

Hammer God 560

Chapter 560 Karmic Redemption

Kyle took(a fart) to the sky and flew towards the planet.

The planet Kyle was currently on was one of many planets that belonged to the ruler of Medea.

Naturally, he had learned almost everything there was to know about the surroundings before coming here, and he knew how the government worked around these parts.

The planet Kyle was on was considered a Law Comprehension Planet for Yin-Fire and Yang-Fire.

In order to get to the planet, one had to pay the owner some money.

Naturally, Kyle's persona had already paid the owner, and technically, he still had a couple of years left before he had to leave.

"If you leave, your remaining time here is forfeit, Impact Master," a voice spoke in Kyle's mind.

When he heard the title of his persona, Kyle did his best not to cringe.

Impact Master was such a stupid title.

In the Supreme World, no Seeker used their real name.

When someone became a Transcendent, they chose a title and used that.

Apparently, the reason for that was that true names had some powers later down the line, and if someone knew somebody's true name, it could become a fatal flaw in their defense.

'Fucking Impact Master. I really have to change that stupid fucking title the first chance I get,' Kyle thought. 'Luckily, I'll get an opportunity real soon.'

"Keep the change," Kyle said as he kept flying.

"As you wish," the voice spoke.

Kyle just kept flying towards Medea.

Fortunately, his persona had also had the ability to traverse planets without too much difficulty.

Sure, his persona was quite a bit weaker, but he had still been fast enough to get past the gravity barrier, which just referred to having enough speed and Energy to leave the range of the planet's gravity.

Of course, different planets had different levels of gravity.

For example, Medea and the planet Kyle had just left had a very weak gravity barrier, while Orchis had a regular weak gravity barrier.

Some planets had such intense gravity that not even people in the Wisdom Fire Realm could escape.

As Kyle kept flying, he eventually reached Medea's gravitational influence.

The planets had been rather close, and Kyle had only needed a couple of hours to get from one planet to another.

From this distance, he could actually see a couple of details of Medea.

Medea was about as big as Saturn, but it didn't have a cool ring.

The planet was around 30% ocean and 70% land.

Surprisingly, there were almost no mountains anywhere. The entire planet was quite flat, and even the deepest spot in the oceans was only seven kilometers deep.

This planet didn't used to be like this.

According to one of the books Kyle had read, some long-vanished organization found the planet and decided to make it a trading hub for medicine.

Naturally, people in the Main Dimension didn't need medicine very often.

Most of them never needed medicine even once in their lives.

However, there were rare cases in which medicine was actually necessary.

Some Seekers or beasts had abilities that could poison someone, and these poisons could use the afflicted person's Energy as fuel.

Another kind of medicine was also Karmic Medicine, but calling it medicine was a misnomer.

Karmic Medicine was just donating to an organization that would forward part of the donations to the Mortal Dimension.

The powerful leaders of the organization would keep 80% of the donations to themselves, and the remaining 20% would be distributed amongst the Mortal Dimension.

It was not a good or efficient way to increase one's Karmic Luck, but it was one of the only ones available.

After all, the best way to increase one's Karmic Luck was to help Mortals, but Mortals rarely existed in the Main Dimension, and people below the Tenth Realm couldn't ascend to the Mortal Dimension with their own power.

Nowadays, Medea was owned by the organization that ran one of the Karmic Medicine businesses.

It was called Karmic Redemption, and it was a Lower Supreme Organization.

As Kyle entered the atmosphere, he slowed his speed until he eventually gently landed in front of the biggest city on Medea.

The city was a couple of hundred kilometers across, and it was filled with over a billion residents.

And yes, a big chunk of them were Transcendents or stronger.

But why were there so many Transcendents living there?

What was the point of making such a big city with only Transcendents?

While there were many big cities, only a few of them had that many inhabitants.

Most of the time, when someone saw a huge city in the Main Dimension, it was just big because the residents had humongous buildings that were kilometers upon kilometers big.

Because of that, many cities that were hundreds of kilometers wide often only had a number of inhabitants in the lower thousands.

The reason why this city had so many inhabitants was simple.

They were all retired.

The city was filled with Transcendents, Primals, and even Crushers who had abandoned their path to power.

The only thing they wanted was to have a family, relax, and donate to Karmic Redemption to increase their Karmic Luck.

Another reason was a certain other service Karmic Redemption offered.

Family Union.

The city had a Formation Array that kept the people living here anchored to the Main Dimension.

Formation Arrays were constructs made of fuel, pillars, staves, and other things, which formed complex lines between them. These constructs imitated how a Law worked, giving them the power to harvest the effects of said Law.

A Formation Array imitating Yin-Fire could consume pure Energy to shoot a stream of Yin-Fire at an enemy.

The Family Union Formation Array existed to stop young children from being sent to the Mortal Dimension.

Apparently, children were sent to the Mortal Dimension when they were twelve if they had been born in a different Dimension.

For many parents, it was difficult to let their children enter a different world on their own at the age of twelve, and the Family Union Formation Array stopped that from happening.

Another reason why so many Transcendents stayed here was that Medea had a healthy and helpful government in the Mortal Dimension.

When the children of the Seekers were ready to start their path to power, they could simply leave the city, after which they would be sent to the Mortal Dimension version of Medea.

With luck, they would return to the Main Dimension in the future, and they might even be able to reunite with their parents.

Life in the Supreme World was quite different from life on Earth.
