Chapter 1241 Has Nothing To Do With Her

"I've been straining my eyes. Perhaps I'm having allergies." Cooper tousled the girl's hair while saying, "Go on home with Mr. Sullivan."

"How about you?" Amanda asked. "Aren't you here to pick me up?"

"I need to talk to Ms. Yerton."

Hearing this, Amanda turned to look at Tiffany in front of the school gate. She huffed, "Uncle Cooper, you're such a jerk. How can you still think of Ms. Yerton when you already have Aunt Sally? No wonder Aunt Sally doesn't want you anymore."

She rolled her eyes at Cooper and stomped away angrily.

Cooper massaged his temples. After regaining his composure, he took out his phone and texted Tiffany, inviting her to grab dinner together that night.

Then, he got back into his car and leaned on the seat.

Approximately five minutes later, Tiffany came over. Cooper unlocked the car door.

Cooper's cold gaze fell on her. "I don't want to listen to your assumption. With my status now, I can eliminate you with a lift of my finger. Delete the video from your phone and leave Jadeborough tomorrow morning."

He didn't give Tiffany a chance to speak and warned in a frosty tone, "Don't try anything funny with me. If the video is leaked one day, I will hunt you and your family down even if you are abroad and teach you a lesson in person."

Shivers ran down Tiffany's spine. She did not doubt the legitimacy of Cooper's words.

For the sake of her family and herself, Tiffany relented and deleted the video she stored in the cloud storage.

Resentment festered in Sally as she hissed, "I believe in karma. Sally made a deal with me but failed to keep her promise—"

"Shut up!" Cooper interjected her with a menacing look.

Considering the fact that Tiffany was the two children's teacher and that the traditional medicine practitioner she found saved Amanda, Cooper wrote a check and threw it to her.

Armand raised his hand and beckoned Cooper over to him, then whispered something into the latter's ear.

Cooper slid his glasses further up his nose bridge as he looked at Armand dubiously. "I doubt she's so stupid that she'd fall for that."

"Hard to say." Armand chuckled dryly. "We'll circle back to this. I meant to tell you that Eurydice and Yuvan are getting married on the thirteenth."

"You're seriously going to let them get hitched?" Cooper had expected Armand to come up with a different plan.

"Well, yeah," Armand replied. "Their scandal is national news, and everyone's watching the Zeigler family. At this point, marriage is their only way out."

Cooper rubbed his temple wearily. "I kind of feel sorry for Yuvan."

Yuvan's and Eurydice's wedding would take place at a resort in Baykeep. Given their fathers' backgrounds, nearly half the bigwigs in politics and the military showed up.

The event was at the peak of festivities, even though there was no press around.

Beatrix and Eurydice were cousins, so it was no surprise that the former and her family showed up at the wedding, too.

Half an hour later, with the invited guests as witnesses, Yuvan and Eurydice exchanged wedding rings and completed the matrimonial ceremony.

Rebecca sauntered up to Armand, beaming as she said, "Hey, there's someone who wants to see you."

Armand did not think too much of this and simply let Rebecca lead the way.

They walked out of the little garden where the wedding was held and followed the cobblestone path that led up to the hotel. There, Armand saw a woman standing in front of the fountain at the main entrance.

The woman wore a pale pink velvet dress, and her dark, wavy hair was pulled into an elegant updo to reveal her delicate nape.

She might be standing with her back to him, but Armand recognized her silhouette immediately, and his eyes went wide the moment realization dawned upon him.

Could it be?

It was only after he reached the end of the cobblestone path that he realized Rebecca had quietly disappeared.

Slowly, Armand made his way over to the fountain, then came to a halt when he was a few feet away from the woman.

Cooper could only tell the person was a woman since she was enveloped in Armand's embrace and wearing his jacket.

Thus, he stormed over to them angrily and undid his cufflinks to make it easier for him to punch the man. "What do you think you're doing? Are Genev and I dead to you?"

He approached Armand and was about to punch the latter when the woman in Armand's embrace pried his arms apart and showed her face.

"Coop."

Cooper was shocked. His fist stopped mid-air, and he stared at Genevieve unwaveringly, like he had seen a ghost. "I thought you were still in a coma?"

"I woke up a long time ago and asked the nurse to play along and put on an act with me," Genevieve replied, laughing mischievously.

Cooper parted his lips to speak but was unable to utter a word when he looked at her. However, he was finally able to heave a sigh of relief.

Genevieve walked over to him and gave him a hug.

Stunned by her actions, he stiffened up for a while before relaxing again.

He wanted to reciprocate the hug but decided against it when he felt Armand's cold gaze on him. Rolling his eyes, he put his arms down.

"I'm still here," Armand said.

Genevieve went straight to the wedding venue right after returning to the country. After leaving the hospital, she went to the airport with Armand to fly back to Jadeborough.

Half an hour later, the plane smoothly took off from Baykeep Airport.

Genevieve turned away from the window and hugged Armand. "It's been a long time since I've seen Luc and Mandy. Have they grown taller?"

"Yeah, they've gotten quite a bit taller. Luc is growing very fast."

Armand caressed Genevieve's hair with one hand and picked up his phone with the other.

He had asked Cooper to send him the photos of the children he had taken every week while they were away.

His photo album was full of Genevieve and the kids.

Genevieve checked the most recent photos. "Mandy is getting more and more adorable. Her cheeks are so chubby. I wasn't as cute as her when I was a child."

"If you weren't a pretty child, how would you compliment me." Genevieve lifted her head to and whispered into her ear, "Mrs. Faulkner, pressed the screen against his lips. Armand chuckled. "I asked what you wanted to eat, and you said anything is fine. I was afraid you'd go hungry, so I made some pudding to satiate your hunger first. Besides, red velvet cake is not easy to make!"

Genevieve snorted in response. "I don't care. You're biased! No wonder they said daughters will always have a special bond with their fathers. I don't want to be your wife anymore."

Genevieve inched closer and embraced Armand as she said coquettishly, "I want to be your daughter too. Is that okay, Daddy?"

Armand almost could not resist the urge to ravage her when she came onto him suddenly that way.

If they weren't in the kitchen and somebody could walk in any time, he would have done it with her.

The past few months had been hard for him. It wasn't easy for him to suppress his desires for such a long time.

Armand bent down and kissed her lips aggressively. As he did so, he could taste the lingering sweet scent of strawberry ice cream on Genevieve's lips. The temptation was too strong for him to stop.

After a while, Armand reined in his urges and pulled away, but soon reached into her sweater and pinched her waist as punishment.

Genevieve sat in the backseat with the kids while Armand drove. The woman fed Amanda an ice cream puff on their way back.

Amanda nestled in her mother's arms while she savored the dessert, swinging her legs happily every once in a while.

She could not help but ask, "Mommy, will you be leaving again?"

"I've fully recovered, so I won't be going anywhere. Daddy and I will stay with you guys every day from now on. How does that sound?" Genevieve said gently as she pecked Amanda on the cheek.

"That's awesome!" Amanda nuzzled her mother's face.

The girl missed her mother so badly after being separated from her for a long time. She couldn't stop asking Genevieve whether the latter missed her. All of a sudden, she recalled something.

"Mommy, Aunt Jojo is pregnant!" she chirped.

Genevieve was not up to date on many matters since she had just taken an over-ten-hour flight to fly back to the country.

After hearing what her daughter said, she was surprised. "Is that so? Since when is she pregnant?"

"How does the nest look? Is it good?" Genevieve showed the end product to her daughter.

Amanda was painting the fake eggs. She turned around and looked at the bird's nest in her mother's hand, and her shoulder slumped in disappointment.

"Mommy, it should be a bird's nest, not a box."

"It is a bird's nest," Genevieve said matter-of-factly. "I even laid some cotton inside it. The whole bird family will move in if we put the nest on the tree."

Amanda pouted. "Mommy, have you seen any birds live in a box before?"

Genevieve looked at Lucian, who was sitting across the desk. He had made a vivid bird. She turned to Amanda again and saw the realistic bird eggs made of painted pebbles.

On the contrary, the bird's nest in her hand looked like crude craftwork with no aesthetic appeal.

Amanda waved her hand dismissively. "Forget it. Mommy, you can go and have fun. I will finish the craft with Lucian."

Armand hummed a response. His hands went under Genevieve's knees to pick her up from the couch.

On the way upstairs, seeing that there was no one around, Genevieve kissed and nibbled on the man. Armand almost lost his marbles, struggling to contain his desire.

When they were in the bedroom, Armand threw Genevieve on the bed and showered her with kisses.

Genevieve almost couldn't catch her breath. She regretted provoking a hungry beast that had been craving her for months.

She knew she would be screwed if she did not do something to quench the beast.

When the man finally broke contact to catch his breath, Genevieve panted heavily. "Mando, I just got off a ten-hour flight. I smell bad."

"I don't think so." Armand nibbled at her neck. He said in a low croak, "You smell good."

His passionate kisses trailed down Genevieve's body and stoked up the fire in her heart.

Armand was being particularly patient in unwrapping this special present. He was worried that he would hurt Genevieve for being too rough, but Genevieve wished he could just lose his restraint and be more aggressive.
