Chapter 4291 Tina's Decision

"Because you deserve to be loved, I don't want to easily give up!" Valda said.

All the past hardships and challenges have now turned into sweetness.

In this lifetime, her marriage is very happy, and now, she only hopes that her daughter can also have a happy marriage.

Brian gently kissed Valda.

Even after so many years of marriage, his feelings for her have become even stronger.

"Valda, I love you!" he whispered.

He didn't know how many times he had said these words, but for him, it was still the most genuine expression from the bottom of his heart.

He wanted her to understand how much he loved her!

And he wanted her to know how happy he was now.

"I love you too, very much," she responded.

Cue when they both have white hair in the future she will still Valda leaned against Brian's embrace, thinking this way.

Tina arrived at the Hunter Group building and informed the staff that she wanted to see Chandler.

The staff naturally recognized Tina and immediately made a phone call through the internal line.

After a short while, the staff personally escorted Tina into the elevator and thoughtfully pressed the floor button.

If Tina hadn't insisted that the staff didn't need to accompany her, they probably would have entered the elevator together.

Alone in the elevator, Tina looked at the constantly changing floor numbers, and her mood became anxious.

She was about to meet Chandler in a moment, and she had something to say to him...

The elevator arrived at the floor, and Tina stepped out.

The secretary was already waiting at the elevator door and immediately said, "Miss Stephenson, please follow me!"

In the company, some executives and those close to the CEO already knew that he had divorced his wife, so now they naturally referred to Tina as Miss Stephenson.

Tina followed the secretary to the door of the CEO's office.

The secretary pushed open the door, and Tina walked in.

Chandler was in his office, and as soon as he saw Tina enter, he stood up and asked, "Would you like something to drink?"

"No, thank you," Tina replied.

Chandler then asked the secretary to leave.

The secretary closed the door, and there were only Tina and Chandler in the office.

"Do you have a reason for coming here? I remember I mentioned before that since we're divorced, I hope we can avoid seeing each other as much as possible," Chandler approached Tina and said.

"I came today to talk to you about something," Tina took a deep breath and said, feeling more anxious at this moment.

"You have something to tell me?" Chandler raised an eyebrow slightly, "Is there something we haven't clarified between us?"

"I want to have another child with you," Tina said.

As soon as this statement came out, even though Chandler had always been very composed, he showed a shocked expression, "What?"

"I mean, I want to have another child with you!" Tina repeated.

Chandler's expression became unpleasant, "Why?"

"The curse of the Hunter family brings you too much pain, and it's also dangerous to invoke the witch. I've thought about it for a long time, and it seems like having another child is the least risky and relatively safest choice," Tina said.

She had been thinking about this for days, and now that she was in front of him, it meant that she had made up her mind!

Chapter 4292 Why

Chandler looked at Tina in shock, "What did you say?"

"I said, I want to have another child with you to remove the curse of the witch on you!" she said, "Of course, it would be through artificial means, in a reliable hospital. The technology for artificial conception and childbirth is quite advanced nowadays."

This is also the safest and most feasible method!

It was a decision she had thought about for a long time.

But to her surprise, he directly refused, "I don't need it!"

Tina was shocked this time: "Why isn't it necessary? Wasn't it because of the Gu worms that you were in such pain? You even planned to take the risk of asking the Quentin family to help you lure out the Gu worms!"

He looked at her and asked, "Do you love me?"

"What?" Tina was stunned, never expecting him to suddenly ask such a question.

"Do you love me?" Chandler repeated.

She pursed her lips and hesitated for a moment before

"So, you don't love me now, right?" he asked.

"Yes," she replied.

His gaze became dim, and even though he knew that her lack of love was the answer, hearing her give a definite response still pierced his heart.

"You once said that a child should be the product of two people in love, not born to save someone's life," Chandler said. "Moreover, what kind of criticism will this child face if born? The child will be born after we divorce, and it will inevitably attract rumors. And if the child grows up and knows the reason for their birth was not because their parents loved each other, how will they feel?"

Chandler sighed and continued, "Quinn has faced our divorce since birth, and there are too many things that cannot be changed. I feel guilty towards Quinn for not being able to give her a complete family. So, if we know we can't provide a complete family for the child but still choose to have them, it would be too cruel for the child!"

Therefore, he would never agree to this matter, no matter what.

"But if the child knows they were born to save their own father, maybe they won't think as you said. Even if we divorce, you will definitely be a good father to the child!" Tina said.

Chandler said bitterly. "Ting. I don't plan to have a child with using this method and for this reason."

"Then do you plan to die? Or do you plan to bear a great cost when the Gu worms are lured out? Maybe your body will collapse, maybe you'll be disabled. Have you thought about the consequences?!" Tina shouted anxiously.

"I won't die. Even if there may be some cost when the Gu worms are lured out, it won't be too terrible. You can rest assured," he said calmly.

“But I don’t want to see you suffer, I don’t want to see anything bad happen to you!” she said.

He looked at her, “Why? You should hate me, because I’ve been deceiving you all along, hiding the truth about the curse and the insects, that’s why I’ve been by your side. You filed for divorce because you couldn’t bear the deception, right? So why now, would you rather have a child with me, than see me in trouble?”

Chapter 4293 No Divorce

Tina was stunned for a moment.

Yeah, why?

She had asked herself the same question.

When she saw him suffering so much from the curse, all she could think about was how to make him feel better.

She even forgot about his past deception and the fact that she should hate him.

“I don’t want to see the person I used to love suffer like that.” After a long while, she gave this answer.

He smirked and laughed, “You said it yourself, it’s just ‘used to love’. Since you don’t love me anymore and we’re divorced, we have no relationship besides Quinn. So my affairs have nothing to do with you!”

His words were another rejection.

“It does matter!” Tina took a deep breath and looked directly at him. “We are not divorced, you are still my husband!”

“What?” His response was like thunder, shocking Chandler.

Tina bit her lip. “Yes, we are not divorced yet. I haven’t

Chandler took a long time to speak. “Why haven’t you submitted the papers?”

“I don’t know.” She awkwardly admitted.

But that was the truth. She really didn’t understand why she hadn’t submitted the papers, considering that she was the one who wanted the divorce!

Perhaps it was because every time she thought about their divorce, she felt a sense of emptiness in her heart. She was afraid that she would regret it!

If her memories were to return in the future, she might regret divorcing him!

As Chandler looked at Tina in front of him, his emotions gradually calmed down.

“Tina, you don’t want me to be affected by the curse anymore and want to have another child to lift the curse. I appreciate that. But I don’t want to have another child just because of that. It would make me greedy and give me false hope. It would make me selfish and take away things I shouldn’t take.”

“You probably don’t know how much self-control I need to ignore you when you appear in front of me, and how much self-control I need to have a calm conversation with you as if nothing happened. It’s a delicate balance that I have finally managed to maintain, and once it’s broken, I don’t think I can do it again!”

Tina listened in astonishment. She didn’t expect Chandler to say such things.

“So, you’re restraining yourself even now?” she asked in surprise.

“Yes,” he replied. “Every time you appear in front of me, it feels like a test. So I hope you can try not to appear in front of me as much as possible.”

Tina suddenly felt a pain in her heart when she heard his words. This pain seemed to be growing stronger.

So it hurts so much when he keeps rejecting her.

“In that case, don’t restrain yourself!” The words blurted out.

He was stunned. “Did you understand the consequences of what I just said?”

“I understood!” she said. “So I think, since that’s the case, let’s try to start over. Just this once, without any more lies! Don’t be nice to me or treat me gently just because I can lift the curse for you!”

Chapter 4294 Rejection

“Start over?” Chandler was shocked.

“Yes, start over!” Tina said with great certainty. At this moment, she suddenly became nervous, holding her breath, and waiting for his answer.

Chandler looked at the person in front of him, and time seemed to stand still.

Once, after her amnesia, they had also talked about starting over, but that ended with a divorce.

Although she didn’t submit the papers in the end, they were still legally married.

But for him, it was already over. He had even figured out how to live his days without her.

And now, she was suggesting starting over again...

Could they really start over?

If he agreed now, then...

He slowly raised his hand and reached towards her face.

Tina's eyes flickered, but she didn't avoid his hand. However, when Chandler's hand was about to touch her face, it stopped.

It was as if he was struggling. After a long time, his fingers slowly curled up and he withdrew his hand.

"I'm sorry, I don't want to start over with you." He made his decision.

Tina was stunned. "Why?"

"To me, marriage and divorce are not a joke. Even though we signed the divorce agreement back then, even though we are still legally married now, we are already divorced in my mind." Chandler said, "I appreciate your good intentions. I know you want to save me and make me feel better, that's why you suggested starting over. But..."

Chandler paused, looking at her with a heavy gaze. "I don't need sympathy and pity. Have you forgotten who I am? I am from the Hunter family, I don't need this kind of sympathy!"

Tina was shocked. Yes, he was the heir of the Crypt families – the Hunter family.

That represented immense wealth and power behind him!

Men like Chandler naturally have their pride.

However, he has always been gentle in front of her, never showing his own pride, and sometimes even humble.

To the point where she forgot about this.

you came today, and I think you understand too. If there's nothing else, please leave. I have a lot of work to do," Chandler said.

Tina bit her lip, wanting to say something else, but not knowing what to say!

When she walked out of Chandler's office, she felt a heavy feeling in her heart, as if something was weighing her down, and yet it also felt like there was an empty corner, making her want to grasp onto something to fill it, but not knowing what to grasp.

Why is it like this?

Even though she was nervous while waiting for his answer, she never thought that he would actually refuse.

But he did refuse!

This seems to be the first time he has truly refused her request since she lost her memory.

Before, no matter what request she made, he always agreed, always smiled, and said "Okay."

Even when she asked for a divorce, he agreed so gently!

And now, when it concerns his life, he refuses!

Chapter 4295 Still liking the same as before

Tina almost walked out of Chandler's company in a daze. When the driver wanted to drive her back, she said, "I want to take a walk by myself."

She wanted to catch her breath, otherwise, she felt like she was suffocating.

Tina walked along the road, while the driver slowly followed in the car behind.

Just as Tina reached a shopping mall, suddenly a voice rang out: "Tina?"

Tina turned around and saw Eugenia not far away, waving and shouting at her.

Eugenia... that was her friend before she lost her memory!

But after losing her memory, she took a leave of absence from school, and her contact with Eugenia decreased a lot.

Eugenia approached and looked at Tina, saying, "Are you shopping alone? Are you feeling better?"

"I've recovered almost completely." Tina said, "But it's not really alone, there's a driver following behind."

Eugenia looked towards the car not far behind Tina and guessed that must be the car following her.

"Then why are you walking here alone?" she asked.

"I just wanted to catch my breath," Tina said.

"Then let your driver wait at the parking lot of the mall, and we can go shopping together and chat. It's been a long time since we went shopping together!" Eugenia said.

"Alright." Tina agreed and made a call to the driver in the car.

After a while, the driver drove towards the parking lot of the mall, and Tina entered the mall with Eugenia.

Eugenia first took Tina to the entrance of a beverage shop: "By the way, can you drink now? You used to really like this shop's drinks."

"Really? I liked this shop's drinks?" But she didn't have any memory of it.

"Yes, especially the peach flavor," Eugenia said.

"Then let's order a cup," Tina said.

After a while, Eugenia and Tina each held a cup of drink.

Tina took a sip, the rich milky taste with a hint of sweet peach flavor, it was indeed delicious. No wonder the old her liked to "How is it, the taste is good, right? Do you like it?" Eugenia asked.

"I quite like it," Tina said.

Eugenia smiled: "Just as I thought. I always felt that since it's something you used to like, even if you lost your memory, as long as you experience it again, you will like it again. After all, you're still the same person, your preferences and tastes should still be the same!"

Tina froze and stared blankly at the drink in her hand.

Even if she lost her memory, would her preferences and tastes still be the same? So if it was someone she used to love, even if she lost her memory, would she love them again?

"By the way, you seem quite down today. What happened?" Eugenia asked.

Tina pursed her lips and didn't directly answer her friend's question. Instead, she said, "Eugenia, did I really love Chandler?"

"Of course you did, you asked that a long time ago." Eugenia hesitated and asked, "By the way, there are rumors online saying that you and Chandler got divorced, is it true or not?"

Chapter 4296 Can't Forgive?

Tina pursed her lips, looking at Eugenia in front of her.

This was her friend. Although she had amnesia and couldn't remember their friendship, she could still sense that Eugenia genuinely cared for her!

So, she didn't want to deceive Eugenia in this matter.

"I've already signed the divorce agreement, but I haven't submitted the documents yet, so technically, we're not divorced!"

Upon hearing this, Eugenia widened her eyes. "So, you're really going to divorce him?"

It was obvious that Tina was the one who initiated the divorce. After all, based on Eugenia's understanding, how could Chandler, who loved Tina so much, want a divorce?

"I don't know," Tina smiled bitterly.

Eugenia frowned. "What do you mean you don't know?"

"I was the one who suggested the divorce. When we signed the agreement, I really wanted to divorce him. But..." Her voice trailed off, and her gaze fell on the drink in her hand. "After signing the divorce agreement, I hesitated. It's like I couldn't bear to get divorced."

"Is it because you have feelings for Chandler? Even though you have amnesia, you've spent time with him. Maybe during this time, you've already started liking him, or even falling in love with him," Eugenia said.

Tina froze.

Falling in love? Did she fall in love with Chandler again?

"Why do you have that expression? It's like I said something unbelievable," Eugenia said angrily.

"Chandler is the kind of man that it's easy to fall in love with, you know? You should know how many women are longing for him. Men who are rich, handsome, and loyal like him are hard to find nowadays.”

“Doesn’t it matter to you that he lied to you?” Tina asked.

Having heard Tina’s question, Eugenia seemed to have already known what happened. “Did Chandler deceive you, and that’s why you suddenly decided to divorce him?”

Tina remained silent, not giving an answer.

But her silence was enough to tell Eugenia the answer.

Eugenia pondered and said, “Tina, did Chandler’s deception harm you?”

“...” Tina hesitated. Although he had kept the fact that he was by her side because of a curse hidden from her, he hadn’t actually harmed her in any way. He had never forced her to have a child to break the curse.

Even today, when she had voluntarily mentioned having another child, he had directly refused!

“If it didn’t harm you or the people around you, then I think it can be forgiven,” Eugenia said. “After all, who hasn’t lied in their life? Many people have, including me. Have you never lied about anything?”

Tina didn’t know how to reply for a moment.

Eugenia continued, “At least, Chandler’s kindness towards you is genuine. That day, when you were swept away by the current, he risked his life to save you. If it wasn’t for the people around him forcibly holding him back, you might not have seen him today!”

Speaking until this point, Eugenia couldn’t help but sigh. “Tina, sometimes I envy you. To be loved like that by a man. He can love you even at the cost of his life. Can’t you forgive his deception?”

Chapter 4297 Purpose

Tina remained silent. After bidding farewell to Eugenia, she returned to her car.

Deception... Chandler did deceive her.

But ultimately, he didn’t harm her.

Perhaps from the beginning, his deception was to gain her favor so that he could marry her more smoothly in the future.

However, in this process, she only accepted his efforts without having to give anything in return.

And the videos and photos she had seen from the past also showed how good he was to her.

Could this kind of deception really not be forgiven...?

When Eugenia said that, Tina already had an answer in her heart.

At night, Tina entered the nursery. The nanny in the room respectfully approached her when she saw Tina enter and said, "Miss Stephenson."

"How is Quinn?" Tina asked.

"Quinn is very well-behaved. She just finished feeding and fell asleep not long ago," the nanny replied.

Tina approached the edge of the crib, bending down to look at the peacefully sleeping little one.

This little child had suffered more hardships than other children in this world.

Quinn's features resembled both her and Chandler. Looking at Quinn, she would think of Chandler.

What was her mindset when she insisted on marrying Chandler before even graduating from college? And why did she become pregnant with Quinn?

Was it a moment of loss of control? An accidental pregnancy? Or was it intentional?

Was it to help Chandler break the curse as soon as possible, so she became pregnant with Quinn?

No one could tell her the answer.

Tina sat down on the chair beside the crib, silently watching her daughter, determined in her heart.

The next day, when Chandler was about to finish work, his secretary suddenly called on the internal line. "Mr. Hunter, Miss Stephenson is here and wants to see you."

Tina?

Chandler paused for a moment, didn't she just come yesterday?

"Let her in," he said.

"Yes," the secretary responded, ending the call.

Moments later, Tina pushed open the office door and walked in alone.

"Why are you here?" Chandler asked.

"You'll be off work soon, let's have dinner together," Tina suggested.

Chandler frowned slightly, "Why would we have dinner together?"

"Can't a husband and wife have dinner together?" she retorted.

"We've already signed the divorce agreement," he said.

"But we're not officially divorced yet."

"Tina..." he couldn't help but sigh, getting up and walking towards her, "What do you really want? Just say it."

"I want to go to the restaurant I used to like, have the food I used to enjoy. I want to know if I still like it now!" Tina said, "Yesterday I ran into Eugenia, she said I used to love a certain drink. I ordered that drink yesterday, and it was still delicious."

As she spoke, she took a step closer to him, getting even closer.

"Chandler, you probably know the old me better than anyone else, you probably know some of my preferences better than my own parents. So it shouldn't be difficult for you to find a restaurant I like and order some of the food I used to enjoy."

He pursed his lips, "Is that all?"

"Yes," she nodded. Of course, that was just one purpose. There was another...

Chapter 4298 Confirming Something

Tina stared at Chandler intently, "A meal, will you agree?"

After a moment of silence, Chandler finally said, "Okay, wait a while, wait for me to finish work. You can wait here or outside."

"I'll wait here," she said, taking the initiative to sit on the nearby sofa.

Chandler didn't say anything more, he walked back to his desk and sat down, resuming his work.

Tina sat on the sofa and took out her phone. On the surface, she looked like she was checking her phone, but in reality, she was secretly watching Chandler.

He probably wouldn't have thought that she was so nervous just now, afraid that even for this meal, he would refuse.

The way Chandler treats her now is different from before.

Since signing the divorce agreement, she could feel him constantly creating distance between them.

It's as if he's deliberately trying to downplay her existence.

After the divorce, this should have been expected, but strangely,

Is it because she really has feelings for Chandler?

Or is it that even if she lost her memory and forgot about her past with Chandler, she still subconsciously loves him?

So when they really separate, she feels lost, feels uncomfortable, and thinks of him more and more,

Even when she sees him tormented by the curse, she feels sorry for him, and she would be willing to have another child with him to break the curse!

Just as Tina was lost in thought, Chandler's voice suddenly sounded, "Have you seen enough?"

"Huh?" Tina was taken aback, only then did she realize that she had been lost in thought, and was caught red-handed peeking at him.

"I've seen enough," she said in embarrassment, quickly lowering her head to look at the pages on her phone, trying to ease the awkwardness.

Chandler didn't say anything more, he continued reviewing the documents in his hands.

When he finished reviewing all the documents, he stood up and said, "Let's go."

"But it's not time to get off work yet," she said, there was still half an hour before she got off work!

"It's okay, let's finish dinner early so we can each go home earlier," he said.

Upon hearing this, Tina felt a sudden pang in her heart.

For him now, is having a meal with her already a task?

Suppressing the sting in her heart, she smiled and said, "Sure, let's go."

Chandler drove and took Tina to a restaurant she used to love before her memory loss.

When the two entered, the waiter came up to them, obviously recognizing them, "Mr. Hunter, Miss Stephenson, good evening, please follow me."

The waiter led them to a window seat. From this position, they could overlook a panoramic view of the neon-lit night, which was beautiful and spectacular.

But for the current scenery, she did feel a sense of familiarity.

"Did I often sit in this seat before?" Tina asked.

"Hmm," Chandler responded, instructing the waiter to give the menu to Tina first. "You go ahead and order, I'll add on later."

"No need," Tina said. "You order, just like how you used to order based on my preferences. I want to know if I still like what I used to like."

Chandler looked at her in confusion but didn't say anything. Instead, he ordered based on her past preferences.

Chapter 4299 I Like You, Chandler

Soon, the food was served.

Tina looked at the unfamiliar dishes in front of her.

She hadn't tasted these dishes before, but she had a feeling that they would be delicious.

Was it because her body still remembered these dishes? Tina wondered to herself as she picked up her fork and tasted the food.

Indeed, the taste was quite good.

Tina tasted each dish one by one. They all suited her taste and she ate more than usual.

After finishing the meal, she looked at Chandler, saying, "You really know me."

Chandler raised his head slightly. "After all these years of being together, of course, I know about you."

Tina smiled.

"What about drinks? What kind of drink do I like? You didn't order any drinks, did you?" Se curiously asked..

She felt like there should be drinks with today's meal.

oli used to like ordering a cocktail, but you've only recently recovered from your illness, so it's better not to drink alcohol," Chandler said.

"With my current condition, one drink is fine as long as it's in moderation," Tina said, "What kind of cocktail do I like? Help me order!"

He frowned, but ultimately went along with her request and ordered a cocktail for her.

The drink was a mixture of red, pink, and deep blue, looking quite beautiful. Tina took a sip. It was sweet, not like alcohol, more like juice.

"This drink is quite tasty. What's it called?" she asked.

"Blue Promise," Chandler replied.

"Blue Promise?" Tina gently swirled the gla*s and took another sip. "A blue rose is a promise to stay together. Did I like the name of this drink in the past?"

Chandler stared at Tina.

She had said these words before: "A blue rose is a promise to stay together, Chandler. I like the name of this drink."

She had no memories of the past, yet she said the same words again!

"Yes, you liked the name of this drink," he whispered.

Tina drank her cocktail while resting her head on her hand, looking at Chandler.

"It's true that you will like the things you used to like again. Even if you lose your memory, your body still remembers that feeling," she said softly, raising her hand to continue drinking.

His hand reached across the table and held hers. "Don't drink anymore, you'll get drunk."

"At least I'm not drunk yet," Tina said. "But I can stop drinking. Will you finish this drink for me?"

He pursed his lips, then took the drink from her hand and finished it in one go.

"Alright, the drink is finished, and it's about time. Let me take you back," Chandler said, getting up and walking around the table to Tina's side.

He extended his hand to support her, afraid that she might be unsteady on her feet due to the alcohol. In response, Tina leaned on Chandler as they walked out of the restaurant.

"By the way, you've also been drinking. How are we going back later? Shall we take a taxi?" Tina asked.

"I arranged for the restaurant to provide a driver," Chandler said.

Tina was surprised. You can have the restaurant find a driver for you?"

"This restaurant is partly owned by the Hunter family," he explained.

That's how it was. Suddenly, she came to a halt and looked up at him seriously. "Chandler, the things I used to like, I can like them again. Not just the drink and the food we have today, but also the people around us."

"What?" he froze, only hearing her say, "I like you, Chandler!"

Chapter 4300 Rejection

His body stiffened suddenly, his gaze fixed on her. After a while, he finally spoke. "You're drunk."

"I'm not drunk, I'm very clear-headed!" Tina said. "I drank because I was afraid that if I didn't, there are some things I wouldn't be able to say smoothly!"

She reached out and hugged him. "Chandler, I don't want us to end like this. Since I once deeply loved you, I will still fall in love with you, right? I knew all your kindness before had a purpose, and I was angry, so I decided to divorce you, but now I regret it a little."

She regretted being so impulsive in asking for a divorce.

She regretted not thinking more at that time.

Although he had a purpose, he never harmed her, always just cared for her, protected her, and even loved her!

His gradually intensifying love for her can be seen in those preserved video recordings!

That kind of love cannot be pretended!

But at that time, she was blinded by anger and never thought about whether his love for her was real or fake.

"Chandler, let's get back together, okay?" Tina mustered up the courage to say.

He pursed his thin lips tightly, his deep black eyes fixed on her for a long time before he said, "Why are you suddenly saying these things to me?"

"Huh?" She paused for a moment, "Because I realized that I like you, maybe even love you. Even if I forgot our past memories, it's only natural for me to fall in love with you again, just like how I loved you so much before."

"Because you love me, you want to have a second child with me, right?" Chandler said softly.

Tina blinked, "If that's what you're saying, then yes, I do want to have another child with you." It's only natural that it would be best for the child if they loved each other.

She wanted to help him lift the curse sooner. Seeing him in excruciating pain during the curse attacks shocked and pained her.

There were even times when she dreamt of him in that state.

She wanted to approach him, to make him feel less pain, but she couldn't even get close to him, she could only watch him suffer helplessly.

That feeling of powerlessness, even after waking up from the dream, still deeply imprinted itself in her body, causing her extreme discomfort.

Chandler looked at Tina in front of him and suddenly smiled faintly, "Tina, you're truly kind."

"What?" Tina's eyes flickered with confusion.

"Is it because you want to save me? You don't want me to use dangerous methods like summoning the curse, so you're willing to have another child in this way? Do you think that if you say you love me, I will agree to have this child? But Tina..."

Chandler slowly pulled Tina's hand away from his body, "I don't want your sympathy or pity, and I don't need you to say you love me like this, so I won't be with you. I reject your proposal."

After saying this, the car arranged by the restaurant had already arrived in front of them.

Chandler opened the car door, let Tina get in, and then sat beside her before giving the driver the address of the Stephenson family mansion.
