

Gods Daily 352

Chapter 352: The Hall of the Gods

"This is... the legendary Aetherian Sanctuary?"

Aurek's voice trembled slightly, an unusual wavering, and even his breathing momentarily paused.

Even when he obtained those powerful summoned units, he had never felt such uncontrollable emotion.

Josephine and the others were already utterly entranced.

It was as though they had stepped into a floating Divine Empire.

Countless stars were reshaped by tremendous power, floating in the void where clouds and holy mist intertwined.

Each star had a majestic, resplendent temple standing on it, with crystal domes and glass spires reflecting millions of rays of light, like the first beam of dawn bestowed by the goddess of morning.

Arched bridges of light connected the stars, their luminous bridges crisscrossing through the sky, weaving into a three-dimensional sacred network.

Phantasmal immortal birds from legend soared beneath the dome!

They passed over the sacred bridges, traveling between the endless stars and temples, their wings scattering tiny beams of divine light.

Twelve entire layers of floating temples.

They stood on the first layer.

Around them, columns adorned with epic relief carvings supported the heavens, their shafts wrapped in dazzling dragon carvings, with every scale vividly lifelike.

Stars stretched toward the horizon, the temples and towering spires arranged in a solemn formation, enveloped in an eternal, undying glow, with law patterns cascading like waterfalls.

It was as though they stood in the council hall of the gods!

And this was just the first layer.

In the center, a staircase of light extended upward, leading to higher sacred realms...

It wasn't until Aurek stepped into the second layer of the sacred domain that the others, as if awakening from a dream, followed closely behind.

Before them stood countless statues of holy unicorns, carved from white jade, lined up in front of the temple.

On the temple's flanks, ever-blooming holy flowers and evergreen blessing grasses spread out like a dazzling carpet, with rays of starlight streaming from behind the temple, casting everything in a brilliant golden glow.

They ascended layer by layer.

It was as if each layer was a complete Divine Empire world.

It felt like they were delving deeper into some sacred core.

Along the way, the phantoms of dragons and immortal birds flitted between the pillars, while the images of angels and goddesses flickered in the stained glass.

Amethyst coral trees, starry agate gems, and deep blue crystal trees lined both sides of the corridors.

Each of these treasures could have ignited an empire-wide war.

The holy light of the temple never faded, and exotic flowers and plants remained lush despite the passage of time.

Phantasmal white deer walked through the gardens, and the songs of divine birds resonated like the sounds of heaven.

There were sanctified pools large enough to bathe dragons.

A garden filled with sacred herbs.

A starlight waterfall fell from the void.

Ancient divine prophecies were etched into the temple's pillars!

Sacred crystals, like pebbles, were embedded in the surface of the sacred bridges, each step they took was upon Starlight.

The sacred tree, nourished by the passage of time, swayed in the courtyard, scattering threads of divine laws, manifesting myriad divine phenomena.

A tree with fruit like stars shaded the sky, its divine essence permeating the entire space.

Amethyst divine fruit trees glowed softly in the center of the stars...

So much, so much...

Each piece was unparalleled in the world, and even a single one of them, if it fell into the outside world, would drive the most powerful monarchs mad.

Aurek stopped at the twelfth layer of the sacred realm and then proceeded deeper, arriving at a floating star observatory.

This observatory was formed from the core of an ancient star, and a small temple stood upon it.

Next to it, an altar was quietly placed on a jade pedestal.

Elizabeth only glanced at it and felt a shock in her heart.

This altar was, in fact, a legendary artifact!

Aurek continued deeper, arriving at the most central area of the sacred realm.

Before them lay a sacred garden of medicinal herbs.

Within it, those magical elixirs and divine items that were considered treasures in the outside world were mere embellishments here.

The truly divine herbs bloomed in a riot of colors, their fragrances wafting through the air, almost tangible.

However, these peerless divine herbs... seemed as though they were merely ornamental plants, adding to the beauty of the scene!

The group was so stunned that they were nearly numb, no longer continuing their exploration, merely gazing at the temples in the distance, shrouded in holy mist and radiant light.

If this place was not Aetherian Sanctuary, then there was no other place in the infinite universe worthy of such a name.

Aurek gazed down at this divine marvel.

This was exactly how he had imagined the halls of the gods should look.

Even more magnificent, even more unparalleled than any depiction in myth or legend!

"The laws inside this sanctuary and the very essence of the world are flawless, even more stable than the heavens of the outside world..."

Elizabeth spoke, her voice filled with shock.

"It's hard to imagine what kind of existence could create such a miracle."

This was an unparalleled masterpiece.

The most perfect structure under the boundless stars.

The unique, supreme divine temple!

This was truly the abode of the gods!

Aurek extended his near-True God-level mind power, covering the vast expanse of this space.

Each layer of the sacred realm was vast beyond imagination, floating above the clouds and hidden within holy mist and eternal light.

Crystal temples!

Radiant altars!

Baptismal pools!

Divine herb gardens!

...

Every single place perfectly matched his vision of the Divine Empire.

This divine miracle was so beyond belief that even Aurek himself found it hard to fathom.

He had once thought of it merely as a treasure map, but who would have thought that he would glimpse the secrets of this divine sanctuary!

And by coincidence, someone knew its exact location, and with his void warlock, he was able to shift it here.

In the end, it was now in his hands!

As for whether it was truly crafted by the legendary Sage King-tier artisan, whether they had the power to complete such a cosmic masterpiece, or how many ancient taboos were involved, or whether there was a true master behind it...

Aurek did not intend to investigate deeply.

Since it had come into his hands, this Aetherian Sanctuary would belong to him, becoming the one and only temple of the Crossbridge Empire!

Josephine, Sophia, Gloria, Lucy, and the others had been in a dreamlike trance since stepping into this place, and even now, they were still in awe.

As they walked through the sanctuary, they felt as if they had become the supreme goddesses from the myths.

Natasha, Cyriel, and the True God deity, although having seen it once before, were still deeply shocked.

It was not that they had limited knowledge; it was simply that this unparalleled treasure could not be replicated in the countless worlds of the boundless starry sea.

Even Elizabeth, who had seen so much, now felt the limitations of her own understanding.

The sanctuary was filled with endless rare treasures, luxuriously extravagant.

It was truly beyond the mundane world, a life that no living being could even dream of.

And most importantly...

The divine herbs here were endless, with numerous sacred ancient trees, divine fruits, and the baptismal pools filled with divine water and essence, all capable of propelling the Crossbridge Empire to unimaginable heights and creating countless powerful beings.

Each temple was itself a legendary artifact, and the stars were crafted from ancient celestial bodies.

It could be foreseen that for a long time to come, the Empire's foundation would be immeasurably strong!