Chapter 451: Myriad Judgment Domain

Silver Sorcery Palace.

Emperor Aurek stood before the information panel, silently examining the figures displayed upon it.

A staggering 9.5 quintillion Emperor Points.

Since the war with the Council of the Dark Order began a year ago, total casualties among the imperial legions had already reached an astonishing eighty million. Most of those losses had come from the enemy's direct intervention—sage kings and Divine Oracles personally entering the battlefield.

The Council of the Dark Order had mobilized legions numbering in the billions. Several True God-rank legions had been battered so severely that their organizational structure was nearly annihilated. As for the Legion of Dark Enforcers, composed of more than ten thousand God King-rank powerhouses, it had been completely wiped out.

Ordinarily, slaying a single Divine Cleric-rank enemy yielded roughly one million Emperor Points. However, the Council's legions as a whole possessed combat strength at the Grand Divine Cleric, High God, and even God General levels. Many of their forces were elite beyond comparison.

This campaign, though it had failed to breach the enemy's Sacred Mountain, had still dealt a crushing blow to the Council's main forces.

Otto had also left Aurek a substantial inheritance, including three authority-grade divine herbs.

These were super-divine treasures that surpassed even Chaos God Medicines.

In a world like the abyssal demon realm, holy medicines were already priceless rarities. That Otto had not consumed them himself was a stroke of fortune—otherwise, there would have been no chance of leaving behind three such divine herbs for Aurek to inherit.

With these, combined with other high-grade sacred medicines and nearly one hundred quintillion Emperor Points, advancing to the sage lord realm was a certainty—perhaps even allowing him to go a step further.

However, touching the threshold of quasi-sage lord, let alone the Sage Lord rank, was absolutely impossible.

This, Aurek understood all too well.

The resources required merely to advance into the sage lord realm were already astronomical. As for quasi-sage lord or Sage Lord rank, the demands were so immense they defied imagination.

Of course, if he could conquer the abyssal demon realm in its entirety, the Emperor Points gained might be enough to push him to the quasi-sage lord level. Of that, there was no doubt.

As for the Sage Lord rank...

Advancing to that level would likely be as difficult as ascending to the heavens.

Still, if he could reach the quasi-sage lord stage, the national strength and standing of the Crossbridge Empire would qualify it to approach the level of a Divine Court-class power.

But just how powerful was a Divine Court-class faction?

Aurek did not know in full.

Yet by extrapolating from the scale of a Divine Empire-class power like the Council of the Dark Order, he could glean a rough outline. Likewise, the lofty status of the Aetherian Sanctuary offered a glimpse of the iceberg beneath the surface.

A Divine Court-class power was not merely a simple leap beyond an empire or even a Divine Empire in scale.

One passage from the records of the colossal elephant demon race had left a deep impression on Aurek:

A Divine Court–class power is one that rules over the star sea and chaos itself.

To rule over the star sea and chaos alone was enough to convey its incomparable immensity and majesty.

At the level of national power alone, it was utterly unrivaled.

A Divine Empire still governed only a single world.

But the star sea and chaos were the sum of countless worlds.

From that disparity, Aurek clearly understood that the road ahead was still long.

Though he did not yet know what schemes the Council of the Dark Order was brewing in the shadows, the massive stockpile of Emperor Points now at his disposal meant he could both upgrade his attribute legions and strengthen himself.

Coupled with the ever-growing might of the empire, it was more than enough to deal with the challenges immediately before him.

More than one hundred billion Emperor Points were sufficient to raise both the Void Warlock and Soul Warlock attribute authorities to Level 18.

[Void Warlock authority upgraded to Level 18.

Daily incubation: 1,638,400 Level-18 Void Warlocks.]

[Emperor Points required for next upgrade: 8 quintillion.]

[Note: Level-18 Void Warlocks possess combat power comparable to first-tier God Kings and can wield spatial origin power and spatial laws.]

[Soul Warlock authority upgraded to Level 18.]

Daily incubation: 1,638,400 Level-18 Soul Warlocks.]

[Emperor Points required for next upgrade: 8.5 quintillion.]

[Unlocked skill: Burning Soul Fire.]

[Note: Level-18 Soul Warlocks possess combat power comparable to first-tier God Kings.]

...

[Additional rewards granted to the host:

Myriad Judgment Domain,

Soul Attribute Mastery,

Sacred Soul Vestment.]

Watching the daily incubation numbers exceed one million soldiers per day, Aurek realized that what had once been nothing more than a distant dream had now become reality.

Yet his heart remained calm. He had long since grown accustomed to such scenes.

However—

The newly acquired Myriad Judgment Domain and Sacred Soul Vestment filled him with genuine surprise and awe.

A single Thousand Sword Judgment Domain, combined with Godfall Verdict, was already terrifyingly powerful. But the might of the Myriad Judgment Domain surpassed imagination itself.

So-called "myriad manifestations" were evolved from supreme laws. Each manifestation could form the embryonic framework of a chaotic universe. When used against an enemy, it was equivalent to striking them down with an entire world.

At its ultimate level, it could even grasp the very rules themselves, touching upon supreme authority.

It could go so far as to directly evolve a real chaotic universe.

Its power was nothing short of horrifying.

At Aurek's current rank, he could only glimpse the doorway and grasp a mere fraction of its essence.

As for the Sacred Soul Vestment, it was founded upon the soul attribute, elevating it into a complete defensive system for soul and mind power.

This was not a simple armor condensed into the shape of clothing. Rather, it was an invisible shell woven from soul laws themselves, safeguarding both the soul and mind power.

With the addition of the Myriad Judgment Domain and soul attribute mastery, Aurek now possessed two more formidable methods capable of threatening even Divine Oracles and sage lords.

Still, he needed to seize this opportunity to advance his own rank.

With Emperor Points in abundant supply, Aurek prepared to break through.

At that very moment—

Outside the Demon Palace.

Natasha, who had already returned to the Eura Continent, suddenly came back again.

She strode quickly into the hall.

"Your Majesty, something has happened on the Eura Continent," she said anxiously.

Aurek's sword-like brows knit together slightly. "Has the god realm pushed through?"

Natasha nodded. "They found a weak point in the world barrier and bypassed the Divine Gate to attack directly. Josephine and the others have already mobilized the guards of the Aetherian Sanctuary to block them."

Aurek clasped his hands behind his back, deep in thought.

He was not particularly worried about the situation on the Eura Continent.

After all, he had arranged for the mysterious old man Kaos to remain there precisely to ensure stability, guarding against a sudden assault from the god realm while Aurek personally led the campaign in the abyssal demon realm.

Whether Kaos was a Holy Lord or not, Aurek had never asked.

But his strength was undeniable. Olympian God Mountain posed no fundamental threat to the Eura Continent.

More importantly—

The passage had been opened.

And that, instead, was a good thing.

He had been worrying about how to find that door in the first place.

Aurek said decisively, "I will dispatch reinforcements at once. Make sure they secure that passage."

What Aurek did not know was that Josephine had already led her army into the Heavenlight God Realm.

Natasha's information had come from space-summoned messenger units.

Even so, this was an excellent opportunity to invade the Heavenlight God Realm.

The enemy's decision to open the passage themselves was tantamount to doing the Crossbridge Empire a great favor.

Aurek would naturally not let it slip by.

He immediately ordered that the one hundred million titans under Tina's command be redeployed back to the Eura Continent, along with an additional one hundred million Soul Warlocks.

He planned to have Ares, Stillness Sage, and Starbound Savant, the three sage kings, accompany the army.

In turn, Lord of Sacred Light, Prologue Sage, and others would be reassigned to take their places, guarding the frontline at the Holy Kare Mountains.

Aurek did not fully trust these newly pledged powerhouses.

Precautions had to be taken—to prevent them from stirring up trouble in the shadows.
