

Guardian gods 146

Chapter 146:

"You all misunderstood, there is no law that pertains that you gods shouldn't interfere with the humans, this was done by me after i received my inheritance gift and memory from Chaos. The memory had no knowledge about the effect of their worships only that situation with humans and gods doesn't always end up good especially after the humans have grown"

"It was only later that I learnt from other planet consciousness about the birth of look alike after human worship, but that is already done. My one rule about not interfering with the humans was to prevent war from my children and the beings that live in my body but now this rule has to be overlooked for the current situation" Nana responded heavily with a sigh.

The gods all nodded to show their understanding before Mahu said "Then I can send my son over to help the humans on his continent with battling with the demons" She waved her hand to show the northern continent filled with ice and on the sunny part.

Down on the sunny part, was a civilisation of what can be called subhumans because of their looks, Björn accomplished his goal of creating a society with controlled chaos and at the same time the people living in this society have adopted this way of life both physically and mentally.

The humans in this part of the world all look burly and huge both male and female. Even the kids all look abnormally huge, another prevalent trait was the animal feature that they all bore. Some humans can be seen with tusks sticking out of their mouth.

Some have tails, horns, scales. Most things found on animals is found on the humans living here, right now down in the center of the market two of the sub humans can be seen clashing, and spilling each other's blood, those around are going about their day like nothing was going on.

Kids can be seen groping grown women and snickering, on the side of the streets were two subhumans going at it but this was just a normal day for everyone living here, Blood stains can be seen spilled across the ground in this kingdom.

Everywhere you look is a weapon close by, a look at the weapons shows that they have been used and seen blood.

At the center of this sub human kingdom lays a huge colosseum that look like a palace, this was the place björn and his general live in, Inside this building at the main place sitting on a mountain of dead dried bones and bodies was the enormous body of Björn who now bears and appearance a lot different from before.

The demon living inside of Björn has taken over more than half of Björns very being, the only part left was because of the fact that he hasn't completed the agreed contract which was being the sole human emperor of this continent. But to the demon that no longer matters as the control he has now was more than enough, Björn himself barely has any will to fight back and the contract was the only thing keeping a piece of him left.

Björn's physical features have become very distinctly demonic, with horns, claws, and a tail manifesting. He right now was thinking of making a move at the two human leaders who have been a problem for him this whole time.

He knows of the gods awakening but he also knows that the awakening this time is different as the gods action depending on the rule can be constrained, he plans on taking advantage of this small gap to clear the humans before the gods find a way to bridge the gap in the rule holding them.

Tapping his throne, all of a sudden he stopped his hand clenched as he instinctively put his hand on his axe that is always close by. His senses are telling him right now that he is being watched by a lot of powerful beings.

"This one is strong too" Ikenga said as they all watched the demon who was trying to play off how unnerved he was being watched.

Mahu frowned at that, sending her son to this demon might not be something smart considering that she will lose a lot of werewolves grandchildren to defend humans who devotedly worship her.

Ikenga seeing her distressed showed no outward expression but he looked at Nana before his Cursed tattoo glowed catching the other gods attention. Ikenga meanwhile was focusing on his cursed divinity, he felt traces of curses around the planet Nana, he felt two huge living curses one he could immediately pinpoint was Boros and the other was the Cursed tree that was friends with his son.

But these two were not what he was looking for, he remembered how during his sleep Nana contacted him to borrow his power on two weapons and those two weapons was what he was trying to connect with.

Ikenga unlike the other gods has had knowledge when it comes to things about gods even though it was mostly fantasy at the time but now he was living in this fantasy as a god, he tried to apply those hypotheses found in books he had read from his past life.

They are not to act on the mortal world unless a ritual has been performed to invite them to act, was what Nana said but Ikenga wants to bypass that need for ritual by connecting with this that has been blessed or touched by his divinity to see if he can extend his power to the mortal world.

Ikenga was able to pinpoint and lock on the two weapons, easily gaining hold of the curse put upon the two weapons Ikenga tried to push out a small part of his being through that connection.

On the other side of the continent, where the only other existing kingdom found on the sunny part lies. This kingdom was a kingdom that was built on the devout worship of the goddess of the moon and Motherhood.

Everywhere in this kingdom made sure to show a representation of their faith and maybe it was because of their faith, silver is something that was everywhere in this kingdom causing the whole place to be glistening like stars from the sunlight. Even the guards and soldiers walking around are all clad in silver, this kingdom was known by those who live in it as "Silvrynheim"

Now down in this kingdom was a husband and wife Einar and Helga, who were the two known leaders of the kingdom at its beginning but over the years have found love for one another leading to a union that has strengthened them both.

The two were now in their palace hall both looking at their respective weapons that were floating in the air covered by a purple light, the bothe were about to have a meeting on the future of their kingdom when both weapons began reacting abnormally.

Immediately calling off the meeting, the both stood in trepidation and expectation as they watched the weapons, Since they have gotten their hands on the weapon it has only showed its power only once which was when they were facing off against Björn and now was the second time and it was glowing a different light than they remembered.

Ikenga who was deep in his connection with his divinity was able to see two humans male and female standing in front of him, Opening his mouth to say something Ikenga suddenly frowned as the two humans recoiled and was thrown off their feet far away while bleeding from their ears.

Einar and Helga in the voice on the weapons were taken by surprise when they heard a voice speak to them in an unknown language, to make matters worse just by hearing the voice they mana around them recoiled and threw them off their feet at the same time their ears were buzzing heavily.

Ikenga frowned at the sight, gaining a small understanding of what was the cause of it but he didn't speak again, meanwhile Mahu beside him caught his frown as she waved her hand at the floating screen to show a view inside of the place where the two weapons were floating.

The other gods were wide eyed seeing that their brother power was somehow reflecting in the mortal world but they looked at the humans who couldn't even stand straight just by the leakage of power.

Mahu touched Ikenga who opened his eyes to see Mahu who was looking at him worriedly, touching her arm to show he was okay, Ikenga Looked back at the screen and spoke up "I was able to project a very small part of myself but this part was being pushed back heavily by the outside mana, I was able to get a small word out by pushing back just a bit. I am guessing that was the result" Ikenga said, looking at the two heavily wounded humans.

Looking back at Mahu, Ikenga said "You pulled me back, why?"