

GREED: ALL FOR WHAT?

Chapter 1511 For Legion. For Perfection.

Legion-8 wasn't flustered by the sudden intrusion. He expected the dragon king or the dragon spirit to show up. This is because he has the bloodline of the dragon king at one point or the other.

For One he is still in the dragon plane so the dragon spirit can reach him. And as a being on the level of a world god or more, the dragon king's bloodline is more than enough connection to reach him. If Tssandulighafan can reach him through a mere imprint, then the entity who created the dragon race with his blood can surely do the same.

Even though he was prepared for his visit, Legion-8's heart sank when it happened. It is because his situation has become worse now that a world god has interfered.

His situation is not without hope, though. The influence of his bloodline is currently waning. His breakthrough to titan of law is causing the hold of the dragon king on him to reduce. Even if the influence is not completely eliminated because he used a copy of the dragon king's divine ability to create his concept, the hold will surely disappear when he becomes an Origin god. So he will become free from the dragon king in time.

This made him relax. He said calmly, "Thank you, ancestor."

The dragon king said, "I will get down to business. Submit or die."

Legion-8 asked, "Haven't we gone through this before?"

"That was before you knew that I was interested in you. The dragon spirit can't kill you, but I can. You should know a little about me, if you don't give me what I want, then I will smash you. I'm sure you have learned that much from stories about me. So what say you?"

Legion-8 answered without hesitation, "I choose death."

"Is that so? I am disappointed in you. Then so be it."

The domain shook. Something came from outside of it and smashed into him. He didn't see what it was at all. He only felt pain. His body shook and cracked. He was dying. Even his domain was shaking. Whatever it was had hurt Legion-1 too, but not as much as him.

Legion-8 groaned. But only that. He didn't cry out in pain as his existence began to collapse. He didn't die immediately because of the immortal essence from Legion-9, but he is still dying. Immortal essence is only slowing it down. He has at most a few more seconds to live.

Legion was not surprised by the attack or its power. They didn't see it coming, even with Soverick's eyes, but they expected it. So Legion-8 didn't panic. He removed the domain around him and appeared in the world.

He saw that the world had been divided in half. A line had dissected the world in half. This line passed through Ragnarok's concept and the spot he was hiding in the domain.

He appeared between the two halves that the world had been divided into, so he noticed that both sides were misaligned. It is as if reality were a fruit that had been sliced and couldn't be put together as it was.

He said in admiration, "Truly powerful."

Everything that the line passed through was cut in half. Even within a domain, he was not safe from it. It was just a physical attack, but it was powerful enough to strike Legion-1 through the domain too.

He said again in admiration, "Truly worthy of the dragon king."

According to Soverick, the dragon king is very far away in the void universe, but he was able to attack him within a domain in a realm tree from across the void universe. One can only imagine just how powerful the dragon king would be up close. Legion can imagine that power, and all they felt for it was longing and not fear.

Legion-8 felt that longing within him as he rushed towards Legion-6. He has to rush towards Ragnarok because the second plan to achieve immortality has been botched. He can't become an Origin god in his current state. He can't even complete his concept.

If he is to save himself, then he must unify with Legion-7. He will have another chance to become an Origin god then. His concept will become available to Legion-unity then, and he will have fulfilled his purpose of pushing Legion towards perfection.

Maybe his death could have been avoided had he decided to unite with Legion-7 in the first place. But it is not too late. The smart thing to do now is reach Ragnarok and have him get into contact with Legion-7.

No one could approach Ragnarok as he is. He has the weakness of being slow. His concept is mostly stationary, so he is not capable of threatening Origin gods that run away from him. But any Origin god that approaches him will be devoured. Only Legion-8 could approach him.

Ragnarok is an Origin god now, so he has perfect control over his concept since he is his concept. He didn't want to harm Legion-8, so he didn't. So Legion-8 managed to get close to him. His multicolored dragon body was flaking away at every moment, but he managed to cover the distance quickly.

He had become a phantom of himself by the time he reached Ragnarok. He would die at any moment, but the two of them didn't touch each other and complete the unification.

They didn't do the smart thing. Instead, Legion-8 said his last words, "For Legion. For perfection."

Then he died. His phantom body broke apart on its own, and his existence was scattered to the wind. The only thing left behind was the concept he was building.

His dragon heart has become a seed of power now. It won't disappear, even if he dies. His shard of power and soul sphere returned to Legion-1. Legion sensed then that they could create another clone. It means Legion-8 is completely and truly dead.

Ragnarok took the multicolored dragon heart solemnly. He muttered, "For Legion. For perfection."

Chapter 1512 A Send Off.

Ragnarok didn't feel pain about the death of the dragon clone because Legion-8 had done his part in furthering their goal of perfection. It is something that he too was willing to do when he angered CARNAGE by devouring the plane. He was ready to die then, and Legion-8 was also ready to die.

In fact, there was no way out of it. Legion-8 had to die. Soverick was certain of it right from the moment he felt the gaze of the dragon king on them.

Soverick could sense the gazes of world gods as a transcendent, so it is easy to sense the gaze of someone more powerful than world gods now that he is an Origin god. They half expected the dragon king to attack them then, but he didn't. They did some thinking and came to the conclusion that the dragon king must want something from them since he didn't kill them immediately.

It could be that the dragon king wanted to kill them in the future, or he wanted Legion-8's divine ability, or he wanted something from the rest of them. Either way, they had to cut off their connection to Legion-8, unless Legion-8 managed to cut off his connection to the dragon king. That's why the dragon clone didn't try to unite with Legion-7 at the earliest moment to preserve his life.

Soverick's eyes might not be able to see everything there is to see despite calling it the All-seeing Eye, but he can surely sense it when someone gazes at him, and he can even trace back the sight of the entity to its source. That's how they knew they had become the target of the dragon king, and how they knew that Legion-8 was a time bomb.

Legion-8's bloodline and the imprints of his ancestors within them serve as the point of influence of the dragon king. If that point of influence remains and Legion-8 unifies with Legion, then all of Legion would come under the influence of the dragon king. They couldn't allow that, but they also couldn't give up on the dragon clone's divine ability. So they pretended not to know about the dragon king's gaze and put on a show to rescue Legion-8.

Legion-8 first tried to get rid of the influence. That's why he chose to become an Origin god first. But the dragon king was not going to allow that. It scared Legion-8 with that attack. However, they weren't fooled because they knew that the dragon king could have killed Legion-8 instantly if it wanted to through his bloodline.

The dragon king didn't need to make a show of attacking from outside the realm. But Legion-8 didn't call him out on that pretense. He pretended to unify with Legion through Ragnarok, but it was just to make his dragon heart close to Ragnarok so that he wouldn't die in vain.

There was no way Legion was going to unify with him with his bloodline still there. Legion-8 had to die to shed that influence. What Ragnarok and the other clones came for was to collect the corpse of a god-beast.

The dragon king must have realized his plans had been seen through when he saw that Legion-8 would rather die than unify with Legion. He was fooled despite seeing all of their actions because they hadn't done anything suspicious. He couldn't hear their thoughts, so he didn't know their scheme.

But that didn't placate him. He became angry, and he used the full power he could exhibit at this distance. A mysterious force began to spread outward from every dragon in the plane. It is the same force that Legion-8 emitted. It came out of the heart of every dragon that had performed the naming ceremony and caused the world to lose color and become gray.

Every dragon became a node for the dragon king to exert his power. The statue of the dragon spirit within their inner world began to shine as it projected the power of the dragon king into the world and made its Will manifest in the plane.

The whole plane froze completely because of it. Even the fighting in the void outside the plane stopped because everyone froze. The world lost its color, and there was nothing but drab silence.

The angry voice of the dragon king sounded in this silent and frozen world. "I am impressed that you discovered my plan. Tell me, how did you do it? Was it through that meddlesome clone with the weird eyes?"

Ragnarok didn't reply. It is not because he couldn't speak in his frozen state. He can speak. That's because the dragon king allows him to. Even his consciousness would be frozen if the dragon king didn't intend for him to hear. But he didn't reply because he was not willing to say anything at all.

"You don't need to answer me for me to know. It must be because of that monkey clone. What is his name again? Soverick, is it? Yes. That must be it. His eyes are indeed special. But I didn't expect that he would be able to notice me. How did he manage to do that?"

This time, the dragon king didn't wait for him to reply. He said, "I guess it must be the enhancement of that shard of power. That is a very powerful object. Do you know what it is and what it is capable of?"

The fact that the dragon king knew everything about them, including the shard of power, didn't surprise them. They already suspected it when the dragon spirit arranged for Legion-8 to fight Mother High Heaven. This has only confirmed it.

It is an unpleasant feeling to have all their secrets exposed, but all they can do is adapt to it. After all, they can't do anything else about it.

The dragon king continued with a calm and confident tone. "I doubt that you know what the shard of power is capable of. But I will tell you. It is so powerful that I will do anything to have it. So do you understand what kind of situation you have put me in and what kind of dilemma you are in?"

Chapter 1513 Dragon Transformation.

Ragnarok would have rolled his eyes if it were possible. They can't give the shard of power away, even if they want to. Legion would need to die for that to be remotely possible, and they are not willing to do that. So all of this talk is not going to change anything.

The dragon king doesn't expect to convince them to give up their lives. That's why he is going to perform the naming ceremony on Ragnarok.

"You may not be a dragon, but I will accept you nonetheless. It will be your grace to become a dragon."

The mountain of wealth in the middle of the plane broke apart. It was leveled to reveal a drop of blood. This drop of blood is the foundation of the dragon spirit. It is a very important item for harnessing the power of all the dragons born in the realm of high heaven, but the dragon king is willing to sacrifice all of that to turn Ragnarok into a dragon.

"You like to devour things, don't you? Let me see how well you like this."

The drop of blood shot towards Ragnarok. It bypassed his frozen, bottomless abyss to touch him. Then it began covering him up and seeping into every aspect of his existence.

Ragnarok felt the impact immediately. He would spasm if he could, or even stroke out. It is because all of his existence, including his soul, body, memories, and concept, are being changed.

Draco laughed sinisterly. His voice echoes from right within Ragnarok's head instead of from the surrounding area.

"You are smart. But you are too greedy. You could have escaped, but you had to come to the dragon plane to retrieve the heart of your godling clone. Your greediness has doomed you."

Ragnarok is an Origin god, so the naming ceremony for dragonlings won't work on him. He has a concept, and he is immortal. But the drop of blood created the dragon race once. It is more potent than any bloodline connection, and it should at least serve as a proper conduit for the dragon king to use his Supreme Law to overwrite Ragnarok.

It should be impossible for a world god to change an Origin god like this. The best they can do is curse that Origin god, and even then, they have to maintain the curse against the resistance of the law matrix of the void universe. After all, the immortality of Origin gods is maintained by the void universe.

But the dragon king is no world god. He has the cosmic source. That helps him avoid the resistance of the void universe. So right now, Ragnarok has lost the support of the void universe. He is no different from a Sovereign of law. If he dies right now, the void universe will not resurrect him. Even all of Legion will be doomed because of him, and it will be because they were too greedy.

This is the power of an entity above the level of a world god. Not only can he affect the events going on in a realm from a large distance, he can also rob an Origin god of his immortality. Legion lost the moment they appeared around the dragon plane.

However, Ragnarok is not alone. He is one part of many, and those other parts can still move. His death is better than allowing the dragon king to overwrite his existence and that of Legion. So Legion allowed Chaos energy to enter the mind network and rampage throughout his existence.

Legion is now immune to Chaos energy thanks to the unity of the evolved Aeternus, so Chaos energy didn't harm Ragnarok. But there's something else in his existence that is not immune to Chaos energy. So Chaos energy clashed with the blood overwriting his existence.

The reaction was violent and painful, but Ragnarok only smiled.

The dragon king was shocked. He asked, "How did you get access to true Chaos?"

He has to ask because he didn't see anything related to this when he went through Legion's history. He knows about the demon clone that Legion created, but according to the void universe, that clone died in the egg.

Then he remembered the anomalies around Legion. He couldn't help but become frightened. His mind conjured up several possibilities, none of them good.

The overwriting process stopped so Ragnarok could finally relax. He thought to himself smugly, "If Order can't save us, then Chaos will."

Soverick wasn't so smug. He warned him, "I told you we can't trust the Supreme Laws of others. We especially can't trust Chaos. It is too random and unreliable."

Meanwhile, the voice of the dragon king had become faint in Ragnarok's mind. He said to Ragnarok, "You have won this time around. But this is not the end between us."

Draco has to give up because his blood is being consumed. He has not encountered something like this in a long time. Not only is he defeated in this clash, he even has to cut off the connection immediately and retreat so that the connection he created with Ragnarok will not be used against him and every dragon. After all, true Chaos is more dangerous than worldenders.

"I hope you are still alive when we meet again. I doubt that, though. Playing with true Chaos is playing with unquenchable and indestructible fire. You have reached beyond your means you ignorant fools. You don't know what kind of danger and malice you are toying with. It is a snake that can bite back."

His voice became too faint to hear until it disappeared completely. All of Legion felt relieved .

Ragnarok didn't take the warning to heart. Instead, he sighed in regret. "It is too bad that we haven't comprehended the law of Chaos yet, or we would have brought the fight to him."

He is not content with getting one over such a powerful being. He also wishes to mark him with Chaos energy so that they can track the dragon king. Unfortunately, they are still a long way from that.

Chapter 1514 It Is Too Late.

Draco retreated as fast as possible. He created a large distance between himself and Ragnarok by destroying every link between himself and the dragons. He didn't just retract his power from their dragon heart. He also destroyed the dragon spirit, just to be sure.

The world recovered immediately. The grayness disappeared, and the world resumed its motion. The dragons and the supreme beasts didn't fight anymore, though. Instead, they all flew towards Ragnarok and surrounded him.

One of the Supreme Beasts said to him, "We know that you are not truly a Supreme Beast. You may be Agrivo839,371,456A, but you are not one of us. You are a parasite that wormed its way into our midst. However, we don't care. We also don't care that you used us against the dragons. All we care about is the heart of the godling."

"Hand over the dragon heart that you got. You can't leave here if you don't. Even if you do, we will chase you to the end of the void universe for it. It is best that you do not offend the Supreme Alliance. Instead, give us the dragon heart and become our friends. You will be rewarded handsomely as our friend."

The dragons also made their bid, "We don't care about the dragon heart. We just don't want you to give it to the Supreme Alliance, and we are also angry that you destroyed our home plane."

"The dragon heart belongs to a brethren of ours. It should be with us to do whatever we want to do with it. You can either surrender it peacefully and we will let you go, or we kill you to get and have the whole dragon race as your enemy."

Ragnarok didn't even look at them. He didn't act surprised that the Supreme Alliance already knew that he was pretending to be Agrivo839,371,456A. Legion already knew that they suspected him when he brought the information about the dragon plane to them.

After all, Agrivo839,371,456A had disappeared only to suddenly appear again with crucial information. It would be foolish of them not to suspect him at all.

Legion knew that trying to pit the two races against each other could backfire, and they were prepared for it. So even though they didn't know that the dragons had already made contact with the Supreme Alliance and explained the whole situation to them, Legion wasn't fooled when the Supreme Alliance was pretending to fight with the dragons. So it didn't come as a surprise to Ragnarok that they wanted the dragon heart of Legion-8 for themselves.

The dragon heart that Legion-8 left behind is very powerful. The dragons could use it to create a new dragon spirit or help a dragon become a godling, and the Supreme Alliance could use it to create a very powerful Supreme Beast or find a way to create more of the dragon heart.

It would be a good idea to give it to the Supreme Alliance since they will pay more for it. If they do that, Legion would get their support and a lot of wealth. The bid of the dragons, on the other hand, is not nearly appetizing.

But Legion doesn't like to share, so Ragnarok decided to offend the two races and leave with the dragon heart. This is one of the few times that they truly deserve something after working for it. They are not going to give it up because of the two races.

As if they could sense his thoughts, one of the Supreme Beasts said grimly, "You have made a mistake, Legion. You have made a terrible mistake. Not to worry, though. We will show you the error of your ways."

One of the Supreme Beasts can sense favorable and negative emotions, so they became aware immediately when Ragnarok decided to cheat them. However, they are confident that he won't be able to escape. They have a lot of information about Legion from the dragon king, so they know about the clones's ability to teleport to each other.

They have frozen space and even used an array technology with their armadas to seal the space off the plane completely. So in a way, the whole plane has become like the domain of an Origin god. Any Origin god that dies here won't be able to recover their memories. If even memories can't escape, his chances of escaping can be considered zero.

Ragnarok sensed the whole plane and realized that he couldn't perceive the world outside it. Unfortunately, this is not going to stop him.

He said to them, "You are too late."

They are truly too late. The heart had already gone to the other clones when he laid his hands on it. They can't get it, even if he is trapped here.

He said the same thing that the dragon king had said to him, "You lost the moment you came to this plane. You knew I was playing you, and yet you came. Your greed has doomed you."

They declared to him, "Give up. You can't beat us. You have unspeakable days ahead of you. By the time we are done with you, you will wish you could die."

They were sneering when they suddenly stopped. Instead, they raised their heads and used their divine sense to sense something outside the plane. The plane was already in darkness, but a kind of inky, sticky darkness began to infiltrate the plane.

This darkness was like the grayness of Legion-8 and the dragon king. It was not the absence of light. It seemed to infect everything and subjugate it. But unlike the grayness that froze everything, this inky darkness corrupted everything with disorder.

The dragons and Supreme Beasts were shocked. If the dragon king could be shocked, then they ought to be frightened out of their lives by what they sensed.

Someone asked, "What is this?"

They got a lot of information from the dragon king about Legion, but it didn't include whatever it is that is encroaching on the whole plane.

Chapter 1515 Waste Not, Want Not.

Everyone ignored Ragnarok. The smart thing right now was to escape, which they did. Unfortunately, there is no escape for them. The whole plane has already been enveloped by a large cloud of black fire.

A voice came from the barrier around the plane. It chuckled and said, "Hehe. There is no escape for you. You will all die here."

There is a black apparition with four golden eyes and two golden horns outside the plane. This apparition is producing a copious amount of Chaos energy that has formed a cocoon around the plane. This cocoon sealed the whole plane and everything within it. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

This is Legion's backup plan in case they fail to acquire Legion-8's heart. At least they won't leave empty handed. It goes without saying that they don't plan to let anyone go today. If they fail, then everyone should lose something.

They didn't fail, but both the Supreme Beasts and dragons here will still die. They will all be fed to Aeternus. It is not about revenge anymore. It is just making the best of what's available. They had to do so because Legion doesn't like waste.

Ragnarok laughed again. "I said it was too late."

He couldn't help but smirk. The two races think they can deceive Legion and backstab them. Then they have another thing coming. They will all die today.

The strength of every Origin god will fall to the one star level when Aeternus is done with them. Even the Origin gods with Supreme Laws will suffer even if they don't die. They will be the ones who wish they could die.

The two races are behemoths, sure, but Legion is no slouch either. A demon god can take on a whole plane. Aeternus could do that before he was a demon god. Now that he is a demonic spark, he alone is enough to grant them the confidence to wipe out all their enemies. They don't even need the other clones to bully them.

The realm lord and Mother High Heaven watched the ending of the fight with different emotions. Mother High Heaven was on tentahooks. She grumbled and said, "I have already done too much work because of this fight. I hope Aeternus doesn't let Chaos energy spill, or he will be in big trouble."

She is worried for the realm tree, but the realm lord was giddy and excited. He kept asking, "What did I tell you? I was right, right? Was I not right?"

Mother High Heaven admitted it. "Yes, you were right. Legion-8 is truly dead."

But she couldn't help but be surprised, "I didn't think Legion was prepared to give up on him. Legion fooled even me. Who would have thought that they already knew about Draco. So they came here to retrieve his corpse and to feed the two armies to Aeternus."

The realm lord became solemn when he heard what she said. He said, "I must admit that I am also impressed. I didn't expect that they would know about Draco. I thought they would be caught off guard and lose on both sides."

Mother High Heaven mocked him, "So there is something that the great and powerful Monarch High Heaven doesn't know. Imagine that."

Monarch High Heaven chuckled and continued, "They truly have the potential for greatness, and they have the foresight to prioritize long-term goals. I was certain that Legion-8 would die, and I suspected that they knew that too, but I didn't expect that they would not try to change that outcome."

He has to be impressed because he thought he was the only one who noticed the dragon king's gaze. Even Mother High Heaven didn't notice it. But Legion did, and they didn't try to fight the dragon king. They didn't let their recent progress get into their heads and fight a being with a cosmic source of the void universe.

If that is not enough, they were also able to escape from the dragon king with the corpse of their clone. He thought for sure that Legion was lost when the dragon king chose to sacrifice his blood to turn Ragnarok into a dragon. But Chaos energy came through.

This made him puzzled, though. He shared his uncertainties with Mother High Heaven. He asked, "How come Draco didn't know about Legion's access to Chaos energy? If he did, how did he expect to succeed in turning Ragnarok into a dragon?"

Mother High Heaven shrugged, "Who knows what he is thinking, and how can we be certain that what he wanted to do was turn Ragnarok into a dragon? What if all he wanted was to mark Legion so that he could track them? If we don't know for certain his purpose, then we can't say for sure that he failed."

The realm lord nodded and said, "For a second there, I thought Draco didn't know about Aeternus."

"That can also be true. After all, the demon clone died to give birth to Aeternus."

Monarch High Heaven was surprised. He asked, "What do you mean? Who is Aeternus, if not the demon clone?"

"Who knows? You said something about how the knowledge of Draco's gaze didn't embolden Legion to resist him. But who is to say that the knowledge that everything that can fuse with Legion-unity must be part of Gehaldirah. After all, if universal artifacts can fuse with Legion without rejection, who is to say there aren't other types of things that can fuse with them?"

Monarch High Heaven became genuinely frightened by the implications of what she said. He said to her, "You are joking, right? Tell me you are messing with me."

Mother High Heaven laughed and said, "Yes. I am messing with you."

Monarch High Heaven sighed in relief. But the fear in his heart only receded a little. He would like to think that what Mother High Heaven said was made up, but he can't because he is in possession of something that has fused with his existence and is also as smart or even smarter than living things. He is especially afraid because this thing is doing things that Mother High Heaven is not aware of, despite fusing with her too.

Chapter 1516 Another Thing To Worry About.

He thought to himself, "Not everything is as it seems. I am not even as I seem. There's another person within me. Is Aeternus also like that? That makes another thing I have to worry about."

"But that aside, Legion has made too much progress with true Chaos and it seems the law they broke gave them a reward big enough for the dragon king to be tempted. What is it that they have that is so great that the dragon king put in so much effort for instead of killing Legion-8 outright?"

He wants to know what Legion has that the dragon king wants so badly. He is not safe from the gaze of the dragon king, either. As a matter of fact, he is not safe from the gaze of anyone who has a cosmic source. Not unless he can block the perception of the void universe of him.

So everything he has done in the void universe since he reincarnated into his current body can be discovered and exposed. Even his ability to make Authority is laid bare to the dragon king, but the dragon king didn't come after him. Instead, he went after Legion. That means whatever that Legion has has to be more important than the ability to create Authority.

The Authority of the void universe is great, but it is only useful to world gods who can't get a cosmic source. Authority is, after all, a substitute for a cosmic source.

Authority can be given by the void universe, but the cosmic source has to be stolen and its power usurped. That requires a lot of power and would explain why the dragon king wasn't interested in him. But someone with a cosmic source went after Legion. It shows just how important what Legion has is.

He doesn't know what Legion has, and he wants to know. The only thing he is certain of is that the dragon king is not after the dragon clone's heart. After all, Draco has the same thing and even has something better, so Legion-8's should be useless to him.

Unfortunately, he can't grill Legion to find out what Draco wanted from them. It made him angry, but he didn't show it. He still maintained his smile as he looked at the massacre ensuing because of Aeternus.

His best guess is that it should be a Universal artifact. That would explain why Draco wanted to overwrite Ragnarok since it is practically the only way to steal something like that. But he is not sure about that either. It is as Mother High Heaven said, unless he can be certain of Draco's motive, he can't be certain that Draco failed.

"Soon," he promised himself. "Very soon, there will be an end to everything."

----Legion

Legion didn't mourn the loss of Legion-8. They were prepared for his death and went on working toward achieving their goal. There would be another clone created to replace Legion-8 and complete what he started. In the meantime, the dream of perfection and the progress towards achieving it will not be stopped.

The next thing that happened to them was the breakthrough of Helios to become an Origin god. It is not a welcomed change, as they would like for him to remain an infinite source of cosmic energy for Legion, but their exposure to the dragon king has made them unable to leave him in a vulnerable state.

Helios is a powerful star. Not many people can harm him, but they have powerful enemies. They have the dragon race and the Supreme Alliance after them, who have information about them. Those two races have many world gods that can pluck Helios easily.

They don't want to lose him the way they lost Legion-8. If someone kills him as he is, they won't have anything left of him because he doesn't have a concept yet. For him to have a concept, he must detach from the law matrix and create his own path.

Even then, they can't relax until he has the double support of the immortality of the void universe and the unification with Legion-7. Only then can they have a certain sense of confidence about his safety. So it was decided that Helios would become an Origin god.

This is something they have been preparing for and finished preparing for before they went to get Legion-8's corpse. They didn't do it then, so as not to spook the dragon king.

They wanted their pretense of ignorance to remain, and they also had a daring plan to deal with Draco, so they didn't let Helios become a titan of law yet. But now that things have reached this stage, it is of no use pretending. So Helios went ahead with the creation of his concept.

The process was faster than Legion-8's since he is only using the three laws of light, fire, and Order. Those are the three laws that make up his divine ability. The law of order refused to let him add more to it.

Since he hasn't completely comprehended the law of order, it is without a doubt that he will fail to form his concept. Legion expects that and is prepared for it.

Helios' breakthrough created a lot of commotion in the realm of high heaven. After all, a sun literally winked out from the sky and plunged their plane into darkness. No one wouldn't notice that. They all looked up into the sky in fear and apprehension. But they couldn't see what caused it or what was happening high up in the void outside the realm.

They didn't see that the star producing light for their plane shrank and was dimming. They didn't know that it was attempting to do something impossible. They didn't know that it was dying because of its daring act.

Helios couldn't form a concept without the law of order because his concept was scattered by the fragments of order in his existence. But he couldn't form a concept with the law of order because he hadn't comprehended it. So he is effectively stuck.

Chapter 1517 A New Godling.

Even infinite cosmic energy can't save him from his existence dissipating because of the scattering of the law of order. So Legion-5 gave Helios a multicolored orb that resembles the heart of a realm.

The orb itself has many colors, but it was glowing with a bright white light that formed a halo around it. It had runes all over its surface that were being displayed onto the surroundings as holographs. Helios accepted the orb and absorbed it seamlessly.

None of the inhabitants of the planes that Helios used to serve saw this. Even if they saw it, they were unlikely to realize that the multicolored orb was the dragon heart of a god beast.

As for the few that were watching and knew what one of the clones threw to the star, even fewer knew about the changes that the star underwent because of the dragon heart.

Legion-4 is a star, but he is also a clone of Legion-8. Because of it, he doesn't need the divine ability of Supreme Beasts to take full advantage of the dragon heart. Besides, they have the same origin, so Legion-8's concept is technically his concept.

Helios received the dragon heart and almost became another copy of Legion-8. He didn't become another copy of Legion-8, though. This is because he has his own divine ability and budding concept.

Helios is a being with a divine ability that is the fusion of the law of Order, the law of fire, the law of light, and the divine energy of the Celestial of the Sun. The dragon heart couldn't replace this concept and had to fuse with it.

Although the two concepts are in no way similar, one is a dragon heart, which can empower anyone who uses it, and the other is a perfect clone of Legion-8 with the law of order. Not only can Helios replace Legion-8, the law of order can also fuse with its derivative laws as long as there is divine energy to coerce it and as long as the laws are compatible with it.

The dragon heart has many laws that are not compatible with the law of order, but the heart of a god beast is another form of the Authority of the Void Universe bestowed right from birth. Plus, there happens to be a lot of divine energy from the tree father, so the two concepts fused to become something greater.

Of course, the law of order resisted becoming a concept. Even divine energy couldn't force it to do that. But its resistance was overcome by the manipulation of cosmic force through the dragon heart.

The fragments of the law of order turned gray and were frozen. Then Helios's incomplete concept was combined with Legion-8's concept. Then the fragments were released, but it was too late to resist by then.

Helios stopped being a star immediately; he accepted the dragon heart. He became a Sovereign of law with a 14-law concept, then he became an Origin god by fusing with an Origin essence. Now he has become a godling that cannot be killed easily.

Soverick muttered as he watched, "This is odd. No one is coming to fight us."

Legion-7 asked him, "Didn't you see that this was the best time for him to make his breakthrough? Why are you surprised that you were right?"

"I thought for sure that I was missing something. After all, this is a good time for our enemies to deal us a big blow. I thought they had used their information about us to hide themselves. But no one is coming to interfere."

Legion-1 shrugged and said, "That can't be bad news."

The Tree Father agreed. "We need all the good news we can have right now."

Soverick still didn't feel at ease. He said, "But if they are not attacking us now, they might be preparing to attack us when we least expect it."

Legion-5 also felt that things had gone too smoothly for Helios. He said, "There is nothing we can do about it short of going to attack them ourselves. If they won't come to us, then we can only leave them alone."

Aeternus sighed and said, "That's a shame. I was hoping they would show up."

Soverick looked at him and said, "Maybe they are not coming because of you and what you did to an entire plane full of Origin gods."

Legion expected interference and was prepared for it. They were standing guard around Helios, watching out for enemies, but there were none. Instead, Helios broke through seamlessly and even unified with Legion-7 without issues.

It caused them to feel uneasy, especially since they knew that they were currently being watched by a powerful entity deep within the dark side of the void universe and many other entities just below the law matrix.

Being watched is an unpleasant feeling. It is worse when they know that nothing they do is secret and is being spread to everyone influential. As it is, probably every dragon and supreme beast knows that they reincarnated and that they have clones with different powers.

Legion expected a fight because this was the right opportunity to interrupt them and deal some damage to them. They have even prepared a bomb in case a world god comes. It is a bomb that they have prepared for the first sage, but they are willing to use it to make any world god that interferes with them regret it.

But it seems their enemies don't plan to be predictable. If they are not going to be predictable, then things won't be simple for them. Unfortunately, it is as Legion-5 said, if they won't come to fight them, the alternative is for Legion to go and pick a fight with them. They won't do that when they can do something better, like making themselves stronger.

It is a better alternative to try to make themselves untouchable before their enemies get around to targeting them. Helios's breakthrough into a dragon of Order is just a step in that direction. With him, they retain the ability to dominate laws and even enhance it because of the law of order.
