

Chapter 1357 A Past Lover

Suddenly, a notification appeared on Marco's phone. It was from Qbot.

Marco quickly opened it and saw a question from Loraine.

As he read her words, tears filled his eyes once more.

Could he be the man Loraine talked about? Had she finally remembered him?

Marco quickly typed a response to Loraine, pretending to be Qbot. "Do you remember any related scenes?"

Before long, Loraine replied, describing her memories of being on stage and a man clapping from the audience.

As Marco read her message, he knew she had remembered him.

His heart raced with excitement.

Marco hesitantly asked, "Could it be that you're thinking of a past lover from before your memory loss?"

Loraine remembered the scenes she had dreamt about in the car. She had a faint memory of an intimate moment, and the man who held her made her feel safe.

Blushing deeply, she replied, "Why is AI so good at teasing a past lover from before your memory loss?"

Lorraine remembered the scenes she had dreamt about in the car. She had a faint memory of an intimate moment, and the man who held her made her feel safe.

Blushing deeply, she replied, "Why is AI so good at teasing these days?"

She then closed the app, her cheeks warm.

From their conversation, Marco felt reassured that even though Lorraine had lost her memory, she still remembered him. This realization lifted his spirits, and he couldn't help but smile as he returned to work.

Three days later, a music festival was happening nearby.

Rita reached out to the organizers and got Lorraine a singing spot.

On the day of the music festival, Lorraine prepared to perform.

Before stepping on stage, she appeared lost in thought.

Over the past few days, as she reflected on Shepherd's performances, she realized that even though her stage name remained Alice, she needed to embrace a new life after her injury and plastic surgery.

With that thought, a bold idea sparked in Lorraine's mind.

Before long, it was her turn to perform.

With a mask on, she stepped onto the stage with confidence. Her beautiful, ethereal voice filled the space, blending perfectly with the music.

The song she had chosen was tough, requiring her to hit some high notes.

At the peak of her performance, Loraine removed her mask and soared into the high notes, leaving the audience in awe.

They were mesmerized by Loraine's high notes, cheering and applauding wildly.

As Loraine took her bow, she gracefully said, "Thank you all for enjoying it. My name is Lorrie Cruz. Thank you!"

Since this was her fresh start, she felt it was time for a new name.

Lorrie Cruz, a new name representing her fresh start, combined Ariadna's surname with the nickname "Lorrie" that Ariadna used for her.

Loraine's performance generated a lot of excitement, but it didn't sit well with another performer, Miranda Gomez, who was also at the festival.

Miranda was supposed to be the headliner, but Loraine's sensational act had left the audience's energy noticeably low by the time she stepped on stage.

Miranda was furious and asked angrily after the festival, "Who does this Lorrie thinks she is, stealing my spotlight?"

Her agent replied, "Well, she has some strong connections. She's also set to perform in the upcoming music variety show."

Miranda sneered and said, "I remember that show. Isn't Lorrie the only newcomer?"

"Exactly," the agent said, nodding.

Miranda scoffed, "Then tell the director that first-time performers should only sing their original songs."