Chapter 378: Touring the Crossbridge Empire Legion

Hmm!?

Everyone displayed puzzled expressions.

Since it was a request for an audience, that meant the person was not from the Crossbridge Empire?

Suggwoth said solemnly, "Let them in."

Moments later, Fiona stepped inside.

"The heir of the Noble Council of the Clouds, Fiona!"

Zach was surprised upon seeing her.

Fiona was a renowned genius noblewoman from Dawonru Empire, bearing the Bone of the Phoenix, with an incredibly high status. She had entered the God General rank at a young age!

"Noble Council of the Clouds' Fiona, I greet the generals and esteemed officers!"

She performed a standard bow to the group.

However, Suggwoth's face remained cold as he scrutinized the woman before him.

Before the invasion of the Abyss Demon Realm, he had already reported the intelligence on the Noble Council of the Clouds to the emperor.

He was fully aware of the situation surrounding the council!

"What business does Miss Fiona have with me?"

Suggwoth asked in a neutral tone.

Fiona glanced at Zach, Philip, and Lucio before speaking.

"I've heard that your army is so powerful that even the Dawonru military is hesitant to act recklessly."

"I greatly admire your strength and wish to witness the might of the empire! I also wish to establish friendly ties with Crossbridge Empire."

Since there were others present, she did not reveal her true intent.

Suggwoth took note of her words.

Philip and Lucio exchanged a glance, with Lucio speaking through a mental link.

"General, the Noble Council of the Clouds may be in disagreement with Dawonru Empire, and we might be able to try and pull them to our side."

The Noble Council of the Clouds was a major force within Dawonru Empire, with a God King-level powerhouse among them, and had deep roots.

If they could win them over, it would undoubtedly be a powerful ally for the empire.

Philip's previous star divination indicated that the situation might be turning, and perhaps this was the opportunity!

Suggwoth did not call out Fiona's hidden motives.

"Miss Fiona, your willingness to form an alliance with our empire is appreciated. On behalf of His Majesty, I welcome you."

Fiona was slightly surprised, not expecting Crossbridge Empire to be so easy to negotiate with.

She let out a quiet sigh of relief, just about to say something more when she was interrupted!

Tina hurriedly entered the hall.

After greeting Suggwoth, she conveyed Aurek's orders.

Suggwoth turned briefly before speaking to Fiona.

"Miss Fiona, you arrived at the perfect time."

"Since you wish to witness the power of Crossbridge Empire's military, I am happy to guide you."

"Please follow me."

Suggwoth raised his hand to signal, and then led the way out of the door.

Fiona's gaze held anticipation.

After all, hearing about the forty thousand God General-level troops was one thing, but she still wanted to see them in person!

Secondary Demon Realm, Empire Legion Garrison.

The 1.2 million God General-level Frostbound Warlock troops stood, surrounded by a chilling aura, with the temperature around them dropping below freezing.

Fiona scanned the formation, her heart in awe.

"Is this...?"

Suggwoth responded, "This is the Empire's Frostbound Warlock Legion, the God General-level legion you were curious about."

Fiona's mind was shaken. "All of these...?"

Suggwoth smiled faintly.

"Currently, there are 1.2 million stationed here, primarily for..."

"1.2 million?!"

Before he could finish, Fiona's exclamation cut him off.

Is it really all God General-level?

How... how is that possible!?

She herself had just recently reached the God General rank.

Yet here, there were 1.2 million warriors of the same rank as her.

What kind of power could possess such a large and powerful army?

Were all of these soldiers cultivated by that emperor from the lower realm in just a year and a half?

That mysterious emperor—everything came from his hands!

And he was younger than her.

In comparison, the glory she once had among the young generation of the demon realm now seemed insignificant.

In fact, all of the achievements and honors everyone thought were impressive paled in comparison to this emperor of the empire.

"Miss Fiona, I believe your purpose here isn't just to observe the military,"

Suggwoth spoke at the right moment.

Fiona glanced behind her, noting that the others were following from a distance.

She whispered,

"To be honest, my father sent me to form an alliance with your empire and to express the Noble Council of the Clouds' position. There is no ill intention."

"Is the council not worried about Dawonru Empire's reaction?"

Suggwoth asked in return.

Fiona remained calm. "Do not worry, General."

"The Noble Council of the Clouds is self-contained, with little connection to the empire."

"Our intention in allying with the empire is simply to gain one more friend. No one can interfere."

Suggwoth could tell she was hiding something, so he continued.

"It seems there's some tension between your council and Dawonru Empire?"

He fixed his gaze on Fiona.

Fiona's expression was calm. "There are indeed some differences."

"Really?"

Suggwoth narrowed his eyes and probed,

"I wonder if the council has any intentions of forming an alliance?"

"Crossbridge Empire is willing to help resolve the rift between you."

Fiona's eyes wavered for a moment before she smiled.

"General, you are quite humorous."

"The Noble Council of the Clouds does not wish to become involved in conflict. We only wish to be friends with Crossbridge Empire."

"However, if Crossbridge Empire ever needs help in the Abyss Demon Realm, we will be willing to lend a hand."

"Also, I have long admired your emperor. I wonder if there's a chance to meet him?"

Suggwoth placed a hand on the hilt of his Slayer sword and fell into thought.

It seemed Fiona was testing the empire's strength.

She was considering whether it was worth forming an alliance or had other motives.

It was hard to say.

But based on their conversation, it was clear there was a rift between the Noble Council of the Clouds and Dawonru Empire.

This matter would need to be further investigated by Golden Armor.

Thinking this, Suggwoth said,

"Miss Fiona, I will convey your request to His Majesty as soon as possible."

"Thank you, General,"

Fiona replied with a respectful bow.

She then turned her gaze back to the vast expanse of God General-level troops stationed before her.

Her expression was complex, and her curiosity about Aurek deepened.

What kind of person was he?

He was truly an enigmatic figure!

In the void, Barton silently entered the Secondary Demon Realm.

He concealed his presence and secretly explored the empire's garrison.

But what he saw were legions of Grand Divine Cleric, High God, and God General-level warriors!

Suddenly, his mind power sensed something in a particular direction, confirming it repeatedly before his heart jolted.

"My gods, how... how is this possible?"

"Over a million God General-level troops!"

Not forty thousand, but over a million!

Why did Crossbridge Empire suddenly have so many God General-level soldiers?

Where did they come from?

How could Eura Continent possibly cultivate such a large and powerful high-ranking army!?

For a moment, he was completely baffled.

Such armies were growing, not shrinking!

Now he began to understand why the military and the four-winged Demon army had suffered multiple defeats.

Against such an unfathomable force, any self-righteous attack would be completely crushed!

"It looks like I have to go to Eura Continent after all."

Barton deeply realized that this journey was now inevitable!

The more he learned, the more shocked he became.

A million God General-level troops!

Even Dawonru Empire would struggle to assemble such a force without suffering great losses!

This alone would be enough to terrify anyone, let alone seeing it with his own eyes!

If they didn't thoroughly investigate and rashly declared war, Dawonru Empire would likely tremble again, and the empire's forces would suffer!

With this in mind, he quietly moved toward the passage.
