Chapter 110 w@w.110vêlwOrM.cômm

“Go on in,” said Mrs. Morris Senior. She walked into the villa without any explanation.

Chuck and Jennifer followed behind the old lady.

Yohan received a call from Mr. Gardner.

“Mr. Morris, Mrs. Morris has arrived and seen Ms. Fowler. They left the villa together. But now Mrs. Morris returned with Mrs. Morris Senior and Mr. Potter. Ms. Fowler is nowhere to be found,” Mr. Gardner explained

Yohan frowned. He wondered what his mother was doing at his place.

He coldly instructed, “Have someone patrol the Hilhaven Garden villa. Don’t disturb Ms. Fowler, just make sure she’s safe.”

Mr. Gardner respectfully acknowledged the order and quickly arranged for someone to look for Clara. Clara had just learned that the grandmother she trusted was Yohan’s biological grandmother. She was offended by being deceived by Mrs. Morris Senior.

She jogged for ten minutes with a stern face before slowing down for a walk. She drew out her phone and dialed Mr. Fowler’s number.

“Mr. Fowler, I want to go home,” she said sadly as Mark picked up the call.

“What’s wrong? Did Yohan bully you?”

Mark, still in bed, could sense her sadness from her tone and immediately sat up, anxiously asking. “What did he do to you? Tell me, and I’ll come right away!”

Even though he was poor, he wouldn’t let anyone bully Clara. If anyone touched his apprentice, his hidden rage would break through his sense of justice, and he wouldn’t rest until they were beaten to a pulp! W(w)@.NôvêlWôRm.©om

“No, it’s just that I feel the city is full of cunning people, unlike the people in Nameless Mountain,” Clara responded.

Mark wasn’t convinced. “Clara, you were raised by me. I know what you want to do. Don’t try to lie; tell me what happened. Are you unhappy there?”

“I feel like I was deceived,” Clara blurted out.

Mark was taken aback.

“What were you deceived about? Money? How much did you lose? I told you, once you earn money, give it to me for safekeeping. I won’t take anything from it; when you need to buy a house in the future, I will give it back for the down payment,” he said in concern.

“You insisted on managing your finances, and in the process, you got deceived, right? Clara, I told you every day that there’s no such thing as a free lunch,” he added.

“Go get a job. Stop writing your stories, you’re out of touch with society. You don’t socialize, that is why you don’t know about the true colors of people around you.”

Clara chuckled, “Mr. Fowler, your imagination is much richer than mine. I’ve been working with you all the time; how could I not know how treacherous people can be?” www.110(v)eIl@orMl.Com

“I was just a bit sad earlier. I trusted her so much, yet she deceived me. But now that I think about it, I can understand her intentions; she wants Yohan and me to give each other a chance,” she continued.

Chapter 110

She finally understood why Yohan suddenly wanted to live with her.

Mrs. Morris Senior had indeed known what she was thinking. She feared that the two would remain married in name only for a year without seeing each other, and then divorce.

That was why she pressured Yohan to live with Clara, allowing them to spend time together and develop their relationship.

“Who is she? Clara, be clear; you are scaring me,” Mark said.

Clara laughed, “It’s nothing. Mr. Fowler. Go back to sleep. I’ll accompany Evelyn to the banquet in the evening. Meanwhile, you may visit the Clays or return to Casville to help Mr. Powell with the matter of the spirit in his house.”

Hearing his apprentice laugh and her tone returning to its usual playfulness, Mark felt relieved.

“I don’t even have someone to save me from those vengeful spirits if I go alone. Let’s wait a couple of days. They deserve to live in fear for a while since they didn’t tell us the truth,” he said.

They invited the two of them over, yet still wouldn’t tell the truth. This indicated that the Clays didn’t think they were at fault and had no intention of repenting.

“There’s no rush with Stuart’s matter; we’ll handle it when we return to the mountains, Mark added,

He felt no sympathy for Stuart. According to Clara, every cause has its effect. w@Ww.110vêlWw@©m.côrm
