Chapter 345: The Gold Giant Gate of Tens of Thousands of Meters

Zach clearly remembered that the creature he had encountered last time was this very magical beast!

It had nearly claimed his life with just two moves—had he not escaped quickly, he would have been done for!

But now, looking at its tragic end, it no longer had that invincible aura it once boasted.

It seemed that the downfall of the Blood Magic Society, Twilight Legion, and the Eborwen family might all stem from this invisible, yet omnipresent, terrifying force.

Fear gripped his heart as he instinctively glanced around, feeling that every inch of shadow seemed to harbor a deadly presence.

"Please, great lord, don't kill it!"

Zach snapped back to reality and quickly spoke up.

"This Tri-Helmed Blood Lion has reached God General rank, and it possesses three powerful abilities—Golden Light Blade, Toxic Miasma, and Invisibility. Its combat strength is formidable. If we could recruit it to guard the Court of Darkness, it would be a great asset."

Having witnessed the true power of the Court of Darkness, Zach had already made up his mind to join. Now was the time to express his loyalty and worth.

Natasha glanced at Zach but said nothing.

Her gaze shifted to the severely wounded Tri-Helmed Blood Lion.

A void warlock used his power to bind the lion and drag it out of the wreckage, suspending it in midair.

"Please forgive my trespass, I surrender!" The Tri-Helmed Blood Lion weakly shouted.

"Great master! You've come here to search for treasure, right?"

"I know all about this place! I'll tell you everything I know and provide you with all the information you need!"

Zach was momentarily stunned. This creature was even more compliant than he had expected!

Natasha was slightly taken aback. The questions she was about to ask had already been preemptively answered by the beast, leaving her at a loss for words.

Cyriel and the True God-level contract deity silently observed this dramatic scene.

Natasha quickly regained her composure and calmly replied, "If you want to live, then it all depends on your performance. Tell us more."

"Yes, master!" The Blood Lion, now named Reo, joyfully exclaimed. As long as they were willing to keep him alive, he had a chance.

"This secret realm is artificially created, with the purpose of concealing a Gold Giant Gate deep inside."

"Behind that gate, there is said to be a grand hall, a rare divine herb garden, and some unknown ancient secrets."

"But no living being dares approach it, and no one has ever been able to open the gate!"

"Because it is made of the rare Starborne Gold, which is said to be impervious even to beings above Sage King rank."

"Moreover, there is a powerful guardian before the Gold Giant Gate, the greatest obstacle to entering the world beyond. So, don't get your hopes up about what's behind the door—obtaining it is nearly impossible."

"In addition, there is a headless giant here, with power roughly equivalent to True God rank, and its combat strength is formidable. It guards an Energy Divine Spring, which nurtures divine herbs and several powerful ancient divine weapons. If you defeat the headless giant, these items can be obtained."

...

The Tri-Helmed Blood Lion spoke in detail, clearly familiar with the area. It was evident that it had been spying on this place for quite some time.

The Gold Giant Gate?

Natasha's eyes glimmered.

It seemed that the Aetherian Sanctuary they had been searching for was very likely hidden behind that gate...

After hearing about the situation from the Blood Lion, Natasha deduced that the Aetherian Sanctuary was most likely beyond that Gold Giant Gate.

Just because others couldn't obtain it, and even Sage King-level beings couldn't destroy it, didn't mean she couldn't.

However, the guardian of the Divine Gate, being tasked with guarding the giant gate, would certainly not be easy to defeat.

Natasha also understood that exploring the unknown could easily involve certain ancient taboos.

"What's your name?" she asked.

"Respectful master, my name is Reo!" The Blood Lion rejoiced inwardly at hearing Natasha's question.

His life was finally spared!

"Lead the way!"

"Yes, master, this way..."

The Elemental Assassins continued to push forward into the depths of the secret realm.

They cleared potential threats and collected all manner of rare treasures and magical plants along the way. It was a thorough sweep.

Many ancient plants and divine trees, which had been growing for countless years, were discovered and harvested. These would all be brought back to enrich the Crossbridge Empire.

Natasha walked along calmly, secretly admiring the fact that the Elemental Assassins' characteristics were perfect for exploring such a secret realm.

They arrived deep inside the realm.

A massive, ancient sense of oppression gradually descended on everyone's hearts.

Before them lay a surging magical energy stream that split this small world in half.

The towering waves formed a misty water-elemental curtain in the void, completely obscuring the view of what lay beyond.

To prevent a sudden attack from any unknown threats, the void warlock used his spatial power to create a vast dimensional field, allowing them to cross the surging energy stream and land on the opposite side.

Even within the protected field, the weight and ancient pressure of the atmosphere still weighed heavily on them.

The True God-level contract deity summoned a holy radiance, barely able to counterbalance the oppressive force.

They looked into the distance.

On the horizon, towering over everything, stood the Gold Giant Gate—tens of thousands of meters tall, silently standing as if connecting to the void.

Ancient, grand, and mysterious!

It looked as though the other side of the gate led to another cosmic starry realm, filled with endless eons and legendary tales.

This was undoubtedly the masterpiece of a Sage King-level craftsman—like a timeless gateway to heaven.

"Master, this is the Gold Giant Gate," Reo, the Blood Lion, said.

Zach was equally awestruck. Staring at the immense Gold Giant Gate, he swallowed hard.

The legend was indeed true!

"Starborne Gold, this is the hardest and most powerful magical metal discovered to date, bar none."

"Even a small piece of it is worth more than an ordinary legendary artifact. It's so rare that it's nearly a myth, only spoken of in ancient texts. I can't believe this entire gate is made from such material..."

The gate, standing tens of thousands of meters tall, was entirely forged from Starborne Gold. Zach couldn't even begin to estimate its value.

Just taking a small piece of it would likely trigger bloody conflict across the entire world.

The sight was simply overwhelming.

"This metal... is that rare?" Natasha asked, her gaze narrowing slightly.

The True God-level deity spoke up.

"Even in the upper God realms, there was once a grand divine war over a piece of Starborne Gold the size of a palm."

"It was fought over so that it could be forged into the ultimate artifact, one capable of shaking many powerful God Realm factions."

Her tone subtly trembled as she spoke.

Natasha, too, felt a shock in her heart as she focused intently on the Gold Giant Gate.

How wonderful it would be if they could take it all back to the Crossbridge Empire!

Even a small piece could cause a divine war, yet this gate was made entirely of it, stretching for tens of thousands of meters—its rarity was unimaginable.

But...

A small piece of it was so precious. Could this immense Gold Giant Gate truly have been crafted by a Sage King-level artisan?

How could a Sage King have the right to possess so much divine gold?

Now it seemed that the situation was far more complex than the records had indicated, and it would undoubtedly involve immense intrigue.

After all, a portal forged from a material so rare in the endless starry river—how vast must the influence behind it be?

And what incredible scenes lay beyond the Gold Giant Gate?
