

Chapter 24 Straight in his heart

The wedding ceremony was temporarily canceled.

In the garden of the church.

"Mr. Adams, can you explain to me what happened today?"

Julia took off the diamond ring that Robert had put on her finger and handed it to him.

Robert did not take it, and he looked deeply at Julia.

He always thought his girl was a little bunny, and he was afraid that today she would show her fear and be bullied when she faced the wedding party alone.

Now it seems that his wife is not a woman to be bullied.

But such a woman was bullied by him for four years.

"Mr. Adams!"

Julia frowned and called him again, aggravating her tone.

It really bothered her why this man was always like this and liked to stare at her all the time.

Robert returned to his senses: "What I gave away, I will not take it back."

Julia heard him say that, holding the ring, and throwing it to a pond not far away.

The assistant hid not far, watching this happen.

Robert didn't think she would rather throw the ring away than take it.

"Mr. Adams, I don't know what you're after, but I'm telling you, I have a fiancé." She raised the diamond ring on her ring finger, "Although my fiancé is not as rich as you, he is the most important person in my heart and no one can replace him."

Her words were like a knife that stabbed him straight in his heart.

He looked at her and remembered when she had a falling out with her parents over him four years ago.

She said, "Although the Adams family is not as big as ours, Robert is the most important person in my life, not something that money can replace."

His throat tightened. Why did he not treat her well at that time?

Robert looked back at Julia: "I understand."

After saying that, he turned to leave.

The assistant followed close behind him, "Mr. Adams, why don't you just tell madam that you are her husband?"

Robert did not say anything, but telling her would only make her hate him more.

"We're just going to leave? Dave is not here, it is the best time to swoop in!" The assistant said again.

Robert glared at him, he stopped immediately.

...

The wedding, in the end, did not take place.

Julia contacted all of Dave's friends and was unable to find him.

The other side.

In the confined chamber, Dave was tied to a pillar with bruises all over.

Robert was sitting right in front of him.

"You think once I disappeared, Julia will like you? You'll only make her hate you more." Dave said coldly.

Robert looked at him expressionlessly, "I just want to know one thing, is there any possibility for her to recover her memory?"

Dave looked up at him and said meaningfully, "What do you think?"

Veins on his forehead bulged, and he grabbed Dave's collar.

"I warn you, the one Julia loves forever is me. She just lost her memory for now. If you are a decent man, you shouldn't touch her, if you dare to touch her, I will chop off your finger!"

With these words, he slowly released him.

He ordered his bodyguard, "Untie him and send him back."

He didn't want Julia to worry.

Late night.

Julia was pacing in the house when the door was pushed open from the outside. She saw Dave appear in the doorway all wounded.

"Dave, what happened?" Julia hurriedly ran over to him.

Dave's tall body leaned on her shoulder, his big hand gently stroking her hair and comforting her, "I'm fine, I'm sorry for leaving you alone at the wedding."

Julia looked at the injuries on his body and her eyes were full of worry: "What the hell happened?"

Dave looked down and locked her in his sight: "Julia, you do like me, don't you?"

It's not because you've lost your memory, it's because you liked me in the first place, right?

His heart desperately wanted to know the answer, but he did not dare to ask.

He silently guarded his love for many years, would she love him a little back...