

Wife 85

Chapter 85

“Oh, by the way, Clara’s mentor is a metaphysics expert. I had Bruce look into it, and he said that Mr. Fowler is a well-known exorcist in our city.”

Chuck said, “A shaman, huh? I’ve heard shamans always talk nonsense.”

“Clara doesn’t do fortune–telling or exorcism. She’s just her mentor’s assistant,” Yohan clarified.

He wanted to make it clear that his wife wasn’t a shaman and shouldn’t be lumped into that category. wWw.nóVé/W©ℜ^(m).c©ℓℓℓ

Chuck picked up on Yohan’s protective tone and understood what he meant. However, he didn’t expose him. He asked, “Perhaps she could see some creepy stuff?” wWW.NzVE(i)W(o)r-m.com

“What do you mean? There’s nothing creepy about my presidential suite and my home.” wwW.n(o)ve(i)W@r©.cóm

Yohan believed he had high standards for interior design.

“I mean, could Clara be seeing ghosts and talking to them?”

Yohan gave Chuck a look. “You believe in ghosts? I’ve lived for 30 years and never seen one. If you’ve seen one, enlighten me about. what they look like.”

“I haven’t seen any either. As long as we don’t do anything wrong, we don’t have to worry about ghosts knocking on our door.”

Yohan recalled Clara talking to herself and said, “She talks to herself both during the day and at night. If it was only at night, you might say she’s seeing ghosts. But how could she encounter ghosts during the day?”

He remembered that when he first met her outside the City Hall, she also acted strangely. He initially thought she was just trying to get his attention.

Chuck whispered, “I’ve heard that some vengeful spirits dare to appear even during the day.”

“Chuck, we’re educated people. We shouldn’t believe in ghosts or spirits. Once people die, they’re like extinguished lamps. They don’t turn into ghosts.”

Yohan knew that metaphysics was a mysterious field. His family had hired a skilled master to help with their construction projects, including Morris Corporation’s office building. It was built according to the master’s guidance. The master had predicted that the office building would bring prosperity to them for over 100 years.

But Yohan didn’t believe in ghosts. He thought people who claimed to have seen ghosts were either seeing things or feeling guilty.

Chuck chuckled. “I don’t believe in ghosts either. But if Clara’s mentor is an exorcist and she’s into all this mystical stuff, there might be something related to the supernatural going on. Alright, I’ll handle the investigation for you and find out whether she’s got a mental issue or is seeing ghosts.

“Even if she is seeing ghosts, I’m sure she won’t see them all the time. It’s more likely she has some kind of mental health issue.”

Chuck had heard of ghost sightings, but they were rare. The fact that Yohan was taking this seriously meant Clara’s strange behavior happened frequently.

“Once you find something, let me know directly and keep it to yourself. Don’t even tell my grandmother.”

“Of course. I’m not one to gossip. If there’s nothing else, I’ll get back to work.”

Yohan responded with a hum. WwW.nov©/worm.com

As Chuck was about to leave, he remembered something and sat back down before asking, “What did Mandy say about me?”

“She said I’m exploiting you, working you like a mule, and that you don’t even have time to get your toothache treated. She said it could decay if you don’t fix it soon. You might need a root canal or even extraction.”

Chuck laughed. “It’s nice to know Mandy cares about me.”

Yohan looked at him with a smirk. “What good is looking all infatuated in front of me? Confess to Mandy yourself. It’s just three words. How hard is it to say them? If I had someone I liked, I’d tell her ‘I love you’ the moment I could, so she’d know exactly how I feel.

“Unlike you, who’s scared of every possible outcome. Mandy’s not getting any younger. She’ll be married off soon if you don’t act quickly. If she finds someone else, you’ll only have yourself to blame.”