

Hammer God 422

Chapter 422 Fiery Giant

As soon as Kyle said that, the three golems changed.

They realized that they couldn't stall anymore and entered combat mode.

Sulfur's arms turned into massive blades.

Hieronymus' teeth elongated. At the same time, his body shrank, while his head remained the same size.

In essence, Hieronymus was now a walking maw with terrifying teeth.

The ground cracked as Sulfur charged forward.

Hieronymus shot to the side, blocking the most obvious path of retreat for Kyle.

A streak of fire appeared behind Sulfur, curving around him to shoot at Kyle.

BANG!

Kyle charged towards his left, his body instantly reaching its maximum speed.

BOOOOOM!

Sulfur's blade hit the ground, missing Kyle.

The fireball curved, following Kyle as he charged towards Hieronymus.

Suddenly, Hieronymus' hind legs exploded, shooting him towards Kyle at shocking speeds.

Meanwhile, Sulfur readied his second blade as he followed Kyle as well.

Kyle reached Hieronymus' mouth with incredible speed.

Hieronymus bit down.

But then, Kyle suddenly stopped, mere inches away from the approaching Hieronymus.

BANG!

Hieronymus' mouth clamped shut in front of Kyle.

It had clamped down on something, but it wasn't its target's body.

Meanwhile, Kyle held his hammer forward, which was now firmly between Hieronymus' teeth.

Kyle suddenly moved to the side with more speed, and Hieronymus shot past him, still having the hammer in its mouth.

The fireball angled to the side.

Naturally, the three of them had been programmed to fight together. They wouldn't make such a rookie mistake like letting Hieronymus run into Granite's Spell.

The fiery speck near Kyle's Center became more intense as a ton of Ether entered Kyle's body.

Then, he swung his hammer.

Hieronymus let go of the hammer, but the hammer's pick simply rose upwards, burying itself into the ceiling of its maw.

Finally, Kyle swung Hieronymus right into Granite's Spell.

BOOOOOOM!

A fiery explosion appeared around Hieronymus, but Granite had detonated the Spell early.

Hieronymus' body heated up significantly, but it wasn't enough to damage it significantly.

An instant later, Sulfur's blade entered the explosion, and it directly targeted Kyle.

Kyle just lifted Hieronymus to block the attack, but Sulfur's blade stopped before it could hit Hieronymus.

Meanwhile, Kyle just smirked.

'Oh, Theodor,' he thought. 'You have taught me so much about how golems fight. Whenever you saw Lily's golems hitting each other, you boasted that your three main golems would never make such a mistake.'

'After all, you programmed them to never attack each other.'

'Sure, you also gave Granite an override command that allows him to strike one of the other two in case of an emergency.'

Kyle glanced through the fiery explosion, right at Sulfur.

'But Sulfur doesn't have that.'

BANG!

Ignition was launched, and Kyle shot right at Sulfur.

Sulfur could see that Kyle was extremely dangerous.

Right now, Kyle was upgraded to a Peak Third Realm threat in its mind.

The highest priority in these situations was to protect Lord Theodor, but Lord Theodor was not present.

The second highest priority was to protect Granite.

Sulfur moved to the side, staying between Kyle and Granite.

Sulfur could see Kyle approaching.

Yet, it realized that the chances of hitting Hieronymus were way too high.

The third highest priority was not to strike the other golems.

So, there was only one thing Sulfur could do.

He crossed his arms and blocked.

Meanwhile, Granite unleashed a different Spell.

Kyle felt the air between him and Granite turning electric, and he knew what was about to come.

He held Hieronymus to the front.

But that didn't matter.

BOOOOM!

A violent bolt of lightning hit Hieronymus, breaking it into pieces.

Parts of the lightning also hit Kyle, but Hieronymus had absorbed the majority of the power.

When Sulfur saw that Hieronymus was no longer there, he launched his own attacks.

The two blades shot right at Kyle.

At that moment, Kyle's green speck was shaking.

Kyle's trajectory was redirected without losing any speed, avoiding both strikes.

Then, Kyle reached Sulfur's head as Granite launched another Spell.

The hammer hit Sulfur's head.

CRK!

Sulfur's head was incredibly hard, and Kyle's hammer only managed to dig about a meter into Sulfur's head, which wasn't much considering its gargantuan size.

At that moment, all of Granite's Spells reached Sulfur's head as well.

BOOOOOOOOOM!

A storm of ice and fire surrounded Sulfur's head.

Sulfur's Core was in its chest. Destroying its head to kill Kyle was worth it.

The storm of destruction was brutal, and if Kyle had been in that, he would definitely have died.

Granite's gaze turned forward, and he saw Kyle right in front of it.

If he had gone all out, Kyle could have destroyed Sulfur's head with a strike.

But instead, he had decided to just act like he wanted to destroy Sulfur's head.

In fact, his first hammer was still near Sulfur's head.

FIRST hammer.

After Kyle had put his hammer right into Sulfur's head, he had charged down its chest, creating a second hammer.

He had enough metal in his Soul Space to do that.

Then, he had passed through Sulfur's legs to charge at Granite.

While Sulfur's head didn't house his golem core, it housed most of his sensors.

The golems were connected and had shared perception.

Yet, when the storm of ice and fire surrounded Sulfur's head, it had lost track of Kyle, and its body was blocking Granite's line of sight to Kyle.

Kyle arrived in front of Granite, who had just launched all of his prepared Spells.

Granite just wordlessly looked at Kyle as the hammer approached its body.

CRACK!

The pick of the hammer buried into Granite's chest, right where its Core was.

Kyle felt the crack of the golem Core and the released Ether.

Granite was dead.

The next moment, Sulfur launched another attack.

BOOOM!

Kyle blocked it by holding his hammer out.

He was launched backward, destroying a bunch of walls.

However, the attack was not strong enough to injure him heavily.

Instead, Kyle showed a toothy grin as his body and hammer suddenly grew.

Sulfur kept attacking, but Kyle just moved out of the way.

Within less than half a second, Kyle outgrew Sulfur.

From a giant, Sulfur had transformed into a manlet in Kyle's perception.

Sulfur was over 50 meters tall.

Yet, Kyle was still growing.

He avoided a couple more attacks, which became much easier since he just had to step to the side due to the size difference.

When Kyle reached his full height of a hundred meters, he just looked down.

His upper body was already surrounded by the ceiling, but earth didn't matter to someone of Kyle's power.

It might as well be air.

Kyle lifted his hammer.

Above the ground, the people of Theodor's Rest had been feeling a slight quake this entire time.

But then, some of them saw something in the distance.

A gigantic hammer rose out of the ground on the horizon.

Then, a burst of smoke shot out of the hammer.

Finally, the hammer vanished.

Yet, just moments after it vanished, a thick pillar of fire shot into the sky from the place where the hammer had just been.

The pillar was almost 50 meters wide and illuminated the sky for miles.

Meanwhile, some people close to the entrance of Kyle's mine charged towards the fiery pillar.

They saw smoke and fire everywhere.

They had no idea what was going on. Read complete version only at novelfire\(.\)netnet)

"You're on private property," a bellowing voice from the heavens announced.

The people looked upward, and their minds stopped as they saw a humongous face peering through the fiery clouds.

"Leave or die!"
