Chapter 328: Targeting the Darkness Sect

The group was stunned for a long time, completely unable to come to their senses.

After a while, Camiel finally asked,

"Do you know the current situation there?"

Aster and the others, still in shock, were also extremely excited.

If there really is a legion of millions of Divine Clerics, then the safety of the continent of Eura would be significantly guaranteed.

Woots spoke.

"The specific situation is still unclear, but all the generals in the four-winged Demon Legion command are extremely shaken, and the legion is quickly mobilizing."

"I spent quite a bit of mana stone to get some information from one of the generals."

"You'll be shocked when you hear what I found out!"

"Tell us quickly!"

Aster urged excitedly. "What exactly did you find out?"

"First, the continent of Eura is about to be unified."

Woots began.

Everyone was moved by this news.

While the people of the Abyss Demon Realm might not understand, those from the continent of Eura knew well what this meant.

The vast expanse of the continent, with its thousands of regions, had never truly been unified.

Achieving such unity would be a monumental feat, an extraordinary accomplishment!

This would be an unprecedented achievement in the history of the world!

"I really want to go back and see it with my own eyes, to witness that moment!"

A Grand Divine Cleric-level powerhouse said with a wistful expression.

Camiel took a deep breath and asked, "I want to know who achieved this?"

Woots replied, "It was a country called the Crossbridge Empire!"

"Their emperor is named Aurek Veynar!"

"And that legion of millions of Divine Clerics is under his control!"

"And the second thing I want to tell you is that he started from a small country, swept through the continent of Eura, and trained this legion of millions of Divine Clerics... all in just over a year!"

"This is exactly why the entire four-winged Demon Legion command was left speechless."

"Over a year!?"

Camiel's heart was shaken deeply.

Unable to control his powerful aura, it exploded outward, creating an energy storm.

"Are you sure your source of information is correct?"

Woots nodded seriously, still in shock himself.

The group of powerful individuals was left dumbfounded.

"Everyone, I think I need to go back to the continent of Eura."

Woots declared.

After a long while, Camiel, Aster, and the others finally managed to regain some composure.

They tried to calm the turmoil in their hearts but couldn't suppress the intense excitement bubbling within.

They didn't know how to describe this unbelievable rise, but they were already deeply intrigued.

Even though they had never seen Aurek, they were completely captivated by his unbelievable methods and the sweeping power he wielded over the continent.

They too wanted to see this up-and-coming figure with their own eyes!

Twilight City.

The Court of Darkness had seized all the treasures from the Blood Magic Society, rapidly growing in power.

They then proceeded to acquire several shops in the city, and with unstoppable momentum, they completely took over the Blood Magic Society's existing industry network.

The Blood Magic Society had fallen, but the Court of Darkness had risen!

Their reputation was already spreading. Not only within Twilight City, but also to many surrounding areas, people had learned of the Court of Darkness's existence and were keeping an eye on them.

To facilitate this, Natasha had even lowered the auction commission.

Previously, the Blood Magic Society took a 15% commission, while the Court of Darkness reduced it to 10%, successfully attracting all the Blood Magic Society's existing clients.

In the face of profit, many people didn't care whether it was the Blood Magic Society or the Court of Darkness, as long as it benefited them.

Lowering the commission was the most direct and attractive strategy.

With stable clientele, various rare treasures naturally followed!

Valuable items could be sent back to the continent of Eura.

Additionally, they could use their high-level clients to gain deeper insights into the Abyss Demon Realm.

Court of Darkness.

Natasha handed the Ice Tear to Cyriel.

The Ice Tear contained the pure essence of ice and divine properties, offering unparalleled enhancement for individuals with similar elemental affinities.

If Cyriel could fully absorb this treasure, combined with the divine essence of the Blood Magic Society's guardian, she would be able to ascend to the True God rank.

After all, the Ice Tear was a high-level divine artifact!

The stronger Cyriel became, the more secure the Court of Darkness would be.

Natasha herself used Breath Jade.

This was also an extremely rare treasure, containing immense power. According to legend, it was the condensed essence of Saint King-level power, capable of greatly enhancing her physique and potential.

Additionally, the divine essence within it could allow her to touch the power beyond the God King rank.

This was a treasure unimaginable on the continent of Eura!

Having absorbed only a small portion, her rank rapidly soared to the Sage rank, triggering a Sage rank natural disaster!

However, with Cyriel's protection, Natasha easily weathered this Sage rank disaster and then rapidly ascended to the Divine Envoy rank.

In terms of business, the Milott family efficiently handled the internal affairs, keeping everything in order.

In addition to assigning some Void Warlocks as guards, they also recruited a number of beautiful women from Twilight City to serve as maids and servants.

"This lady is truly extraordinary. It seems she's a seasoned professional."

On an ancient building, Eborwen looked at the Court of Darkness from a distance, deeply shocked.

If it were him, he would never have been able to completely take over the Blood Magic Society's industries and clientele in just a few days after its downfall.

As far as business acumen goes, it was truly remarkable!

Beside him was Dark Wing, one of the three leaders of the Shadow Legion.

He too nodded in agreement.

"The person behind her must be the real enigma. They trusted this seemingly weak woman to represent them in Twilight City, showing they aren't afraid of any danger here."

Eborwen warned,

"Someone hinted before that there seems to be a mysterious presence behind her, and the Court of Darkness members seem to show great respect for that presence. Even if they try to avoid it, that respect can't be completely hidden."

"If I'm right, the true master of the Court of Darkness is probably that mysterious presence."

Dark Wing fell into deep thought.

To entrust such a low-ranking woman to operate in Twilight City, the person behind her must be extraordinarily confident—or perhaps they simply didn't care about Twilight City at all!

"General Dark Wing, perhaps you could start investigating from the Darkness Sect," Eborwen suggested.

As for methods, there were plenty.

For example, they could disrupt the Court of Darkness's business and create some trouble for them.

Since the Court of Darkness wanted to do business, they would have to show the strength to back it up.

With a little probing, they would be able to uncover something.

Dark Wing nodded.

"At most, we can only get a rough idea. It's probably impossible to uncover the entire truth."

"Though the Lord only gave a month to investigate, it's likely that he's preparing for how to drive the Court of Darkness out of Twilight City."

"When that time comes, if Eborwen can offer some help, perhaps some of the desired benefits can be gained."

A glint flashed in Eborwen's eyes, and he quickly gave a salute to Dark Wing.

"Bring the batch of new slaves I just bought and send them all to Lord Dark Wing!"
