

Chapter 14 He's a madman

A black SUV was parked in front of Eagles Villa.

Two bodyguards took Lauren towards the car, and she clutched Robert's clothes with a grip, her teary eyes swollen.

"Robert, I was wrong, I shouldn't have drugged my cousin, please spare me this time!"

Robert was unmoved.

Lauren continued, "Adam Shaw will kill me, please don't give me to him, for the sake of the time we had, please?"

"You better pray that Julia is okay, if she is not, not only Adam Shaw will kill you, I will too!" Robert said viciously.

Lauren heard his appalling voice and her heart tightened.

"No, it's impossible, did you forget that after I saved you, you said that you would never hurt me, that you would love me and protect me for life..."

She used her last ounce of strength to grab Robert, "Look at my hand, it's still covered with scars. If it wasn't for me saving you, my dream of pianist wouldn't have been shattered."

Robert looked at the scars on her hands and his eyes trembled slightly.

Ten years ago.

A rival company of the Ace kidnapped him for a cooperation project.

He was rescued by Lauren after he escaped with severe injuries.

At that time, he was in a coma, and Lauren would play the piano for him every day to soothe him.

After that, he woke up and she never played the piano again.

Because her hand was ruined during the kidnap when her hand tendons were picked off, although she recovered in time, she never played the piano again, and she had panic attacks every time when she touched it.

"Robert, have you forgotten the time when I played the tune for you to be able to sleep peacefully every day?" Lauren looked at Robert's slightly changed face and continued.

The two bodyguards paid attention to Robert's expression and did not dare to forcefully pull Lauren again.

Robert waved his hand and the two men retreated.

Lauren's heart fell to her chest.

"Lauren, I'll let you off this time, but this is the last time, and we are over. Don't you ever appear in front of me!"

This was his last mercy, not to Lauren, but to the little girl who took good care of him and played the piano for him every day.

Lauren was afraid that Robert would regret it and left in a hurry.

After all, with a man like Robert who treated his wife so badly, she dreaded to think what he would do to her when he learned the truth!

She never played the piano.

Eagles Villa was empty.

Even though Lauren restored everything, Robert could not find the slightest trace belonging to Julia.

Long after she signed the divorce agreement, Julia moved out of the place, and nothing was left behind.

"Julia, where the hell have you been?" Robert looked at the lonely and cold home as if he was experiencing for the first time the mood of Julia waiting for him to return every day.

He picked up the phone and called David.

On the other end of the phone, David's tone was cold and hard: "You've already destroyed the Smith family, what else do you want now? Destroy the Preston family? Let me remind you, Natalie Preston is the last of Julia's relatives."

"I didn't call you for this," Robert said coldly.

David's eyes darkened when he heard it: "Do you really want to dig her parents' tomb?"

From Robert's bad behavior, this matter was entirely possible. He was a madman.

David continued, "I tell you, if Julia hadn't pleaded with her parents, just because you defiled their daughter, you would have died a thousand times!"

Robert frowned: "What do you mean?"

David's mocking voice came over the phone, "When the Smith family was in its prime, you thought they needed to force you to take responsibility for Julia?"

"If Julia hadn't threatened them with her life to spare you, you would have been out of this world long ago. So let Julia go, she doesn't owe you ..."

Robert listened to him quietly, his face unchanged, but the hand that grabbed his phone so tight exposed his true feeling at this time.

"Did Julia tell you that? You guys are getting along pretty well now. Tell her to come back immediately. Legally she is still my wife, and I,

Robert, will never allow her to cuckold me!"
