

Wife 20

Chapter 20

Clara checked her watch. It was still too early to go to Sunville Hotel, so she didn't turn down the elderly Tady's kind offer. She replied, "Ma'am, are you busy?" $\mathbb{W}\mathbb{w}\hat{W}.n\mathbf{OVE}(\mathfrak{l})\mathfrak{w}\mathfrak{e}\mathfrak{r}\mathfrak{m}.co(\mathfrak{m})$

The elderly lady smiled and replied, "Not at all. I'm retired. I didn't have much to do and was bored, so I hired someone to drive me around. It's better to room aimlessly than stay cooped up at home."

Since the elderly lady had already put things that way, Clara decided to drive her car and followed the elderly lady to the café mentioned earlier. The café was opposite Morris Corporation's headquarters, and they were most of the café's patrons

Both cars were parked right in front of the café. The elderly lady gave her driver some free time to browse nearby on his own. After that, she entered the café with Clara and picked a table beside the window.

Through that window, they could see Morris Corporation's tall office building, which had over ten floors.

It was working hours, so most of the Morris Corporation employees were in their offices. That was why the only people in the café were the owner, the elderly lady, and Clara.

The elderly lady ordered warm water while Clara got herself a cup of honey lemon water. Clara had always loved honey.

"So tell me, why do you want to get a divorce?" asked the elderly woman warmly. "Is the issue with him or with you?"

Clara thought about how the older woman was a stranger. She assumed she could tell the elderly lady! everything because they would not meet again after they parted ways. The pressure was off for Clara, so she spoke honestly.

She said, "I'll be frank. My husband and I got married on a whim. There was no love at all. In fact, we just got signed the papers and got married yesterday. I know nothing about him and vice versa. After we married, I ran into a friend here.

"Only then did I realize who the man I married was. I think I made a careless mistake and shouldn't have married him on a whim because we aren't compatible, I am an orphan. My mentor found me and raised me. I don't even know who my biological parents are."

Clara thought that she should have been more patient the day before. She wondered if she would have found another man willing to marry her on a whim.

"My husband is a rich guy," said Clara. "The reality is that our upbringings are too different. I think it's best if we end things here and get a divorce before we fall in love. That is why I asked for a divorce, but he turned me down. I am willing to pay him for any emotional distress, but he still won't budge.

"I understand that I'm at fault. Yesterday, I was the one who proposed getting legally married, and now, after only one night, I am asking for a divorce. Anyone would be mad at that. It's just that the social gap between us is too big." $\mathfrak{w}\mathfrak{w}(\mathfrak{w}).n\odot\mathbb{V}\acute{e}(\mathfrak{l})\mathfrak{O}\mathfrak{r}\mathfrak{m}.\mathcal{C}\mathfrak{e}\mathfrak{m}$

Clara didn't wait for a response from the elderly lady after she finished her story. She continued speaking and explained, "Fortunately, my husband said that we can get a divorce after a year. I was upset at first, but now, I have accepted it. If a year is what it takes, then so be it.

"During the year, we will keep things as they are. We won't get involved with each other's life, and no one will know we are legally married. We likely won't see each other much, anyway.

Clara spent most of her time in her house on the mountain, whereas Yohan was the CEO of a huge corporation. He was swamped every day, so it wasn't possible for him to visit her in the mountains.

Chapter 20

Similarly, she wouldn't go to him for no reason.

Clara thought that she might even forget the fact that she was married once more time had passed. $\hat{W}\mathfrak{w}\mathbb{W}.\mathbb{N}\mathfrak{O}(\mathfrak{v})\mathfrak{e}\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{o}\mathfrak{r}\mathbb{M}.\mathfrak{c}(\mathfrak{o})\mathfrak{m}$

The elderly lady remained quiet for a moment before she said, "You are brave enough to get married on a whim, so why not be brave enough to try being with him? The gap in the social status might be huge, but the two of you might fall in love.

"With love, even cosmic obstacles can be tackled."

"But he's a terrible choice for a mate," said Clara,

The elderly lady was speechless for a moment there. $\mathfrak{w}\mathfrak{w}\hat{W}.\mathfrak{O}\mathfrak{e}\mathfrak{v}\mathfrak{e}\mathfrak{l}\mathfrak{w}\mathfrak{O}\mathbb{R}\mathfrak{O}.\mathfrak{c}\mathfrak{O}\mathfrak{m}$

She didn't expect to see the day a young woman would dislike her most talented grandson, who also happened to be her eldest grandson.

It turned out that the elderly Clara met was none other than Bonnie, Yohan's grandmother, who was also the culprit that caused Clara and Yohan to get married on a whim.

"Is your husband an ugly fellow?" asked Bonnie with a smile.

Bonnie saw the photo Yohan took with Clara. That was why she recognized Clara and knew the latter was her granddaughter-in-law. Bonnie wanted to make a good impression, so she played the role of a good listener to her unsuspecting granddaughter-in-law.

To her surprise, she ended up hearing Clara complain about Yohan.

"Not at all. He's quite handsome. Of all the men I have met, he is the most good-looking one, but he's not lovable. He's rather stoic and distant. His heart is so cold and hard that loving him might give me frostbite."

Chapter 21