

Gods Daily 521

Chapter 521: Killing Intent from the Divine Court and the Giant Clan

Rumble—!

Ten days later.

After fully pacifying the Celestial Light God Realm, commanders like Suggwoth, Ares, and Tina led one hundred million void warlocks across the Starlight Colonnade, marching into the Star Sea!

Aurek stood before the divine temple, gazing toward the distant world gate.

All living beings of the Celestial Light God Realm lifted their eyes as well. Even the remnants of God Mountain—those whose spines had once been crushed—witnessed this world-shaking spectacle.

Since ancient times, the Celestial Light God Realm had repelled foreign invaders, yet it had never once initiated such a bold act—taking the fight outward, raising an army to conquer beyond the stars.

This step forward meant the opening of an entirely new era!

The Lord of the Blazing Eagle and the other Sage Masters all accompanied the expedition.

Aside from Kaos, who needed to remain behind to guard the Celestial Light God Realm, the Lord of the Blazing Eagle and the other six Sage Masters, together with Alvin, all embarked on the campaign.

Among the more than fifty ancient Sage Lords and quasi-Sage Masters, forty followed along.

Aurek left behind more than ten people to respond to the Star-realm gate of the minor Wayshift Realm.

After killing the Office of Light, if the Peace Committee truly was an inspection apparatus of the Starfont Divine Court, then the Crossbridge Empire had already entered the Divine Court's field of vision.

Perhaps it wasn't receiving much attention yet, but it certainly wouldn't be ignored.

And the possibility of being dragged into a war between two Divine Courts had risen sharply.

Before the two great Divine Courts went to all-out war, he had to keep advancing without pause—and raise his authority over summoned troops to at least the Divine Oracle tier—only then could he lay down a true foundation for the Crossbridge Empire.

That was why he urgently needed the Star Sea expedition: to seize enough national fortune and Emperor Points.

Moreover, because of Kaos, the Primordial Giants had already set their sights on the Crossbridge Empire.

And Aurek had set his sights on the Primordial Giants as well!

If that race was strong enough—and numerous enough—perhaps it could push his summoned-troop authority beyond Divine Oracle... even higher!

Once the legion fully entered the Star Sea, Aurek relocated the Gold Giant Gate from the Eura Continent to the Celestial Light God Realm.

He returned to the Divine Sanctuary with Belinda.

On one hand, Aurek continued consuming Emperor Points to advance; on the other, he comprehended the rules and order within the Divine Sanctuary, trying to uncover that deeply hidden secret.

Yet up to this moment, he still had no clue at all.

It couldn't help but make him wonder—did such a secret truly exist?

"Your Majesty!"

Josephine's voice sounded from outside the sleeping palace.

"Come in."

Aurek paused his thoughts.

Josephine had removed her imperial robe, changing into a light gauze gown.

"What is it, my Josephine?" Aurek asked with concern.

Josephine walked up and wrapped both arms around his waist.

"I also... want a child."

Aurek was slightly startled and looked at her.

He didn't overthink it.

Belinda's pregnancy had made Josephine, as empress, smile and rejoice—yet in her heart there was also urgency, only she hadn't shown it.

Aurek didn't say much. Josephine kissed him first.

With every pose and every movement, she did her utmost to please her emperor.

...

One month later.

In the distant, boundless central worlds of the Star Sea.

A towering divine temple stood within a torrent of Starlight.

Across its surface flowed billions upon billions of meters of orderly radiance!

Two Divine Court inscriptions, written in ancient divine script, erupted with vast, crushing majesty!

A Sage Lord stepped into the temple.

Inside was a complete world of star river.

At the center sat a general clad in dark-red sacred armor. His figure was tens of thousands of meters tall, like an ancient war god who had walked out from an era of star-galaxy epochs.

"Overlord! Something happened in the Celestial Light God Realm!"

That Sage Lord had come from the Celestial Light God Realm. Now he reported in detail the situation of that god realm.

"Crossbridge Empire... true Sage Master..."

A flicker of interest passed through the Divine Court overlord's eyes.

The Crossbridge Empire itself meant nothing to him.

But an existence at the true Sage Master rank was something he could not ignore.

A true Sage Master was a powerhouse with the potential to step into the quasi–Empyrean Sanctum realm.

If such a being disrupted order within the Starfont Divine Court’s territory, it would inevitably affect—at least somewhat—the battlefield where they were currently confronting the Reincarnation Divine Court.

The effect might be limited, but any potential threat had to be removed. That was precisely the Divine Court’s duty.

"Come to think of it... the Reincarnation Divine Court also seems to be paying attention to that star region," the overlord said. "Whether they have some other scheme, we must investigate thoroughly."

"Send the Holy Arbiter of Peace."

"Kill everything that must be killed—leave not a single one. Anyone who dares jump out at this critical moment is to be destroyed."

The Divine Court overlord issued his decree.

The Holy Arbiter of Peace controlled the Divine Court’s Peace Division, and he himself was also a true Sage Lord–rank powerhouse.

Only an existence of the same tier could effectively handle the true Sage Master of the Crossbridge Empire.

In addition, the Divine Court overlord assigned three Sage Masters and dispatched the Peacekeeper Legion of the Divine Court to go and suppress the situation.

They would conveniently erase that Crossbridge Empire as well, stabilizing the order of that region of the Star Sea.

The Sage Lord accepted the order and hurriedly withdrew.

...

At the same time, at the other end of the Star Sea.

Deep in the universe.

Boom!

Within a wasteland of Star Sea wreckage—ruins on a scale comparable to dozens of Celestial Light God Realms—a colossal shadow, billions of meters tall, rose violently to its feet, shaking the void itself until it trembled.

A giant head, as though condensed from the Star Sea itself, drifted before that enormous figure.

"Barid, what happened?"

The giant who stood billions of meters tall was the chieftain of the Primordial Giants.

Eyes vast as stars fixed upon the head before him.

This head was none other than the giant leader whose body had been shattered by Kaos earlier—who had escaped and fled back.

"Chieftain! Kaos is indeed on the other side of the world."

"That child is there as well. They're hiding in a world called the Celestial Light God Realm. Kaos... has already stepped into the late stage of true Sage Master."

The giant's voice echoed across the Star Sea.

"Very good!"

"Hahahaha!"

The Primordial Giants chieftain let out wild laughter that shook the emptiness of space.

"That world's situation is rather complicated. Starfont Divine Court forces are entrenched there, and... there also seems to be a primordial god worshiped by the God Temples."

The head continued its report.

The giant chieftain drew in his laughter, his voice sinking into a heavy rumble.

"Then we must speed up."

"Especially that child... he absolutely cannot fall into anyone else's hands."

...

[Slain a large number of starry enemies, Emperor Points +2,000 trillion quadrillion...]

Deep within the Divine Sanctuary's Sacred Garden.

Aurek sat quietly immersed in a holy pool.

During this period, he had already consumed an enormous amount of Emperor Points, raising his rank to Sage Master Level Nine—only one step away from the true Sage Lord rank.

This realm was also the first step toward the quasi—Empyrean Sanctum tier.

The process was extraordinarily difficult. It required microscopic control over rules and order, and an even deeper understanding of the River of Fate.

Even Aurek chose to pause at this rank, to settle and accumulate.

But he wasn't anxious.

From the latest notifications, the Star Sea expedition had already achieved abundant results.

Enough to support upgrading his summoned troops to the Sacred Envoy rank!

That made him extremely satisfied.

With a thought, Aurek caused a miniature Star Sea world to manifest before his eyes.

He revealed every authority over his summoned troops within that tiny world.

The Emperor Points were already sufficient.

After brief consideration, Aurek decided to evolve the level of the Emperor's Scepter first.

The eighth evolution required 220 trillion quadrillion Emperor Points.

The ninth evolution required 480 trillion quadrillion.

The tenth evolution required 1,000 trillion quadrillion.

The eleventh evolution required an astonishing 2,200 trillion quadrillion...

And the twelfth evolution would require an even more terrifying 5,000 trillion quadrillion.

The consumption span was similar to directly increasing the authority tier of summoned troops.

Aurek hesitated no longer, and directly mobilized an ocean of Emperor Points, pouring them into the evolution.