocked.

Tina breathed a sigh of relief. Luckily, Chandler hadn't reset the pa*sword lock, and her fingerprint still worked to open the door.

She rushed into the house.

As soon as she entered, the suppressed roar became clearer.

What's going on?

Is that Chandler's voice?

It sounded like he was desperately suppressing something, as if in pain.

The lights in the house were on, but she couldn't see Chandler anywhere.

Where could he be?

She searched for Chandler room by room, and when she reached the third floor of the villa, she suddenly stopped.

The sound seemed to be coming from this floor.

She hadn't been to the third floor when she came to the villa before.

1

She had asked him what rooms were on the third floor, and he had casually said they were just storage for some old items.

So is he on the third floor now?

Tina hurriedly climbed the stairs, heading towards where the sound was coming from.

Finally, she stopped at the doorway of one of the rooms.

Chandler's voice was coming from this room!

As she placed her hand on the doorknob of the room, there was a moment of hesitation, as if opening the door would change something, and make things different.

It was like a forbidden door that flashed before her.

God, what is she thinking!

Tina couldn't help but make fun of herself, and then she forcefully turned the knob and pushed the door open.

The roaring sound suddenly became incredibly clear, and everything that came into view made Tina freeze in the doorway.

Everywhere she could see upon opening the door were her photos, big and small, in all kinds of poses, hanging on the walls, while Chandler was lying on the ground, curled up, his hands clawing at the floor, emitting pained and suppressed roars from his mouth.

It was as if he was engulfed in extreme agony at that moment.

What on earth is going on?!

Tina was shocked, and Chandler, who was originally lying on the ground, seemed to sense something and suddenly struggled to raise his head, crawling towards her.

His once handsome face was now contorted in pain.

"Tina... Tina..." he repeatedly called out her name, his eyes fixed on her without moving.

She stood still in place until a force suddenly pulled her!

When she snapped out of her daze, she found herself tightly embraced by him!

Chapter 4277 Who is Crying

He held her so tightly that she could hardly breathe.

"Chandler... Chandler!" she shouted, struggling to push him away.

But he held on too tightly, and she couldn't push him away at all!

"Tina... Tina..." he kept softly calling her name, "I'm in pain.. Tina... I'm in so much pain..."

Pain? Tina instantly understood, seeing his appearance just now, he looked very distressed.

"Let go of me first, I'll take you to the hospital right away!" Tina said.

But Chandler didn't loosen his grip, instead, he held Tina even tighter.

Low, hoarse roars kept entering her ears from his mouth.

"Chandler, you..."

Before Tina could finish her sentence, his lips heavily landed on hers, silencing the words she hadn't finished saying.

Tina froze, instinctively wanting to turn her head and avoid this kiss.

But his lips firmly held onto hers, swirling and sucking, deepening the kiss.

She didn't know how long he had been kissing her, only feeling his breath enveloping her entire body.

Just as she felt like she was suffocating, his lips finally left hers. She gasped for air, and his lips trailed down her neck, sucking on her neck and collarbone...

Suddenly, Tina felt his hands tearing at her clothes.

No, she couldn't let this happen!

If this continued, it would...

A sense of instinctual panic spread through her body.

"No!" she yelled, struggling even harder.

But her feeble resistance was too weak in front of him.

Right now, he was like a wild beast. No matter how she screamed or struggled, he remained indifferent, following his instincts to possess and claim her.

Because only then could he feel less pain.

Not enough... he wanted more...

The pain had driven him completely insane.

This pain was like being trapped in a desert of flames, no matter how he struggled, he couldn't escape. His whole body burned as if every drop of blood was evaporating.

But suddenly, it was as if a source of water appeared, so comforting that it made his soul tremble.

The body's instinct drove him to desperately reach for this source of water, to want more.

But suddenly, there were faint cries, faintly reaching him.

Crying... who was crying?

Why did these cries make him feel so unbearable? It was suffocating, even more than the pain of being engulfed in flames.

Stop crying, please stop crying!

He kept shouting in his mind. The suffocating feeling was like waves of cold air, constantly sweeping over him, briefly awakening him from that intense agony.

These cries... were Tina's cries.

Chandler struggled to open his eyes, using all his strength. With trembling hands, he propped himself up and looked at Tina, who was beneath him, her face filled with tears.

Tina was crying...

Her tears kept streaming down her cheeks, so many tears that it almost took his breath away.

He had once vowed to himself never to make her cry again!

But now, he had made her cry once more!

Chapter 4278 Let Her Leave

"I'm sorry..." Chandler croaked, using all his remaining restraint to let go of Tina. "You go... close the door and go far away, don't come near me..."

He struggled to speak, his mind and body silently fighting each other.

His body desperately longed to be close to her, because being close, holding her, would alleviate the pain in his body.

But that instinctive impulse was not limited to just holding her.

Tina looked at Chandler with teary eyes, thinking that he might have regained some normalcy. Instead, she saw him suddenly struggle to stand up and stumble towards the framed picture hanging on the wall. He forcefully smashed the frame.

Tina was stunned, but then she gasped in disbelief as Chandler reached out with his bare hands to grab the broken glass from the shattered frame!

The sharp glass immediately caused his hand to bleed profusely, staining his entire hand crimson.

"Chandler... what are you doing?" Tina's voice trembled.

"Tina... you leave, I won't stay clear-headed for long..." he struggled to say.

Now he could only use this pain to fight against the instinct in his body, to make himself stay clear-headed for a little longer. "Go... close the door... pretend you didn't see anything..."

"What's going on with you? I'll call for emergency help..." Tina said, reaching for her phone.

"No!" Chandler interrupted. "It's a curse from the witch... I'll be fine in a while... no need to go to the hospital... you... just don't stay here, I'll lose control and hurt you... go! Just go!"

In the end, his voice had become almost voiceless and hoarse.

Tina stood still, in a daze.

Chandler felt the desire in his body intensify. Wherever she stood, it was like a silent temptation.

The blood in his veins seemed to be shouting, wanting to possess her!

Suddenly, Chandler rushed towards Tina and firmly grabbed her wrist.

Tina snapped back to reality, panic flashing in her eyes.

She had been absent-minded just now; she should have left as soon as possible!

But now, being held by him like this, she couldn't leave....

Just as Tina was about to struggle, Chandler dragged her out of the room. Then, in the next moment, his voice intermittently rang out.

"Leave! I'll be fine, so... you absolutely must not open this door..."

As his voice fell, he released her wrist, the door slammed shut, and Tina was left outside alone.

Tina looked at the closed door, still faintly hearing Chandler's agonized screams from inside.

And on her wrist, there were bloodstains, his blood!

Although she had escaped a disaster, why did her heart feel heavy, with no sense of relief? There was only worry!

What would happen to him?

He said it was a curse from the witch, a so-called curse that would cause him such agony?

For the first time, curses and witchcraft became clear concepts in front of her!

Chapter 4279 Mutual Concerns

Can curses and witchcraft really cause such unbearable pain in people?

She had never known that one could be in such excruciating pain.

How long would he have to endure this kind of pain? Tina stood outside the door, constantly listening to the faint screams of agony coming from the other side.

Her body seemed to be filled with a wave of pain.

It was Chandler who was supposed to be in pain, so why was she feeling it too?!

The sensation of pain seemed to be getting stronger and stronger, stabbing at her heart.

Tina stood dumbfounded at the doorway of the room, feeling the waves of pain wash over her.

Chandler didn't know how long he had been in pain. He had passed out at one point due to the pain but then woke up again because of it.

The room was a mess, the blood on his palms had dried up. The pain from the wounds slowly brought him back to consciousness and reminded him of what had happened last night.

Yes,

his most vulnerable state.

this room, Witnessing

And last night, he had almost disregarded Tina's wishes and forced himself upon her!

Thankfully, he hadn't!

Chandler lowered his gaze to his palm covered in wounds. He had pierced his palm with broken gla*s yesterday, managing to push Tina out of the room just enough to maintain a shred of sanity.

If he had truly ignored Tina's wishes and forced himself upon her, he would never forgive himself!

Chandler took a deep breath and opened the door, stepping out of the room.

He needed to freshen up and tend to the wounds in his palm.

But in the next moment, he froze in shock.

Tina was leaning against the wall next to the door, her eyes closed, as if she had fallen asleep.

Why was she still here?

Why hadn't she gone back to the Stephenson family and stayed here instead?

www

Could it be that she...

Chandler suddenly felt anxious and quickly crouched down to check on Tina, afraid that something might have happened to her and she had pa*sed out.

Tina was startled awake by Chandler's actions.

"Chandler?" Tina looked at him and softly called his name.

"How are you?" Chandler anxiously looked at Tina. "Are you feeling unwell? I'll take you to the hospital now!"

"How about you?" Tina asked in response. "Are you still in pain? Oh, your hand..."

She suddenly reached out and grabbed his wrist, then saw the scars in his palm!

Tina's face turned pale in an instant. While she had thought that his wounds might be severe from grabbing the gla*s barehanded and losing so much blood, she was still surprised by the extent of the injuries in his palm!

"How did it get so serious? You...you..." The rest of her words got stuck in her throat, and tears kept rolling down her cheeks.

"I'm fine, it's just a minor injury. It looks worse than it actually is!" Chandler quickly explained.

Tina choked up, looking at him with teary eyes. "Back then, you were in so much pain, why did you still...?"

was almost losing my sanity at that time, and the parasite inside me was craving you. If I didn't do that, you might have been..."

Tina almost instinctively tried to say it was okay.

Chapter 4280 Her Discomfort

But she couldn't say it, choked up with emotion.

Is it really okay?

Does it mean that she would rather have S with Chandler in that way than see his hand injured so severely?

"Anyway, let's go to the hospital to treat your hand injury as soon as possible," Tina said, regardless of whether it was a curse or a hex, she wanted him to take care of the wound first before dealing with everything else.

As she spoke, she took the lead and walked forward, but after a few steps, she realized that Chandler wasn't following her.

"What's wrong with you? Come on!" Tina said.

"Are you going to the hospital with me?" he looked at her and asked.

"Of course!" she replied confidently.

Chandler pursed his lips. "Actually, you don't have to accompany me. I can go by myself..."

"How are you going to drive with that hand, besides, my car is parked outside!" Tina said. "I'll drive you to the hospital!"

After saying that, she headed downstairs directly!

go

he car, Tina took out her phone, opened the navigation, and selected a nearby hospital before starting the car and driving towards the hospital.

"So, you can drive," Chandler said softly.

"Hmm, I already had a driver's license. Even though I lost my memory, I didn't forget how to drive. I took driving lessons with an instructor for two weeks, so there shouldn't be any problem," Tina said.

Chandler lowered his head.

He used to know everything that happened to her.

"

But now, they were separated, and he knew nothing about the changes she went through and what happened to her.

"Why did you come to my place yesterday?" Chandler asked.

"I heard from Harley that you weren't feeling well and left early, so I came to check on you," Tina said.

But after saying this, she felt a strange sensation.

It was as if she was saying that she cared about him.

If he were to ask her about it later, how would she answer? Tina's mind started racing, trying to come up with the right response.

However, to her surprise, Chandler said, "Like I said before, you can treat me as a stranger."

Aller hearing what he said, Tina was taken aback for a moment, and then she pursed her lips and said, "Anyway, we have Quinn between us. We can't be strangers!"

The car arrived at the hospital, and the two got out and came to the emergency room.

When the doctor saw the wound in the palm of Chandler's hand, he took a sharp breath, "Why did you come to have it treated only now? We need to clean the wound quickly!"

Tina stood by, watching the doctor clean Chandler's hand and the blood that had stopped started to seep out again.

The sight of the bloody scene made her feel pain, and even more so for Chandler, who was experiencing it.

But Chandler didn't show any signs of pain on his face. Instead, He gently comforted Tina, "It doesn't really hurt that much. You don't have to stand there and watch. You can sit on the chair outside and take a break."

Why is this man always so gentle? Tina looked at the man in front of her and felt an inexplicable affection in her heart. "If only I had brought you to the hospital last night in time."

That way, he wouldn't have to endure this second round of pain.

"Tina, what happened last night was my own doing. You don't need to blame yourself. Besides, you drove me to the hospital today, and that's already a great help," Chandler said softly.