Chapter 1721 - Tang Huaiyuan's Schemes

...

While Qin Fang was pondering over his future steps, the villa belonging to the Green Gang boss Boss Kui in the Tangchen Mansion Area of Jiangzhou had something quite different happening.

"Elder Tang, please come in..."

Elder Alai, dressed in a simple green robe, stood quietly at the villa entrance, courteously welcoming a middle-aged man in his fifties into the villa.

If Qin Fang were here, he might recognize this man as his enemy, Tang Sect Elder Tang Huaiyuan, who was also the father of Tang Nan, whom Qin Fang had killed.

Tang Huaiyuan looked curiously at the seemingly old and frail elder and sensed the aura belonging to a grandmaster-level expert emanating from him, making his expression somewhat peculiar and his eyebrows slightly furrowed.

Elder Alai's strength reaching grandmaster level was not surprising; after all, Boss Kui's identity was very special, and the people around him would naturally be very powerful experts.

What truly surprised Tang Huaiyuan was that Elder Alai's aura, although of a grandmaster level, felt extremely weak, as if he had suffered a very serious injury.

Of course, such injuries were old wounds from many years ago, having never fully healed, which is why he gave off a frail impression.

Nonetheless, these were Elder Alai's issues, and although Tang Huaiyuan found them curious, he said nothing and simply nodded slightly before stepping inside the villa.

"Elder Tang, pleased to meet you..."

Almost as soon as he entered the villa, a stocky elder enthusiastically greeted Tang Huaiyuan with a radiant smile that made him look like a kind and amiable grandparent, making it hard to imagine that such a person was the underground king of Jiangzhou, this eastern metropolis.

"You're too kind, Boss Kui. It's humbling and intimidating, really..."

Though Tang Huaiyuan was proud, he wasn't reckless; otherwise, he wouldn't have maintained his position as an elder for long.

Moreover, since coming down from the mountains, the Tang Sect had suffered considerable losses, making them understand that it was no longer the era of the Tang Sect retreating deep into the mountains.

While martial artists remain formidable in society, they are not invincible, and even a grandmaster-level expert like him can be easily killed by a regular person...

The elder before him was ordinary, and Tang Huaiyuan could kill him easily with a finger, yet he dared not underestimate him.

Not to mention Elder Alai who had just opened the door for him; despite his injuries, his strength was likely not far beneath Tang Huaiyuan's.

More importantly, Boss Kui, though ordinary, could command thousands to besiege the Tang Sect disciples with just a word...

The number of Tang Sect disciples he had with him was not large, but nearly all were grandmaster-level elite disciples; if thousands besieged them, even a grandmaster-level expert like Tang Huaiyuan would be reduced to a pulp.

Thus, although Tang Huaiyuan internally held little regard for the weak elder before him, he outwardly expressed utmost respect.

Tang Huaiyuan concealed his disdain well, but it was hard to escape Boss Kui's observant eyes, given his decades of navigating the underworld and reaching his current position. Understanding human nature, he could not miss Tang Huaiyuan's subtle cues.

However, Boss Kui appeared oblivious, his demeanor unchanged, and very warmly invited Tang Huaiyuan to sit down.

"I wonder what brings Elder Tang here today?"

After some brief pleasantries, they naturally moved on to the main topic, with Tang Huaiyuan initiating the visit, rather than Boss Kui reaching out to him.

Boss Kui's special status meant few could reach him, but Tang Huaiyuan, being a Tang Sect Elder with significant standing, managed to contact Boss Kui through a prominent figure.

"Actually, I'm here to discuss a deal with Boss Kui..."

Looking at the elderly man before him, Tang Huaiyuan's expression steadied slightly, with a hint of a smile, and he courteously stated his intent.

As soon as he spoke, Boss Kui couldn't help but frown, saying nothing, only silently gazing at Tang Huaiyuan.

"To be specific, I'm here to help solve a problem for Boss Kui!"

This response was within Tang Huaiyuan's expectations, so he promptly added another sentence.

"Oh, solving a problem for me? I wasn't aware I had such a problem..."

Boss Kui was momentarily taken aback but seeing Tang Huaiyuan's confident demeanor, he appeared somewhat puzzled.

Having reached his current position, Boss Kui lived a life of ongoing success; though he couldn't openly display his power in Jiangzhou, he was in essence its underground king, with even prominent figures in the official world showing him respect...

Chapter 1722 - Tang Huaiyuan's Schemes

It is precisely because of this that he was always the one causing trouble for others, and he himself rarely had any trouble—at least no one dared to provoke him actively.

"I wonder if the incident more than a month ago, where your young master was abducted, counts as a trouble for you, Boss Kui?"

Seeing Boss Kui's reaction, Tang Huaiyuan was too lazy to mince words further and directly stated his purpose of coming.

"Hmm?"

Boss Kui's originally somewhat murky eyes became bright almost instantly, and a compelling aura radiated from him.

This wasn't the kind of aura and pressure released by a Martial Artist; it was a strong aura developed by someone who had been in a high position of power for a long time, causing even Tang Huaiyuan to frown slightly.

Obviously, what Tang Huaiyuan said caused a great reaction in Boss Kui's emotions, at least indicating that he was not as indifferent to the matter as he pretended to be.

"It seems that Elder Tang knows quite a lot of things..."

But soon, Boss Kui's eyes gradually dimmed, returning to their earlier murkiness, the entire person looking like an ordinary old man again.

However, looking at Tang Huaiyuan, who wore a smile, Boss Kui spoke in a rather unfriendly tone, with a hint of sarcasm in his words, as well as a faint touch of threat.

The incident involving Kui Mingyu back then didn't cause a big stir, but under Boss Kui's influence, it had been completely covered up, and few people knew about it anymore.

Yet, Tang Huaiyuan specifically came to tell Boss Kui about this, which seemed like bullying him, basically rubbing salt into Boss Kui's wound.

How could Boss Kui, who had been in power for years and was used to having the final say, not have any opinions about this?

Probably, if he weren't taking into account that Tang Huaiyuan is a Tang Sect Elder with formidable strength, Boss Kui might have already ordered an attack!

"Boss Kui, I won't beat around the bush with you... That kid named Qin and I have some personal grudges, and I assume Boss Kui also can't swallow that anger!"

Tang Huaiyuan pretended not to hear the hidden meaning in Boss Kui's words and directly stated his purpose for coming, not even hiding the enmity between him and Qin Fang.

Boss Kui's brows furrowed, and he looked at Tang Huaiyuan with a somewhat strange expression, not quite understanding the exact reason for his visit.

"In that case, Elder Tang could simply go directly to that kid named Qin for revenge. I don't know why you came to me for this?"

Boss Kui, from Elder Alai, learned that there might be traces of the Snow Mountain Sect behind Qin Fang. Although The Green Gang had a vast influence with numerous experts, Boss Kui didn't have much capital in his hands, as the genuine experts were mostly at the main headquarters.

The Green Gang had emigrated out of Dragon Country, with its influence widespread overseas. However, their foothold in the mainland was not very deep, controlling the Jiangzhou area very firmly. Boss Kui, despite his strong influence in Jiangzhou, had his influence limited there, making it quite difficult to bring in experts from the main headquarters.

The Snow Mountain Sect is an ancient sect not weaker than the Tang Sect. Though inferior in the number of disciples compared to familial sects like the Tang Sect, nearly every member is elite among elites.

Moreover, the Snow Mountain Sect is known for being extremely protective. If their disciples are bullied, they'd protect them to the end, right or wrong.

Boss Kui chose not to pursue Qin Fang further, heeding Elder Alai's advice, as he wasn't willing to provoke such an extremely protective sect.

If they angered the Snow Mountain Sect, sending a few terrifyingly powerful experts his way, it might be hard for him to keep his old life.

Understanding the current situation is the mark of a wise person. Boss Kui, having climbed step by step to his current position, certainly wasn't someone without brains. Of course, he knew what the wiser choice was.

Though the Snow Mountain Sect is domineering, the Tang Sect isn't much weaker. Especially with Tang Huaiyuan's status as a Tang Sect Elder, facing Qin Fang, a Snow Mountain Sect disciple, he shouldn't be at any disadvantage.

Boss Kui was quite pleased to see Tang Huaiyuan locking horns with Qin Fang, but it didn't please him to be dragged into the trouble by Tang Huaiyuan.

"Boss Kui, you're wrong... That kid named Qin is your enemy too. How can you stay out of it...? Don't worry. I'll handle the action, but there is a small favor I need from you!"

Knowing what Boss Kui had in mind, Tang Huaiyuan didn't mind and thus slowly revealed his true purpose.

"What's the matter?"

Boss Kui hesitated for a moment, though feeling he shouldn't involve himself in this affair, but delighted at the thought of dealing with Qin Fang and removing a thorn in his side.

Of course, whether he would agree to Tang Huaiyuan's condition wasn't certain, though...

"It's not that big of a deal... I just need Boss Kui to help me find something!"

Seeing Boss Kui ask, Tang Huaiyuan knew he was interested by now. It remained to be seen if they could agree on terms.

"Find something?"

Boss Kui was slightly taken aback, having anticipated Tang Huaiyuan might come up with some ordinary conditions, like getting his men to eliminate Qin Fang's supporters early, but he didn't expect it to be just this.

Chapter 1723 - Tang Huaiyuan's Schemes

"What are you looking for?"

But Boss Kui is no ordinary person. For Tang Huaiyuan to particularly seek his help in finding something, it must either be extremely precious or exceedingly rare, and definitely not something easy to acquire.

"This thing is called Blood Coral, a very rare and special mutant species of coral... I got news that in two days there will be a large antique exhibition in Jiangzhou, and this Blood Coral is one of the exhibits..."

Tang Huaiyuan briefly relayed the information he had to Boss Kui, who listened quietly without showing any change in expression.

Boss Kui remained silent the whole time until Tang Huaiyuan finished his introduction.

"You want me to help you steal this thing out?"

After a long while, Boss Kui finally asked with some curiosity.

Boss Kui was aware of this antique exhibition; it was organized by the Jiangzhou Antique Association, and they had even sent him an invitation. After all, the old man had recently become very interested in antique collections.

Among the antiques at this exhibition, many are rare treasures handed down through generations, and there are even a few national treasures. So to ensure the utmost security, not only has a very famous security company been contracted, but the police and military have also been dispatched to protect it.

Even for such a well-secured exhibition, Boss Kui would have to enter honestly with a ticket to even get a peek, let alone try to pull off anything else.

But Tang Huaiyuan was even more ruthless than Boss Kui imagined, wanting to steal the exhibits. This was not simply setting a condition—it was intentionally making things difficult for him.

This Blood Coral is what Tang Huaiyuan wanted to obtain, and although Boss Kui didn't yet know the status of this exhibit among all the others, just the strict security made him feel that stealing it would not be an easy task...

"That's right, I really need to get this Blood Coral! As long as Boss Kui can help me get it out, you will soon never see that Qin kid again!"

Tang Huaiyuan did not hide his objective, affirming candidly with an intimidating demeanor, as if eliminating Qin Fang was as easy as lifting a finger.

"Elder Tang, you're joking... but how come I don't find it funny at all!"

Boss Kui paused, then looked at Tang Huaiyuan's somewhat irritable face and snapped rather displeased.

Tang Huaiyuan clearly knew quite a bit about this exhibition and could have gone himself to snatch the Blood Coral directly, given that he was a Grandmaster-level expert with plenty of Grandmaster-level subordinates whose strength could even surpass that of small military units.

Yet, this guy still pushed this task onto Boss Kui, ostensibly making him the scapegoat...

Admittedly, if Boss Kui were willing to take action, it wasn't entirely impossible to get the Blood Coral out; it was just that doing so would be troublesome and might even risk the lives of some reliable brothers under Boss Kui...

After all, besides the security company, there were police and military personnel responsible for the exposition's security, many armed.

In such a scenario of antique theft and robbery, there'd likely be casualties if a conflict arose, naturally putting Boss Kui at a disadvantage.

It's not that Boss Kui didn't have weapons. On the contrary, if he truly organized, he had enough armaments to form a fully armed strike team of over a hundred.

But the question is, would Boss Kui dare to do this?

Clearly, he would not!

In the Dragon Country, guns are taboo. While people in the underworld have ways to acquire them, they mostly keep them hidden, not daring to flaunt them openly, or they'd certainly bring disaster upon themselves!

"Rest assured, Boss Kui, this operation isn't entirely reliant on your people; I'll also deploy experts..."

Seeing Boss Kui's reaction, Tang Huaiyuan gauged a bit of his bottom line, immediately adding with a grin, "Regarding the inside work, I believe Boss Kui has some professionals at hand... and as for those outside, leave it to me!"

Upon hearing this, Boss Kui felt much better. The exhibition's security was too troublesome and time was short; even if he wanted to bribe insiders, there wasn't much time left.

Relying solely on his own people to break through the military and police forces set on the perimeter was too difficult. Once inside, just stealing the object became much easier.

Now that Tang Huaiyuan had actively taken on what Boss Kui considered to be the most troublesome issue, Boss Kui naturally felt much more reassured.

"Under these circumstances, it might not be entirely out of the question..."

Feeling better, Boss Kui's words naturally softened, and Tang Huaiyuan's eyes brightened with hope.

...

"Antique exhibition?"

Qin Fang, after considering what needed to be done, roughly formulated his plan and was intending to rest, only to find several missed calls and texts on his phone.

The calls and texts were all from his brother-in-law Tang Cheng, concerning the upcoming antique exhibition in Jiangzhou...

"Brother Tang, you're not joking, are you?"

Though it was quite late, Tang Cheng seemed not to have gone to bed. As the call came through again, Tang Cheng explained his intention, prompting Qin Fang to respond with a helpless chuckle.

"Do I seem so idle? Calling you so late instead of resting?"

However, Qin Fang's chuckle only incited Tang Cheng's blunt disdain...

Chapter 1724 - Exposed!

...

"The main thing is that this exhibition will showcase several national treasure-class items. It would be a real pity if something were to go wrong..."

Tang Cheng simply introduced the situation of this antique exhibition to Qin Fang, even revealing the names of two national treasures at which Qin Fang couldn't help but gasp.

"Seriously..."

Qin Fang looked helpless, finding it a bit unbelievable, but from Tang Cheng's tone, he knew it was no joke.

"Alright, if nothing else, just for this calligraphy piece, I can't refuse..."

The most important thing is that among these national treasures, there is one that is somewhat related to Qin Fang — the Orchid Pavilion Preface that was revealed from Qin Fang's hand.

This calligraphy piece was immediately sent away when it appeared in the world, so Qin Fang didn't have a chance to appreciate it. Now, this antique exhibition is its first appearance.

The reason there's such a strong security presence is to prevent any mishap with it. Comparatively, although the other national treasures are quite extraordinary, they clearly just play supporting roles...

Jiangzhou, although a separate municipality, is still under the jurisdiction of the Ninghai Military District according to military divisions.

As the commander of the Ninghai Military District's number one special operations team, Tang Cheng is tasked with the security of this exhibition...

He just happened to learn from Tang Feifei that Qin Fang was also in Jiangzhou, so he directly called Qin Fang, intending to draft him for some free labor.

Originally, Qin Fang wouldn't be interested in such things, as he already understood the level of security from Tang Cheng. Whether he was there or not wouldn't make much difference.

Tang Cheng mostly wanted him there to catch up, since they hadn't seen each other since returning from Anlang.

Tang Feifei mentioned that after returning from Anlang, Tang Cheng immediately went into seclusion for training. She didn't know what his current level of strength was.

Level 5?

This is quite likely, as the Golden Dragon Saliva is a superb spiritual medicine. Once absorbed, its effects are extraordinary. Advancing from Level 4 to Level 5 isn't difficult, especially below the master level where progression is easier.

Level 6 Master Level?

Qin Fang thought this was too difficult. Although Tang Cheng had a good foundation and a strong physique, he started from scratch and couldn't reach master level so quickly, especially since his understanding of the Martial Way was nearly zero.

Of course, there are exceptions.

In the underground world, many experts haven't practiced martial arts or cultivated True Qi, yet they can still reach master level or even grandmaster level...

For example, the assassin Bill sent by Ron earlier, was a Level 6 expert, but he was a foreigner who knew no martial arts or True Qi, relying on his abnormally strong physique... and his skills in gunmanship!

Even though Qin Fang knew there were many such experts, he hadn't met many. Even Tang Cheng's impressive skills were only at Level 4, suggesting how formidable Level 6 experts must be.

And when Qin Fang actually met Tang Cheng, he was truly shocked by the change in Tang Cheng...

"Brother Tang, did you really... really break through?"

To Qin Fang's surprise, Tang Cheng had indeed advanced from Level 4 to Level 6 Master Level. Although his True Qi reserve was still quite weak, his level was clearly Level 6.

"Hehe, I was just about to surprise you, but you noticed right away..."

Tang Cheng was quite helpless with his future brother-in-law.

When they first met, Qin Fang was weak and defenseless, but within just over half a year, he had already grown into a master that even Tang Cheng had to look up to.

The reason for Tang Cheng's transformation was because of this brother-in-law, otherwise, he might have lost his life in the jungle of Anlang.

This retreat led to a substantial improvement in his strength, feeling a genuine sense of rebirth, and he planned to spar with this future brother-in-law to "surprise" Qin Fang.

But unexpectedly, as soon as they met, it seemed all his cards were laid bare in front of Qin Fang without any concealment.

"Have you gotten stronger again?"

Soon, Tang Cheng realized that the last time he saw Qin Fang was in the jungle of Anlang. Qin Fang was very strong at the time but hadn't reached master level yet.

Tang Cheng's retreat allowed him to unexpectedly cross that hurdle, and he thought he advanced faster than Qin Fang. But now, it seemed different from what he imagined, hence his question.

"Just a bit stronger..."

Qin Fang shrugged, not wanting to overly discourage his brother-in-law, and modestly responded. Though he said "a bit," in reality, he had advanced significantly.

Chapter 1725 - Exposed!

Back in Anlang, when Qin Fang unleashed his full power, it was roughly equivalent to around Mid-Master Level strength at best.

But now, if he goes all out, Qin Fang is practically a Quasi-Grandmaster-level Expert, unafraid of any Master Level opponents, and could be considered invincible at the Master Level.

"You freak..."

Although Tang Cheng was not exactly sure how strong Qin Fang had become, seeing Qin Fang's nonchalant demeanor, he knew that even if he jumped two levels, he might still not be Qin Fang's match. In fact, the gap might be widening, prompting even his brother-in-law to laugh and curse.

"Alright, enough about that. Let's talk about the task at hand..."

Fortunately, Tang Cheng was not someone who didn't know the gravity of the situation. He had called Qin Fang over not just to have a strongman join him but because there were indeed matters at hand.

"Martial Arts Experts?"

After Tang Cheng briefly described the anomalies discovered over the past few days, Qin Fang couldn't help but furrow his brows as this matter was obviously not simple.

Although the ancient artifact exhibition was still two days away from officially starting, most of the exhibits had already been delivered. The military, police, and security companies had also long begun their work.

Tang Cheng, as the military commander, had already started patrolling the surrounding area, but he still noticed that martial arts experts were intermittently mingling in the crowds, some of whom even he couldn't see through!

"Experts even you can't see through..."

Tang Cheng himself was now a Master Level expert, albeit with a bit of water in his level, but still a Master Level nonetheless.

But experts he couldn't see through must at least be of the same level as him, or even stronger...

Level 5 and Level 6 represent a significant divide in strength. Apart from a few freaks who could fight across levels, most people don't have that kind of prowess, so indeed a Level 6 Grandmaster is much stronger than a Level 5, and naturally, Tang Cheng could see through the strength of those below the Master Level...

But the problem now is the inability to see through, which only means these people are true experts!

This ancient artifact exhibition indeed had several national treasure-heavyweights, but under such tight security, relying solely on these martial arts experts' flesh and blood would find it very challenging to resist guns and other firearms. Essentially, as many would come, as many would die...

Of course, if it were Master Level experts, the situation might be different, not to mention that there might be even stronger experts appearing.

But the problem is...

"Why are they here?"

That's what truly surprised Qin Fang. He couldn't quite understand what could attract so many Master Level experts and above to observe and recon.

Qin Fang already got a list of the exhibits from Tang Cheng and briefly looked through it, but he didn't find anything that would catch the attention of these martial arts experts.

An organization capable of mobilizing so many Master Level experts must be very powerful, as Master Level experts aren't cabbages you can find in abundance.

But precisely because this organization is powerful, such arrangements wouldn't be without purpose...

"For a particular exhibit? Or perhaps planning to take down everything in one fell swoop?"

For Qin Fang, it was difficult to make an accurate judgment at the moment because he only understood the situation from Tang Cheng. He needed to actually see those people to come to a conclusion.

His Scouting Skill is quite extraordinary, but it needs the opportunity to be used... Just having conversations with Tang Cheng didn't have much substantial meaning.

"Alright, Brother Tang, I'll keep an eye out for you..."

With martial arts experts around, and they are all above the Master Level, relying solely on these policemen and ordinary soldiers certainly wouldn't suffice.

Even for Tang Cheng, a Master Level expert, he's considered very weak at this level, struggling to deal with an opponent of the same level, let alone much stronger experts where he would only face being battered...

Tang Cheng was his brother-in-law, and Qin Fang, as the brother-in-law, couldn't just stand by and watch him get into trouble. Otherwise, Tang Feifei surely wouldn't spare him, and he himself couldn't justify it. In the end, Qin Fang thought it through and agreed to the matter.

Though Qin Fang didn't promise he would definitely lend a hand, merely gathering intel on these people shouldn't be too difficult.

Tang Cheng naturally wouldn't refuse this, but he also didn't waste words, only gently patted Qin Fang's shoulder before getting back to his work.

The exhibition is being held at Jiangzhou's National Exhibition Center, but the entire center has been sealed off and guarded by armed guards.

To ensure safety, it's said that every visitor entering the National Exhibition Center must undergo strict security checks before they can be allowed in.

Of course, Tang Cheng had completed the paperwork for Qin Fang, allowing him to enter and exit freely without much inspection, a small privilege without much difficulty.

However, Qin Fang was in no hurry to enter the National Exhibition Center. Instead, he wandered around outside, searching for his targets.

Tang Cheng had mentioned there were experts with obscure strength around, and these were Qin Fang's targets. Qin Fang aimed to identify such individuals to slowly uncover the truth behind the whole affair.

Chapter 1726 - Exposed!

"People from The Green Gang?"

Qin Fang wandered around here a few times, and indeed, he noticed some anomalies.

However, he didn't spot any grandmaster-level martial arts experts, but rather, he saw quite a number of Qing Gang Disciples frequenting this place.

The Green Gang, although the largest underground force in Jiangzhou, is known for its disciplined members who typically do not meddle in certain affairs easily.

Yet, for this antique exhibition, several factions have already formed an alliance, making their strength quite formidable. The defense is already tight, making the involvement of Qing Gang Disciples unnecessary.

Moreover, although the Qing Gang Disciples are quite disciplined, at the end of the day, they are still part of the underworld, with inherently murky backgrounds, so how could they be asked to help?

"If they're not here to help, could it be...?"

Qin Fang couldn't help but furrow his brow. The Green Gang's influence in Jiangzhou is quite significant, and Boss Kui is an exceedingly dominant figure. If he gets involved, then the waters will truly be muddied!

If someone muddies these waters, it can only mean someone wants to fish in troubled waters.

"There's something wrong, definitely something wrong..."

Qin Fang kept a close watch on these Qing Gang Disciples. Although they counted as elites, including Level 3, Level 4, and even Level 5 experts, there wasn't a single grandmaster-level expert among them.

This contradicts Tang Cheng's account to some extent, as from Tang Cheng's description, there should be at least ten such experts.

However, as far as Qin Fang knows, among all the disciples of The Green Gang in Jiangzhou, there may not even be ten grandmaster-level experts in total.

Moreover, such experts are nearly all of Boss Kui's most powerful enforcers, each a renowned figure. Even if Tang Cheng didn't recognize them, at least he could have found information about them.

Yet, in fact, even after Tang Cheng had someone investigate afterward, nothing was discovered. These experts seemed never to have existed in the world, with not a shred of information found!

This either indicates that these people are very adept at hiding their identities, or that they recently emerged from deep in the mountains and have not been out for very long...

"No, could it be the Tang Sect people..."

With this thought, Qin Fang suddenly recalled that there seems to be a force in Jiangzhou fitting such a description—unexpectedly, his old enemy Tang Huaiyuan and his group.

The Tang Sect has long been sealed off, and if it weren't for Tang Nan's matter, Tang Huaiyuan wouldn't personally be leading his forces out.

Originally, the twenty or nearly thirty people brought out were almost all disciples under Tang Huaiyuan or experts dependent on him.

However, after Tang Huaiming's Blue Island expedition, in pursuit of Qin Fang that failed, he ended up getting himself killed, along with more than a dozen Tang Sect Disciples.

This loss was indeed quite painful for Tang Huaiyuan, which is why since then, he has been very cautious, guarding the remaining dozen or so disciples.

These disciples are almost all grandmaster-level experts, the most important force under Tang Huaiyuan. If they were to suffer further losses, he would truly be left with nothing.

Perhaps fearing further losses of these disciples, even knowing that Qin Fang is in Jiangzhou, Tang Huaiyuan has been restraining himself.

Qin Fang found it quite strange, but he never considered this angle.

"Could it be that there's something at this antique exhibition that Tang Huaiyuan has set his sights on?"

But after Tang Cheng brought up this matter, Qin Fang couldn't help but suspect it.

Though Tang Huaiyuan's hatred for Qin Fang runs deep, he's not making any moves, which already indicates there's something fishy going on.

And though Qin Fang hasn't yet seen any Tang Sect Disciples, his first suspicion is immediately on the Tang Sect... which can only indicate that there might be a particular treasure among the antiques that Tang Huaiyuan covets.

Ordinarily, it's no big deal if Tang Huaiyuan is interested in some antique, as any collector would love these rare treasures, especially given the high caliber of the exhibition and its displayed items...

This kind of exhibition is sure to attract many collectors to visit, and if Tang Huaiyuan has such interests, he wouldn't miss it.

But Qin Fang always felt that Tang Huaiyuan is not that sort of person. If he really sent people here, there must be some unspeakable secret.

"Huh, it really is a Tang Sect Disciple..."

Almost as soon as Qin Fang was pondering this possibility, his eyes were busy, constantly deploying his Scouting Skill, surveying the flow of people.

Indeed, his luck was better this time, as he soon captured sight of a Tang Sect Disciple, unmistakably a grandmaster-level expert.

Then, Qin Fang gradually identified seven more grandmaster-level experts, of which five belonged to the Tang Sect's disciples, and the other two grandmasters were from The Green Gang...

These grandmaster experts were also disguised as ordinary people, mixing among the crowds. Though the area around the National Exhibition Center was already under strict security, such a lineup made people even more curious about the exhibition, so even before it had opened, quite a number of people were already lined up outside.

And precisely due to the large turnout, these experts blending in with the crowd were not particularly conspicuous.

This discovery wasn't enough to really concern Qin Fang, but what truly shocked and puzzled him was that the six Tang Sect Disciples and two Qing Gang experts seemed to be on the same side.

Despite not showing any intimate gestures towards each other, Qin Fang noticed they were secretly communicating, occasionally gesturing towards the National Exhibition Center's buildings as if discussing something. Unfortunately, Qin Fang was too far to hear what they were saying.

"Could Tang Huaiyuan be planning a heist?"

Qin Fang suddenly thought of a possibility, a notion so crazy even he found it hard to believe.

Chapter 1727 - Blood Coral!

Of course, this was just a fleeting thought in Qin Fang's mind, even he felt it was unrealistic, even a bit whimsical.

Tang Huaiyuan leading the Tang Sect's experts was indeed a very strong force, but that was only in comparison to ordinary people.

If they really faced up to the armed forces organized for this exhibition, it would basically be no different from sending themselves to their deaths...

Not to mention that Tang Cheng led a squad of special forces elite soldiers, whose gun handling was incredibly skillful, each having been on the battlefield and certainly not afraid to kill.

Even the police personnel dispatched this time were not just regular officers, but well-prepared, well-trained armed police. Although they couldn't match Tang Cheng's men, they were also not afraid to wield their guns...

Yet these armed police were actually the weakest link, even inferior to the security personnel from the security company, only slightly better equipped than those.

After all, the security company's personnel were all recruited from retired special forces, many of whom were no less skilled than Tang Cheng's special forces, though their fighting capacity was slightly reduced due to domestic equipment restrictions...

It could be said that the exhibition's security forces were all equipped with firearms, and most were soldiers or quasi-soldiers with military training, perhaps not as good in combat skills, but with guns, it's a completely different story...

The personal martial prowess of the Tang Sect members was nearly at a supernatural level. With just martial arts, ten of them could easily kill over a hundred people, but against firearms, even nine lives wouldn't be enough...

"Tang Huaiyuan can't be that reckless, can he?"

Qin Fang couldn't help but murmur. Tang Huaiyuan had always been in the deep mountains, unaware of modern firearms' power, but he's been out long enough to know something; it's unreasonable to think he'd do something so foolish.

Moreover, Qin Fang just looked at the exhibits at this exhibition and didn't see any extraordinary treasures...

Tang Huaiyuan was a martial arts expert, and also a Grandmaster from the Tang Clan, someone who didn't care about money. Only things like martial arts manuscripts, exquisite elixirs, and related items could possibly tempt him.

But Qin Fang had already looked through the exhibit list and hadn't found anything unusual; at least, from the list, he didn't see anything wrong.

"Tang Sect... The Green Gang..."

Qin Fang checked the crowd back and forth again, finding very few Tang Sect people; only two or three experts had appeared, most hadn't shown up.

But Qin Fang had learned from Tang Cheng that those dozen or so unfamiliar faces were likely the remaining Tang Sect people. It's just that Tang Huaiyuan was keeping a low profile and didn't send many over.

Instead, there were quite a few disciples from The Green Gang appearing, and they were different people each time. If it weren't for Qin Fang's scouting skill to identify them, it would have been really hard to notice...

"Could Tang Huaiyuan be in league with Boss Kui?"

Qin Fang couldn't help but mutter. Although he could hardly find any evidence, since Tang Huaiyuan and Boss Kui seemed like people from entirely different worlds, unlikely to have ties.

But if there was a common point between them, it seemed they were both Qin Fang's enemies...

As for Tang Huaiyuan, his son Tang Nan had died at Qin Fang's hands, and he came down the mountain this time to avenge his son, yet Qin Fang was still alive, while his brother Tang Huaiming had died, also at Qin Fang's hands...

Boss Kui and Qin Fang didn't have a vendetta of killing a son, but his son Kui Mingyu was severely beaten by Qin Fang, and Qin Fang had publicly humiliated Boss Kui. For this big shot running the underground world of Jiangzhou, losing face like this was almost like forming a blood feud.

If given a chance, these two definitely wouldn't show any mercy to Qin Fang... They might even deal with Qin Fang in the most brutal way.

"It seems Boss Kui initially didn't pursue it because he feared the Snow Mountain Sect behind me..."

Qin Fang smacked his lips, muttering softly.

Back when he handled Kui Mingyu, it appeared he had accepted Elder Alai's three moves, but in reality, the other side recognized his Traceless Snow Stepping Technique, thought he was a Snow Mountain Sect disciple, and thus didn't continue causing trouble.

However, if Tang Huaiyuan and Boss Kui joined forces, Boss Kui's apprehension would dissolve. Despite the Snow Mountain Sect's strength, the Tang Sect was formidable in its own right.

Especially since Tang Huaiyuan is an elder in the Tang Sect, making him a figure of high status and authority, supposedly far more influential than a mere disciple like Qin Fang...

But they might not know at all that Qin Fang isn't a Snow Mountain Sect member, nor related to the sect in any way.

Perhaps if the Snow Mountain Sect knew Qin Fang possessed the Traceless Snow Stepping Technique, they might send people down to hunt him, since this technique is the sect's treasured manuscript, and if leaked, it would be a significant embarrassment for the Snow Mountain Sect, who will certainly try to recover it!

Chapter 1728 - Blood Coral!_2

"Forget it, let's not think about it. When the soldiers come, the generals will hold them back; when the water comes, the soil will block it. What's there to be afraid of..."

Fortunately, Qin Fang wasn't the kind of person who feared trouble. He hadn't regarded Tang Huaiyuan and Boss Kui as serious threats before, and even if the two had joined forces now, it still wasn't enough to scare him.

In fact, compared to the threat posed by the two joining forces, Qin Fang felt that the pursuit from the experts of the underground world was more daunting.

After all, this time the underground world mobilized not only the Assassin's Alliance; allegedly, even members from the Mercenary Alliance and the Black Fist Alliance were involved. They just didn't know who exactly yet...

"I wonder how Ji Xiang's preparations are coming along?"

Qin Fang muttered to himself quietly but didn't dwell on it, slipping directly into the National Exhibition Center to preview all the exhibits in advance.

To be precise, Qin Fang aimed to inspect all the exhibits before the exhibition began, to figure out which piece Tang Huaiyuan or Boss Kui was planning to target...

Qin Fang vaguely guessed that if someone was planning to act during this exhibition, the likelihood that Tang Huaiyuan was involved was much greater than Boss Kui... Qin Fang was almost certain that Tang Huaiyuan had discovered something.

As for Boss Kui, at most, he was roped in by Tang Huaiyuan!

Whether Boss Kui joined willingly or was coerced by Tang Huaiyuan didn't matter. Overall, Boss Kui was unlikely to instigate such actions on his own.

After all, he's a major figure in The Green Gang, and Jiangzhou is the most powerful region for The Green Gang in Dragon Country. If things get out of hand, a furious high command might very well eradicate The Green Gang completely.

No matter how powerful The Green Gang's influence was, it couldn't possibly be strong enough to oppose the machinery of the state...

Boss Kui wouldn't engage in such actions, yet Qing Gang Disciples were still hovering around the area, while fewer Tang Sect Disciples were in sight. Qin Fang felt Tang Huaiyuan and Boss Kui might be up to something.

Qin Fang wasn't overly concerned about what they intended to do, but if Tang Huaiyuan dared to steal, it could only indicate that the item was indeed precious.

This preciousness wasn't just because the item was an invaluable antique. The more likely possibility was that it was something incredibly enticing to martial artists.

Tang Huaiyuan is a Grandmaster-level Expert, and if even such an expert covets it enough to attempt robbery, its value speaks for itself.

"Since it's something you want, there's no way I'm letting you have it..."

Qin Fang hadn't discovered it earlier, which was unavoidable. But now that he had, there was no way he would let Tang Huaiyuan succeed.

Such a treasure that even a Grandmaster-level Expert like Tang Huaiyuan covets must be extraordinary in value. Qin Fang may not be tempted, but he certainly wouldn't want it to fall into Tang Huaiyuan's hands.

"What is it? Have you found something?"

Tang Cheng, despite handling the perimeter security, was also the operations commander, overseeing and directing all three involved parties.

Because of this, he had allowed Qin Fang to join in as a free agent.

However, seeing Qin Fang no longer monitoring the experts mingling in the crowd but instead examining the exhibits, Tang Cheng couldn't help but come over to ask.

"Nothing much to see outside now. I've figured out the origins of those experts; they're all from the Tang Sect..."

Qin Fang chuckled, briefly explaining the background of the ten or so Grandmaster-level Experts that Tang Cheng had discovered. Although Qin Fang had only seen two or three, he was already quite certain about it.

After all, besides Tang Huaiyuan, there seemed to be no one else capable of deploying so many Grandmaster-level experts at once.

Moreover, if this weren't related to Tang Huaiyuan, how could it be such a coincidence that these Tang Sect people showed up here?

"The Tang Sect people?"

Hearing Qin Fang mention this, Tang Cheng's expression changed slightly, and his brows furrowed.

Perhaps a few months ago, Tang Cheng wouldn't have had such a reaction, as the existence of the Tang Sect was still shrouded in mystery, with few believing in it.

But now things were different. Tang Cheng knew about the animosity between Qin Fang and the Tang Sect, and he knew Qin Fang had even arranged for Tang Feifei and others to head to Korea, so he could focus on dealing with the Tang Sect...

Tang Cheng was also aware that Qin Fang had wiped out a part of the Tang Sect. The severe explosion on Blue Island back then was suppressed thanks to Tang Cheng's uncle exerting influence.

Tang Cheng thought that Qin Fang had already annihilated all the Tang Sect people in that incident, but unexpectedly, there was another group alive, and a rather terrifying one.

"Indeed, the Tang Sect people..."

Qin Fang nodded, firmly believing it was the Tang Sect people, but did not forget to remind Tang Cheng about the other force involved.

"However, I've also noticed The Green Gang members mingling among them. I'm worried these two groups may have colluded... which could complicate matters!"

While the threat posed by the Tang Sect was significant, even Martial Arts Experts couldn't withstand a hail of bullets. Tang Cheng, though wary, wasn't overly worried.

Chapter 1729 - Blood Coral!_3

"The Green Gang..."

However, hearing the name of The Green Gang, even Tang Cheng couldn't help feeling a bit uneasy.

The people of the Tang Sect have been isolated from the world for a long time, at most they can only be considered powerful individual martial artists and not much of a threat, but The Green Gang is different. These people are local power players in Jiangzhou, and if they join, it would become quite troublesome.

Not to mention anything else, these local power players have infiltrated various parts of Jiangzhou in a frightening manner, one might say that The Green Gang's informants are everywhere, completely undetectable.

For example, at the National Exhibition Center here, even Tang Cheng can't be certain that none of the staff here are informants for The Green Gang...

Perhaps they weren't before, but now that The Green Gang is involved, who can guarantee that these people haven't been bought out?

"I understand this matter..."

Tang Cheng's expression wasn't looking good, but the information Qin Fang provided was very important and quite timely. He also needed to make some preparations to anticipate any emergency situations.

"Brother Tang, I'll let you get busy then, and I'll wander around..."

Seeing that Tang Cheng was busy with these matters, Qin Fang didn't disturb him further, greeted Tang Cheng, and went off alone to scout the exhibited items.

Since the exhibition is about to start, the venue is almost set up, with each item displayed properly.

Of course, these items are placed inside individual vacuum glass cases, and the glass cases are not ordinary, made of very sturdy bulletproof tempered glass. Trying to break the glass by violent means would be quite difficult.

The more precious the treasure, the more security measures are in place. For instance, the glass case prepared for the Orchid Pavilion Preface was layered with three layers of incredibly thick glass.

Based on Qin Fang's judgment, with such protective measures, it would be tough to break it even with a rocket-propelled grenade.

Of course, unless someone intends to destroy it on purpose, it's unlikely that heavy weapons would be used to blast through this tempered glass.

Although the glass is quite thick, it's for protecting these precious items. Since Qin Fang isn't here to steal or destroy them, he naturally doesn't mind.

His scouting skill isn't affected by this thick tempered glass, which certainly puts his mind at ease...

This antique exhibition naturally consists of more than just a few items. There are actually quite a few antiques, accumulating to hundreds in total.

Of course, there are only a dozen or so truly valuable items, all of which are precious artifacts rated national second grade or above, including several national treasures.

The majority are relatively ordinary antiques. Although there are exquisite rare pieces among them that could fetch astronomical prices at auction, they still fall short compared to the dozen or so treasures...

Qin Fang is now appraising each antique with his scouting skill. Determining authenticity obviously holds little significance, as almost all pieces in this exhibition are genuine. Even if some fakes were made excellently, resembling the real thing, they are unlikely to escape the sharp eyes of those renowned experts.

So Qin Fang need not worry about this. What he aims to find out is which item Tang Huaiyuan has set his eyes on so that Qin Fang can be prepared for it.

"This antique doesn't have anything special about it; it shouldn't be the one!"

Qin Fang examined each piece, continuously using his scouting skill to look for any anomalies in these antiques.

And this anomaly might be the reason Tang Huaiyuan wants to rob it, so Qin Fang dares not overlook any item.

"This one doesn't have any anomalies either; it's not the one..."

"This also isn't it!"

"This still isn't..."

With a total of hundreds of items, Qin Fang can only identify them one by one, wasting time and dealing with exhaustion and fatigue.

The entire process is extremely dull and tedious. Persisting for an extended period even gives Qin Fang an impulse to vomit...

But time is quite tight now. If he can't find that item before Tang Huaiyuan makes a move, it would be very difficult for Qin Fang to guard against it.

Qin Fang, considered a formidable genius, is still not a match for Tang Huaiyuan. Going head-to-head is not a wise choice, so Qin Fang resorts to using intelligence...

Since intelligence is the strategy, finding Tang Huaiyuan's target is most important!

If he knows what treasure Tang Huaiyuan intends to seize, he can lie in wait and catch him. Though Tang Huaiyuan is formidable, Qin Fang, lying in ambush, is not someone to be trifled with either.

In a straightforward fight, Qin Fang wouldn't be able to beat Tang Huaiyuan, but lying in wait and setting an ambush is a different story, Qin Fang wouldn't shy away from anyone...

Never mind a Grandmaster-level expert, even at Great Grandmaster Level, Qin Fang wouldn't fear them!

"What a damn tedious job!"

Though he understood this well, it still required him alone to painstakingly identify the hundreds of antiques, an exhausting task known only to himself.

Yet this task fell solely on him, as others couldn't assist him even if they wanted to, given that only he had the scouting skill.

"Oh... this Blood Coral seems to have an issue!"

Now, by sheer coincidence, after appraising over a hundred items and wasting more than two hours, just as Qin Fang was about to take a break and continue later, his eyes were suddenly drawn to this piece of Blood Coral in front of him...

Or rather, not only drawn to it, but Qin Fang found a problem with this Blood Coral, and it wasn't an ordinary problem; it was quite substantial...

"Could it be that Tang Huaiyuan is after this?"

Almost at that moment, Qin Fang couldn't help but have this thought pop into his mind!

Chapter 1730 - Wishful Thinking...

...

In a corner near the edge of the exhibition hall, there's an inconspicuous glass case containing a blood-red coral tree. This is the Blood Coral.

In terms of individual size, this Blood Coral isn't particularly large. It's highly collectible due to its rarity and impeccable preservation.

Among hundreds of exhibits, the Blood Coral, in terms of value, pales in comparison to national treasures and is nowhere near the level of the Orchid Pavilion Preface.

If one item could be lost from these hundreds of exhibits, many would consider the Blood Coral a suitable choice...

Perhaps for this reason, the Blood Coral's exhibition spot is not particularly ideal, located in a relatively remote corner, with only a not-so-robust glass case for protection.

With such security measures, even a casual thief could easily steal this Blood Coral...

This isn't to say the exhibition organizers weren't attentive. Perhaps time was too tight, perhaps the cost too high, or perhaps due to other reasons, but items of Blood Coral's caliber often share such security levels—far from top-tier.

However, Qin Fang could disregard other exhibits because, even with insufficient security levels, they posed no danger.

Qin Fang was so certain because he uncovered the Blood Coral's secret, specifically understanding why Tang Huaiyuan was so determined to snatch these exhibits. Simply put, it was all for this Blood Coral...

"I see..."

Standing before the Blood Coral, Qin Fang, separated by the glass case, couldn't touch the Blood Coral inside.

However, his scouting skill had already fully exposed Tang Huaiyuan's secret, leaving nowhere to hide before Qin Fang...

"Tang Huaiyuan, you really aren't just ordinarily vicious!"

Gazing at the Blood Coral, Qin Fang's face darkened, precisely because he understood Tang Huaiyuan's purpose, resulting in his unsightly expression.

Qin Fang's statement was entirely due to a discovery he made concerning the Blood Coral.

"Heart-Eroding Poison, highly toxic, a powerful toxin released by the death of mutant coral polyps, intensely corrosive to the human heart, incurable..."

Seeing this description, if Qin Fang's expression wasn't grim, it would be quite surprising.

This toxin, released only upon the death of mutant coral polyps, is extremely rare and exists under very unique conditions.

Moreover, Qin Fang knew this Blood Coral's formation was due to the toxin, specifically caused by the mutant coral polyps.

The rarity and preciousness of Blood Coral stem from this, as mutant coral polyps are themselves extremely rare, and stringent conditions are required for Blood Coral to form.

Each Blood Coral's appearance holds, besides its collectible value, an overlooked ferocious toxicity!

Of course, this toxin requires special refinement to genuinely release, making undisturbed Blood Coral seemingly harmless to creatures, appearing as if the toxin were sealed or suppressed...

Yet, if this toxin were released, the consequences are severe. Even the slightest amount could poison a strong adult male multiple times over, demonstrating its overpowering toxicity...

Ordinary people may have never seen Blood Coral, let alone studied it, rendering the rare and fierce Heart-Eroding Poison unknown.

Unbeknownst to others, Qin Fang knew well that his enemy, Tang Sect Elder Tang Huaiyuan, certainly was aware, and quite clearly, too.

The Tang Sect is renowned for hidden weapons and poisons. Consider only their achievements in toxins, already notable.

Over a thousand years, the Tang Sect invested tremendous manpower, material, and financial resources into poisons, creating diverse and domineering toxins.

Through extensive, multi-century research, the Tang Sect amassed countless exotic poisons, numbers difficult to tally, understood best by Tang Sect members.

Owing to extensive study, others might never witness Blood Coral, but Tang Sect members had obtained and researched it, leading to some understanding.

Especially releasing toxic substances from Blood Coral, recorded in the Tang Sect's poison scriptures, but accessible only to figures such as Tang Huaiyuan, a Tang Sect Elder and family elder, eligible to consult the poison scriptures.

Perhaps for this reason, upon learning the Blood Coral was headed to Jiangzhou, Tang Huaiyuan disregarded even avenging Qin Fang in Jiangzhou, determined to pull a big heist, intending to secure this Blood Coral by any means necessary...

"Heart-Eroding Poison, though I don't know your intent, this near-unkillable toxin absolutely cannot fall into your hands!"

Understanding the might of the Heart-Eroding Poison, even someone like Qin Fang, who has a cheat-like advantage, is full of dread, fearing he might accidentally get some on him. Its dominating power is indisputable.

Qin Fang isn't sure exactly what Tang Huaiyuan plans to do with this Heart-Eroding Poison, but based on his suspicions, Qin Fang assumes Tang Huaiyuan is targeting him.

Perhaps it's because Tang Huaiyuan knows that Qin Fang doesn't fear hidden weapons and isn't even afraid of the common poisons, so he's decided to take the risk to acquire some truly top-tier poison.

Or maybe Tang Huaiyuan just happened to know some details about this exhibition, like the accidental leak of news about certain exhibits. That's why he approached Boss Kui to discuss the matter.

The terrifying power of the state machinery, although Tang Huaiyuan hasn't witnessed it firsthand, is well known to him. Ultimately, after some consideration, he decided to hold his actions for the time being.

However, Qin Fang, right in front of them, seems to have never encountered it, and he looks at everyone with a scrutinizing gaze, as if he doesn't care about anyone's feelings.

But one thing can be certain; Tang Huaiyuan must highly value this Blood Coral, or else his arrogant self wouldn't seek help from Boss Kui.

Yet, this has little to do with Qin Fang. Since he's still here, he has to stand his ground for this last shift, at least to prevent Tang Huaiyuan from turning this place into chaos, right?

"You damned Tang, I'm not done with you..."

Though Qin Fang's issues were resolved, he appeared disheveled, looking quite uncomfortable...

But in reality, Qin Fang had another thought in his mind. If he wasn't trying to stay calm, he would have already confronted him.

He even thought about his acting skills... Qin Fang considered winning an award or something... despite how terrible, or rather, extremely terrible they were.

The conflict between Qin Fang and Tang Huaiyuan had already escalated to an irreconcilable hatred, not caring at all this time.

Tang Huaiyuan came for the Blood Coral. Qin Fang didn't know this before, and naturally was too lazy to waste time with these people.

But now it's different; Qin Fang already knows Tang Huaiyuan's objective, so he certainly won't let him succeed so easily.

"Tsk tsk, let's see how you compete with me..."

Having thought of a solution, Qin Fang couldn't help but be very pleased, even a bit excited...

Originally, he hadn't figured out how to resolve this deadlock, but unexpectedly, the opponent practically handed it to him, as if ready to risk everything.

Tang Huaiyuan's actions this time were actually quite hidden. If it weren't for Tang Cheng's accidental discovery and Qin Fang coincidentally being in Jiangzhou, with reconnaissance skill assistance, he wouldn't have guessed it was Tang Huaiyuan's doing.

Of course, now that Qin Fang knows Tang Huaiyuan's goal, there's no way he'll let Tang Huaiyuan succeed...

"Brother Tang, I need to ask you something!"

Thinking of this, Qin Fang didn't hesitate at all and immediately called Tang Cheng to discuss his request briefly...

Actually, Qin Fang's request was fairly simple; he wanted to temporarily take charge of this Blood Coral. After all, Tang Huaiyuan was clearly here for it; if it weren't obtained, the results were predictable.

"What? That's impossible..."

As soon as Qin Fang proposed this condition, Tang Cheng rejected it without a second thought, not giving Qin Fang any chance to speak.

"Although I'm responsible for the exhibition's security, I don't have much say. This exhibition is very important, attracting a lot of attention, and can't afford any mistake..."

Tang Cheng briefly explained the reason for his refusal, feeling quite helpless but also worried Qin Fang might have some ideas, so he elaborated further.

"Mistakes not only can't happen with security but also with these exhibits, so your suggestion is simply not feasible. Don't waste your efforts!"

"Also, are you saying those people are here for the Blood Coral?"

Tang Cheng wasn't clueless. He had a reason for bringing Qin Fang in the first place, and now Qin Fang's sudden revelation couldn't be ignored.

The truth is simple: the Tang Sect planned the heist mainly for this Blood Coral, which is why Qin Fang wanted to secure it personally.

But obviously, Tang Cheng couldn't agree. Not to mention that the organizers wouldn't accept this proposal, even Tang Cheng wouldn't allow Qin Fang to take such a risk.

He had no choice. This time, the opponents are very powerful, and Qin Fang barely has the strength to resist. If anything happened to Qin Fang, he'd have no way to explain to his sister, Tang Feifei, which is why he firmly refused...
