

Chapter 1337 Being Spotted By A Talent Agent

Meanwhile, Loraine returned to the backstage.

Ariadna, who had been waiting for her for a while, greeted her with a warm smile and said, "You were spectacular, weren't you? You captivated everyone!"

Feeling a bit shy, Loraine smiled. Her thoughts drifted to a man whose gaze she caught during her performance. "When I was singing, there was this guy... he seemed oddly familiar..."

Ariadna instantly thought of Marco.

However, remembering the news of his upcoming marriage to another woman, she believed Marco was far from being a good man. In her eyes, he had betrayed Loraine.

She hoped that Loraine would forget about Marco and find happiness with someone else.

Watching Loraine's face carefully, Ariadna asked gently, "What did you think of him? Was it just a feeling of familiarity?"

Upon hearing Ariadna's question, Loraine thought back carefully to her feelings at that moment.

When their eyes met, she felt a profound shock stir within her.

Surprised by the intensity of her feelings, she wondered how a stranger could evoke such a response in her.

Trying to steady her emotions, she admitted, "It was more than just familiarity. I felt an unusual sense of safety."

Then she expressed her confusion. "But I can't recall who he is. Do you think he might be someone from my past?"

Ariadna pondered this for a moment then responded with feigned regret, "Wesley, a well-known artist also known as Mr. T, might attend such events. He is your uncle. Perhaps it was him you saw. Sadly, I don't have his contact information."

Loraine felt a twinge of disappointment. Nevertheless, she held Ariadna's hand and reassured her gently, "It's okay. Having a dear friend like you is more than enough. You're like family to me."

Moved by Loraine's words, Ariadna still had a deep sense of sadness for her friend.

She marveled at how Loraine had endured so much, and the immense pain and struggle she must have gone through to become the woman she was today.

But it was a relief that Loraine remembered nothing of the past—it meant she wouldn't feel that pain now.

"Yes, no matter what the future holds, we have each other," Ariadna muttered, embracing Loraine.

Loraine responded with a contented smile. She was never one to chase grand ambitions, so she felt fulfilled in the moment.

Just then, a man entered the backstage area. "Hello, beautiful ladies."

They turned to see a stranger.

Ariadna sized him up with a cautious gaze and asked, "Who are you?"

The man calmly reached into his jacket, brought out a business card, and handed it to Loraine. "I'm a talent agent. I was wondering if this beautiful lady might be interested in a career in show business?" He focused intently on Loraine as he spoke.

Chapter 1337 Being Spotted By A Talent Agent

🎁 +120 Points at most

Loraine looked slightly taken aback by the offer but immediately declined, replying, "I'm sorry. I have no interest in becoming an actress."

The agent was unwilling to back down. He went on, "I heard you singing earlier. I believe your beautiful voice, coupled with your stunning appearance, could make you a star in show business!"

Though Loraine felt flattered by his words, the thought of living in the limelight left her conflicted.

82,0%

14:42

30 min of free reading

Chapter 1338 Deciding To Pursue A Career In Show...

Noticing Loraine's hesitation, Ariadna stepped forward and said gently, "If you don't want to pursue a career in show business, that's fine. I have the means to support you no matter what."

She glanced at the agent and added, "Besides, the entertainment industry is such a mess these days. It might be best for a naive girl like you to avoid getting involved in it."

Loraine was deeply touched by Ariadna's words, but she also felt a pang of guilt.

She struggled with self-confidence since losing her memory. It was Ariadna who had been her pillar of support, encouraging and caring for her. Ariadna had even given her the opportunity to perform on stage.

She didn't want to be dependent on Ariadna forever; instead, she longed to find a way to contribute and do something meaningful for her.

Resolving to take action, Loraine looked at Ariadna with determination and said, "I appreciate your concern, and I understand. I'll be careful, I promise."

Then, with a firm resolve, she took the card from the agent and said, "I'll reach out to you later to discuss the details."

The agent was pleasantly surprised by Loraine's quick agreement. He nodded enthusiastically and said, "Excellent! I'll be looking forward to your call."

After the agent left, Ariadna let out a deep sigh.

"What's wrong?" Loraine asked as a frown lined her forehead.

Ariadna replied honestly, "I didn't expect you desired to pursue a career in show business."

Loraine smiled warmly and reassured her, "Don't worry. The show business might not be as daunting as you believe."

After a moment of reflection, Ariadna decided she might be overthinking things and chose to remain silent.

As it was getting late, they decided to head home together.

As soon as Ariadna entered the room, she eagerly lifted the baby high into the air with a joyful smile.

The baby let out a joyful laugh as soon as she saw her.

Ariadna laughed along with her and showered her with affectionate kisses on her cheek.

As Loraine watched Ariadna and the baby, a warm, happy feeling washed over her. She wondered if she would experience the same joy if she had a child of her own.

She was taken aback by her own thoughts. How could she have come up with such an idea?

Noticing something off about Loraine, Ariadna asked with concern, "Is everything okay?"

Loraine smiled. "It's nothing. Just thinking about what might come next after I enter the show business."

Ariadna sighed again and said, "We're okay for now. That line of work is too chaotic for you to succeed without a lot of effort. It would just leave you exhausted."

Loraine looked at her intently. "I know how much you love fashion design, and I want to support you too, not just be protected by you all the time."

Ariadna's heart softened at Loraine's words, but she remained steadfast in her desire to keep Loraine away from that field.

Sensing Ariadna's unspoken worries, Loraine spoke up first.

"When I become famous, your baby will get to wear all the beautiful clothes you design and listen to the songs I sing. She's going to have such a joyful childhood!"

A mist of emotion clouded Ariadna's eyes as she realized that Loraine had made up her mind. She could see the spark of determination in Loraine, who now seemed much more vibrant than when she had first lost her memory. Perhaps immersing herself in her work would help Loraine move past Marco entirely.

Ariadna finally agreed.

After spending some time playing with the baby, Loraine headed back to her room.

She decided to research the agent and their company.

Shortly after, a message popped up on her phone.

"Congratulations! You've been selected to participate in testing the latest AI assistant technology from Solar Company!"