Chapter 211: The Sense of Security Brought by Massive Emperor Points

The legend of Endless Glacier stretches far back in time. The White Lady has always been a figure in legend, shrouded in mystery. Her existence is considered one of the greatest secrets of the eastern domain of the Eura continent!

To receive her aid is undoubtedly a great blessing for the Empire!

"Are you happy?" Daisy smiled, gently tapping Josephine's nose. Then, her gaze shifted toward the direction of the Emperor's bedchamber. A flicker of surprise passed through her starry eyes.

"Josephine!" she called, "Your majesty has returned!"

...

Aurek returned to the Emperor's bedchamber and sank into his system panel.

[Killed a large number of enemies at Crimson Hills, gained Emperor Points +33 billion...]

Aurek's gaze lingered on the astronomical number for a moment. Then, he let out a long sigh, as if a heavy weight had been lifted from his shoulders.

This battle was over.

The future of the Empire had indeed become incredibly clear because of it!

The massive amount of Emperor Points was not only enough to upgrade the Emperor's Scepter to level 8, but even pushing for level 9 was no longer a mere dream!

With level 9, the summoned units would likely reach Stellar rank in strength, and Aurek estimated that he would be able to summon over 800 Stellar rank units every day!

This Empire would truly be invincible!

Forget about the foundation of semi-hegemony or Overlord Rank forces—henceforth, they would all be nothing more than pitiful groans under the Empire's iron heel!

Previously, strategies had been necessarily cautious, but now... there was no need to hold back anymore!

Aurek could focus on developing the Empire's power without worrying about any external pressure.

He could watch as his attribute legions continuously grew, accumulating to tens of thousands or even millions in size...

And this vast Eura continent truly needed an unprecedented emperor to complete its unification!

His gaze pierced through the palace, directed toward Roseries Palace.

With a flicker, his figure appeared at the palace gate.

"Your majesty!" Josephine greeted, bowing.

Daisy also greeted him elegantly, following the proper formalities.

"Your majesty, this is my mentor from the Sigeits Parliament," Josephine introduced.

"Member of the Parliament, Daisy," Daisy introduced herself with a warm smile.

"Thank you for your assistance," Aurek acknowledged, understanding that it was this very lady who had unleashed the holy flower that had severely wounded Blade City's ancient existence.

"It was just a little embellishment for your majesty," Daisy smiled, her gentle expression radiating an inexplicable warmth.

Even Aurek couldn't help but glance at her twice, though not because of her beauty. It was her unique aura.

She seemed like a legendary mage, one who had seen it all—approachable yet unfathomable, her charm effortlessly drawing others' trust and goodwill.

"How would you feel about having Daisy mentor stay at the palace, your majesty?" Josephine asked.

Having a sage rank expert stationed here would fully ensure the safety of the palace. This was the greatest help she could offer.

Aurek pondered for a moment.

"Have Kazeking Palace readied," he ordered.

That palace had been meticulously built by successive emperors to house the highly esteemed consorts. It was currently unoccupied. Additionally, it was close to Roseries Palace but distanced from the Emperor's bedchamber. Aurek did not want any secrets to be discovered by anyone, even Josephine.

Josephine nodded in agreement.

Daisy, however, reminded Aurek, "Your majesty, the battle at Crimson Hills drained a substantial part of the Empire's foundation. Other factions are likely to become covetous once they hear of this. You need to be extra cautious."

"Moreover, the Ordon Theocracy doesn't seem as simple as it appears. I have a feeling they are secretly brewing something."

"Let them brew," Aurek looked toward the east, a cold smile curling his lips. "The longer they brew, the faster they will be destroyed in the future!"

"Josephine, I'll be coming here tonight. Be sure to prepare dinner for me!" Aurek softly told Josephine before vanishing from sight.

Josephine blushed and glanced at her mentor beside her.

Daisy looked at Josephine, confused by her reaction. "Josephine, why are you blushing?"

"..."

"Six percent loss!"

"This is probably all of Aurek's wealth, haha!" Onassis, the head of the Akloroi Federation in the southern Empire, burst into laughter.

This was the first good news he had heard since the founding of the federation!

When Onassis first heard that Aurek had over 100,000 powerful Awakener soldiers, he had been anxious. Little did he know that Blade City and Crimson Hills, two semi-hegemonic forces, had managed to exhaust sixty percent of his strength in a direct confrontation. This was great news for him!

Standing next to him was Kent, the leader of the Sunlit Chapel, along with three Stellar rank elders from the Chapel—Terrence, Gavin, and Alvin.

The news was brought back by them!

"Don't celebrate too early!" Terrence cautioned.

"The White Lady from Endless Glacier intervened, the sage rank from Sigeits Parliament got involved, and many hidden experts have turned their eyes to the Empire's power, choosing to align themselves with Aurek."

"Hmph! Those old geezers!" Kent laughed.

"They're all selfish opportunists. What they're after is the Empire's national strength. Once the Empire shows signs of weakness, they'll leave without hesitation, even turning their blades on the Empire..."

The three elders didn't deny it.

Kent continued his analysis.

"Although we don't know where Aurek trained these soldiers, more than 100,000 peak master rank soldiers already rival the foundations accumulated by Overlord Rank forces over forty to fifty thousand years."

"That's probably all he has left. Now, with only 40% of his original strength, it will be hard for him to deal with another semi-hegemonic force. This eases the pressure on us quite a bit."

Onassis spoke, "If we can force him into another major battle, we might be able to exhaust his resources completely!"

"It won't be that easy," Terrence said.

"The battle to eradicate Blade City and Crimson Hills has already drained the Empire's power significantly. Aurek won't easily engage in large-scale warfare anytime soon."

"And no one from the other semi-hegemonic forces dares to challenge the Empire alone."

"The battle against Blade City and Crimson Hills was Aurek's battle to establish his reputation, following the example of Empress Elizabeth from years ago. She used a thunderous method to crush three semi-hegemonic forces and intimidated all the Overlord Rank powers, which stabilized the Empire's situation," Terrence added.

"That's true, but the situation in the Fasiar Plains is different," Gavin chimed in.

"I think we should take this opportunity to unite forces with the Skyeeye Guild, the Brotherhood of the Old Gods, Skypeak Tower, and the Bimat Highlands to deliver a devastating blow to the Crossbridge Empire!"

"The Ordon Theocracy and the Empire have already torn their alliance apart. Silas has been killed by Aurek."

"According to reliable sources, the Ordon Theocracy is sending several grandmaster rank experts to strike Eryndor City. I don't know if they want to overthrow the royal family or have another plan."

"But this is a situation neither we nor Skyeeye Guild would want to see."

Hearing this, Kent and Onassis fell into deep thought...
