

Guardian gods 70

Chapter 70

This was the first time for Osi's power to react like this since he himself knew that he wasn't able to make the power move or react since he knew he has it, so he was at a loss on what to do but it didn't take much time as the curse power inside of him moved on its own to connect to different roots before breaking into some space underground.

Once the roots broke into the underground, Osi noticed how the roots took hold of some apeling which Osi thought was weird but he soon felt a similar power from the apeling souls which came from the same source as his "Curse".

Feeling that connection, Osi instinctively knew what he had to do so he started tugging at the root to pull away the soul but he was then being fought by a power he knew for a fact was stronger than him but he felt no danger which prompted him to pull harder and that seemed to work as the greater power let go of the souls which got back to the surface world and now resides inside of him.

For some reason once the soul got to the surface world, Osi felt himself being watched but to his surprise no one was there when he looked. Osi felt the apeling souls which after getting inside of him curled up like a child and started sleeping after being covered by the cursed power, Osi was bewildered by everything as he retracted his branches.

Osi in silence thought about what just happened, but he couldn't find any explanation for it, but a certain thought came to him which was that maybe him and Ikem has been wrong this whole time about him having cursed power " Maybe I am cursed and this is one of the conditions for the curse to activate"

" Next time Ikem comes over, I will have to bring up this topic with him" Osi thought to himself as the apelings hiding in the cave all walked out looking at the destruction around but none of their expressions changed or were panicked instead they all ran to each crash site to see what it was that fell from the sky.

A few moments back before the Whale moved away. Inside the enormous space of the space creature lies ruins of countless planets that it has eaten, on one of the planet's ruins lies a huge head the size of a football with one of its horns missing.

Any advanced civilisation will recognise that most creatures that bear this appearance are commonly known as demons that reside in abyss.

One thing particular about this demon was that it was of a high level to be able to survive in the stomach space of this enormous whale.

Even though most of the demon body part is gone, it's head is still alive, capable of thought, feeling that the whale stopped moving the eyes of the demon rolled around.

" This is my last chance of leaving this creature's stomach, if not then I am at the risk of being digested. I wonder if the others have managed to escape or have they been digested"

" I wonder how long I was inside here, my layer probably has been conquered by another abyss demon" the demon thought to itself before its eyes looked up to the opening nose of the whale.

Soon in the demon's eyes, the ruins around it started floating up attracted to the opening before being ejected out.

The demon watched all this before it began laughing hysterically with a twisted smile on its face, the reason for this laughter was that most of the ruins been pushed out this time is where most of its body part was.

Any civilization that knows anything about the abyss demons, know that if a demon reaches a certain level, killing them is no longer possible as any part of them that manages to survive will eventually lead to it becoming whole again.

The demon was laughing because it felt the king lost connection with its body part once they left the space of the stomach, but soon the laughter stopped as the demon noticed that the amount of body part it felt a connection with wasn't much.

Soon the expression of the demon changed as it felt itself floating upward. This time it turned into a full blown laughter, soon the demon was once again exposed to the beauty of the boundless space filled with stars.

The demon wasn't able to enjoy the view as it sensed five familiar presence which prompted it to look at where the presence was but it saw five golden souls looking at the whale.

" Five gods? And not your typical gods but Origin gods. This isn't good" the demon thought with squinted eyes before it felt itself falling into the huge world below it.

Once the demon penetrated through the sky of Nana and started falling down to Earth, it felt its long lost power with it squeezed out before covering itself for protection.

As the demon fell, it surveyed the surroundings from the sky, it felt its body part split between continents but its expression was no longer of joy, instead cautious and thoughtful.

The continent where its body part fell was occupied by creatures with presence similar to the origin gods it saw, which means that those body parts will be hard to recover if it doesn't regain his full strength.

Another thing was that the demon knows that it can't fall on any of the continents bearing a presence similar to the gods as that puts it at risk of being exposed.

" Even if I stay hidden, the gods will soon notice something wrong" the reason for this was something of a blessing and curse every high level demon has to bear.

Abyss demon's most troublesome characteristics most civilisation finds troublesome is their immortality and this goes for any demon both high and low.

Once in a war with any world, this trait is one of their greatest cards as after a demon dies it's soul is pulled back by the abyss where it's reborn and joining the battle once again.

The soul of an abyss demon can be brought back to the abyss because of the abyss imprint, so as long as an abyss demon bears this imprint they are immortal unless you destroy the abyss itself which is impossible to do.

This trait becomes a problem for higher level demons whose abyss imprint has been worn out over the long years of imprisonment. The whale is one of the only existence that derives abyss demon their Immortal ability as one you are entrapped in the creature stomach the abyss can't call back your soul and revive you, instead you stay inside the stomach as it corrodes the abyss imprint away.

Once the imprint wears out, an innate ability acquired by all high level demons manifests which is another form of immortality where any of their different body parts bears the demon's consciousness. This form of Immortality isn't exactly liked by the demons who have lost their imprint because the body parts have to take over another living being and the being consciousness meaning that there is a risk of the consciousness deviating and having its own thought overriding its instinct of becoming whole.

The demon now falling onto the planet of Nana is now under the same circumstances, it wouldn't have minded if it never escaped the whale stomach as there is hope of one of its body part leading it to become whole but now it escaped, the chances of it becoming enemy with its body part is huge.

This is because the demon and it's body part now has one goal which is to sacrifice this world to the abyss and once again receive the abyss grace and imprint, The body part consciousness from the moment they take over anybody residence of this planet will subconsciously work on creating chaos in hope of sending this world into the abyss. This act will lead to the origin gods knowing that an abyss demon has infiltrated their world.

" This is not good, five origin gods and now I have to face my split self" A look of glee crossed the demon's eyes as it looked to the continent that haven't been paid any attention by any of the gods which was the southern continent.

" Hahaha, good the harder conquering this world proves to be, the better the reward i will receive from the abyss" Laughing maniacally the demon head deviated as it fell down to the southern continent.

The demon falling looked inconspicuous with another rain of fire, making its journey to the southern continent easy. Once the demon head landed, it caused a huge explosion chasing away every creature around.

The demon head stayed in the small hole in silence as it waited, it has lived for a long time and being in countless worlds to understand that Curiosity is an attribute every creature bears meaning it may take time but certainly someone will approach this crash site in hope of seeing what fell and that's when it will move.