

Gardevoir 2

Chapter 2 Super Forest

"Boom---" A violent explosion swept through the entire forest, and the azure spiritual power raged in the middle of the forest.

"Sana?" A dozen green-haired humanoid creatures in the center of the forest looked up at the familiar mental fluctuations with some surprise, but the surprise instantly turned into anger, and they disappeared on the spot one by one.

"Damn it, she's finally here. I have to disappoint the boss again." A man with three scratches on his face stared at the forest in front of him with vigilance.

"Hurry up, you guys. This is the Super Power Forest. If you don't want to die, quickly deal with these two guys." A trace of fear appeared in the man's sinister eyes.

"Brother, what are you afraid of? We almost killed the champion-level Gardevoir. What can a few kings do to us?" A bald man looked at the forest in front of him with disdain.

"Don't you realize that you're going to die with your brothers? What do you mean by just a few kings?" The sinister man slapped the bald man hard, feeling a little disappointed in him.

You can't even catch a Champion Gardevoir that's so weak that it can hardly use its super powers, and you still have the nerve to think that the King is just a nobody?

"Do you think we can defeat the champion by ourselves? This time we happened to catch Gardevoir's weak period. If we let her escape, we'll be doomed." The sinister man glared at his men and cursed viciously.

"You don't want to face the retaliation of a super-powered elf, let alone a champion elf. And there are more than just champions in this forest."

"There are at least a dozen King-level elves here, and three or four Champion-level elves. There is even a rumor that there is an elf that has broken through to the Grandmaster level."

"Got it, boss. Let's continue." The bald man touched his head embarrassedly.

"Forget it, it's too late. Come out, Ma'la." The sinister man seemed to sense something and released his spirit.

"Maura uses the wave of evil."

A strong black light emanated from the hands of Magna that appeared in the middle of the Poké Ball.

The waves of evil spread out like ripples on the water and rushed towards the empty woods ahead.

Just when the bald man thought that his captain, Ma'la, had missed the target.

The space along the path of the evil wave suddenly distorted, and more than a dozen leaders, Gardevoir, appeared with their eyes flashing red.

The leader, Gardevoir, waved his hand, and the evil wave was instantly compressed into a ball of small black beads, and then disappeared without a trace.

"Boss, can we defeat him?"

The bald man carefully moved to the side of the sinister man and asked in a low voice what to do next.

The sinister man was in no mood to pay attention to his men. Cold sweat couldn't help but flow down his forehead. You know, what was compressed just now was the wave of evil.

That's an evil skill, but it was wiped out by super powers.

The evil type is immune to super powers, even if the level difference is too big to be completely immune.

But the newly crowned champion Gardevoir of Super Power King can only offset part of the evil fluctuations, and use super powers to erase the evil fluctuations.

Rumor has it that there is a Pokémon that has broken through to the master level in the Psycho Forest, and it looks like that is this Gardevoir.

"The operation is canceled. We are withdrawing."

The sinister man said this without waiting for others to react. He jumped onto the newly appeared Crossbat, threw down a few Poké Balls, and ran away without looking back.

The bald man didn't expect his boss to run away so easily, and he wanted to run away too, but before he could move, his body was imprisoned by Gardevoir's super powers in the distance.

The sinister man who had just fled on the Crossbat was also surrounded by the light of superpowers and was hit hard next to the bald man.

"Sana!" (How dare you invade our Super Forest!)

Gardevoir, which was a circle larger than those bosses, appeared in front of the two of them in an instant with red light in the middle of its eyes.

It was visibly that the atmosphere around this Gardevoir was somewhat depressing.

Of course, it's not her fault. No one would be nice to those people if they were beaten at their doorstep.

Not long after, the bosses Gardevoir that had just appeared returned with their respective spoils.

"Shanai, Shanai. (Two of them ran away, but their Pokémon were captured.)"

The slightly smaller Gardevoir punched the air in annoyance, angry at itself for letting the enemy escape.

"Sana, Sana. (Just leave it here for me to watch, you guys go check on your sister.)"

The biggest leader, Gardevoir, nodded and signaled them to throw all the captured poachers here.

She just needs to wait here for the Alliance to send someone to pick these guys up. The most important thing now is their little sister.

The other Gardevoir nodded and used teleportation to leave.

When teleporting to a giant tree in the center of the forest, the youngest leader, Gardevoir, looked at the other sisters with some curiosity and asked them with some curiosity: "Garde, Gardevoir? (Speaking of which, is my little sister going to lay eggs?)"

The word "laying eggs" was far away from them. They were all picked up by the old patriarch from various places, and none of them were male.

That is to say, the youngest sister was tricked away by that bad boy at that time, and he didn't bring her back to see me for such a long time.

After finally coming back, he was still hunted by poachers.

"Sana, Sana! (I told you that brat is unreliable, but you still don't believe me!)"

One of the leaders, Gardevoir, had very sharp eyes and started to complain about his own sisters.

I felt she was unreliable at first, but they all told me to go out and try it on my own.

"Sana, Sana. (But my little sister is already the champion, and you are still stuck at the top.)"

I don't know which Gardevoir said that, but the other Gardevoirs all smiled and looked at the sharp-eyed Gardevoir.

The sharp-eyed Gardevoir's face flushed red, but she didn't know how to refute. After all, it was an indisputable fact that she had been stuck at the top for a long time.

"Happy! (It's laid. Two eggs.)"

A Chanterelle walked out from the middle of the giant tree and announced the good news to the Gardevoirs in front of it.

"Happy, happy! (But one of the eggs is a little weird.)"

Speaking of this egg, Jigglypuff couldn't help but scratch his head. He had seen many elf eggs, but he had never seen such a strange egg.

"Sana? (How weird is it?)"

"Happy (I don't know how to say it, just come in and see for yourself.)"

It's hard to describe how strange the Jellyfish is. You can only understand it by seeing it yourself.

After saying that, Jigglypuff turned around and walked back to the middle of the giant tree, waving his hand to signal them to follow him.

The Gardevoirs looked at each other, smiled and pushed each other to go inside.

The space inside the giant tree was very wide, and soft light shone on a straw bed.

A normal-sized Gardevoir was lying on the straw bed, as beautiful as a painting, and in her arms were two Pokémon eggs, one large and one small.

Some Kirliams and Larulas were sitting or lying nearby, looking at the two Pokémon eggs.

"Sana? (Is this our egg? Is it this big?)"

The youngest leader, Gardevoir, covered his mouth, looked at the Pokémon egg in disbelief, and gestured with his hands.

With eggs this big, it's no wonder that the old chief said that only the leader can lay eggs. They are bigger than his belly. It would be very painful for him if it were him.

I'm really worried about my sister. I must give her some good nourishment in the next few days.

Just when the youngest leader, Gardevoir, was daydreaming, a pink little hand hit her head.

"Happy! (I don't know what you're thinking, but the small one is normal.)"

Seeing her surprised look, Jigglypuff knew that she was wrong and hit her without hesitation.

The smaller one has a white background with green patterns and is about the same size as a Larus.

The larger egg was mostly pure white, with a blue pattern on the bottom that formed the shape of an eye.

The size is almost the same as the normal Kirlia.

"Sana? (These are our eggs, but why are they different sizes?)"

"Happy. (I don't know either? The big one is different from the others. If I hadn't seen it clearly, I would have doubted it.)"

Jigglypuff also looked as if she was doubting her life, after all, it was the first time she had seen such an egg.

"Shanai. (My sisters are here. Come and see my children.)"

Gardevoir, lying on the bed, saw her sisters coming and happily called them to come and see her children.