

First Love 48

Chapter 48 Jinlan's First Visit to the City

Lizhen's mother felt that she was wrong because she was an educated person and could understand things more quickly.

"How are you? Are you feeling better?" Lizhen had finished vomiting, but her face was still a little pale. Seeing Lizhen in such pain, Wang Kun felt particularly uncomfortable and distressed. He hurriedly poured some water in a cup and handed it to Lizhen.

"Oh, I feel much better after vomiting. Mom, please don't blame Wang Kun. It's my daughter's fault. Wang Kun has urged me many times to go back and finish the wedding, but I always want to finish things and wait until I have enough time, so the wedding has been delayed again and again until now."

Seeing her daughter in so much pain, Lizhen's mother looked at Wang Kun and felt that she was being a little unreasonable. "Stop talking and take a rest. Mom will buy some carp and make some soup for you to see if you feel better." After that, she got up and left to go to the supermarket to buy carp.

Carp contains calcium and iron, so it is especially suitable for pregnant women in the early stages of pregnancy. When you cannot eat too much carp in the late stages of pregnancy, carp can also cure vomiting in early pregnancy.

"Mom, you rest at home. I'll go buy it. You stay at home and talk to Lizhen." Wang Kun immediately went to the supermarket to buy carp.

Looking at Wang Kun leaving, her mother felt that she was sorry for this sensible and filial son-in-law. Alas, it was time to change her old rules and calendar.

"I'm back." Wang Kun quickly bought the carp. Li Zhen's mother quickly opened it and saw a lively, fresh and beautiful carp. "I was worried that you wouldn't know how to buy it and would buy the wrong fish."

"I grew up fishing in the river, and I know all kinds of fish." Lizhen's mother looked at Wang Kun as if she was getting to know him all over again. She thought silently in her heart that this son-in-law was really good, so she went to the kitchen to make carp soup for Lizhen.

"My mother heard that you are pregnant and may come in the next few days." Wang Kun quietly told Lizhen after Lizhen's mother left.

"Why did you tell her so quickly? Look, I'm the only mother who knows about it, and we'll be embarrassed. Now two mothers are here, and they'll tear us apart." Lizhen was very anxious. She was afraid that Wang Kun's mother would not allow them to have a child now like her own mother.

"No, my mother was very happy to hear that. She even brought a lot of food for you to replenish your nutrition." Wang Kun was very excited when he spoke, as if he was the mother.

Maybe it's just as the old man said, the mother-in-law will be especially happy to hear that there is a grandson, adding to their family. She will not blame her son and daughter-in-law, but she may keep these things to force quarrels with the daughter-in-law in the future.

But your mother is different. No matter how she beats and scolds you when she is angry, she is just angry. After she calms down, she will feel sad whether the beating hurts you or whether you are hurt anywhere. She beats the child, but the pain is in her heart. Lizhen is an example. Later, Lizhen and her mother-in-law had a dispute over the child. The mother-in-law treated her as a pigtail in her hand and often held her tightly, which became the fuse that separated Lizhen and Wang Kun.

"Lizhen, my mother's train is about to arrive. I have to go and pick her up." Wang Kun just got up and hurriedly put on his clothes.

"Then I'll get up and go with you to pick up mom." Li Zhen dragged her tired body to pick up her mother-in-law. "You'd better not go. You're still so weak. Mom won't blame you if you don't go. You're a hero in our Wang family." Wang Kun didn't forget to joke with Li Zhen.

"You are so idealistic, hero. Maybe your mother doesn't even know how to scold us like this." Lizhen was still worried that her mother-in-law would oppose their pregnancy before marriage like her own mother did.

"Don't worry, I'll take care of my mom. I promise you that my mom will never say anything bad about you." Wang Kun made a face and smiled evilly, because when he was on the phone he heard his mother's joy and excitement when she heard that Lizhen was pregnant.

"Okay, go quickly, don't let mom get anxious when she can't find you when she gets off the bus." Lizhen saw that Wang Kun was so determined. She hadn't washed up yet, and she was afraid that it would be too late, so she didn't force her. However, before her mother-in-law arrived, Lizhen was still worried that she would blame herself like her mother did.

It is better to arrive at the right time than to arrive early. Wang Kun had just arrived at the train station when the train his mother was on arrived. Wang Kun came to the exit, stretched his head out and raised it high. He was afraid that his mother would be anxious if she couldn't see him. He waited and waited but almost all the people exiting the station had left and he still didn't see his mother. Did his mother go to the wrong exit?

Thinking of this, Wang Kun immediately became anxious, and he hurriedly explained the situation to the staff at the train station; "Comrade, I beg you to do me a favor. This is the first time for my mother to take this train here and it is also her first time to come here. Now everyone has left the station, but I haven't seen my mother. Can you let me go look for her?" Wang Kun was so anxious that beads of sweat kept streaming down his forehead.

The staff saw that Wang Kun was handsome and gentle, and did not look like a bad guy. Especially when they saw that he was sweating from anxiety, they allowed him to go in to find his mother. But Wang Kun turned around several times and there was no sign of his mother. Wang Kun was very anxious. This was the first time his mother had come out of such a long way and had never been here before. She was illiterate. What if she got lost? It was all my fault. I didn't think of it. I shouldn't have let her come here alone. I'm such a fool.

When Wang Kun was at a loss as to what to do, he suddenly heard his name being called over the radio at the train station. "Wang Kun, Wang Kun, please come to the station office. Your mother is waiting for you here."

Wang Kun was so excited that he almost cried when he heard his name being called. Mom, you are really a courageous woman. You actually have the courage to go to the office at the train station to look for someone.

It turned out that it was the first time for Jinlan to travel so far away. When she heard that Lizhen was pregnant, she was so happy that whole night. The next day, she ran to the market early and wanted to buy everything in the market and bring it home. Wang Kun told her that she could not bring any living things on the train. Then she went back home and fried, stir-fried and cooked. She prepared for the whole night and was excited all night. After all, it was her first time to be a grandmother.

The next day, Jinlan was packed with bags, with no free space on her shoulders or hands. When she arrived at the train station to get on the train, everyone looked at her strangely, looking at this woman with bags on her shoulders. It was the first time for Jinlan to go out so far away, and everything she saw was surprising and new. Along the way, her mind and eyes were busy, wanting to take in everything she saw.

When the train arrived at the end, Jin Lan was still immersed in the beauty of nature. When she saw everyone getting off the train with their suitcases, she came back to her senses. She immediately hurriedly packed her things, but because she had too many things and the train only stopped for 10 minutes, and because it was a passing train, the train was about to start before she could pack her things. How could this be? "Wait, I haven't got off the train yet." In a panic, she hurriedly picked up her things and packed them down.

Wow, why is this place so big? The crowds coming and going at the train station made her eyes dizzy. "Wang Kun, Wang Kun, where are you? Why don't you come to pick up your mother?" But she didn't know that the people who came to pick her up could not come in and had to stand outside. Looking at the crisscrossing elevators and the crowds of people coming and going, she felt a little flustered and at a loss. Suddenly she didn't know what to do. Why is this place so big? She wanted to ask these people coming and going, but could they understand what she was saying? She tried to ask a young girl, but no one could understand her after she talked for a long time because the Mandarin spoken at home was not standard. The girl had to shake her head and left.

What should I do? At this moment, she suddenly saw a staff member with a wide-brimmed hat. She thought this must be a policeman. Police officers serve the people and he will definitely tell me. She immediately plucked up her courage and hurried to greet him. "Hello, police officer." The staff member saw the anxious look on the face of a woman carrying large bags. He thought she must have encountered some difficulties, so he stopped quickly.

"Sister, I'm not a police officer, I'm a staff member here, do you need help?"

"I'm looking for my son, he came to pick me up, but I can't find him." Because Jin Lan's Mandarin was not standard, the staff took a long time to understand what she said.

"Sister, your son should be waiting for you at the exit. If you want to go out from here, your son will see you."

"But she said she would wait for me. If she didn't come, I wouldn't know how to go find her," Jin Lan said with tears almost coming out.

"Don't worry, I'll take you out to find your son." Jin Lan was very lucky today. She met a particularly responsible staff member, who immediately took her to the exit, but when they arrived at the exit, there was no one there because Wang Kun had already gone in to find Jin Lan.

"Is your son not here yet?"

"No, my son understands and he will definitely come."

"Then we'll take you to the broadcasting room and ask the announcer to broadcast for you to find your son."

"That's great. I feel like I have met a living Bodhisattva today. Thank you, comrade." Jin Lan clasped her fists and bowed to express her gratitude to the staff member. Seeing Jin Lan's expression, the staff member was a little moved. The farmer friends are so simple and sincere.

"Mom, you made me look so hard. You really are the heroine in my heart." Wang Kun ran breathlessly and sweated profusely.

"Come on, son, come and thank this police comrade." Jin Lan hurriedly pulled Wang Kun to thank the staff member.

"Mom, they are not police officers, but they serve the people just like the police comrades," Wang Kun told his mother sincerely and walked towards the staff member with a smile.

"Thank you, comrade. If you hadn't brought my mother here today, she wouldn't know how to do this." Wang Kun immediately came to the staff member and held his hand tightly.

"You're welcome. This is what we should do. You should take your mother back soon. Parents are so loving. Your mother brought so many delicious food for you to eat." He pointed to a pile of packages brought by Jinlan.

"Mom, I told you not to carry so many things. It's so tiring." Wang Kun blamed his mother and felt particularly heartbroken when seeing this.

"Let's go back. Lizhen was also going to pick you up. I saw she was too tired, so I asked her to rest at home. You must have been waiting anxiously."