

Heaven 1048

Chapter 1048: Four Taboo Locations.

The grandma asked, curious about why someone like Yasenia had taken her time to come to this relatively remote area. "So, tell me, Dear. Why are you searching for an information broker?"

Yasenia saw the mortal maid pouring her some tea, so she thanked her and then took a sip from the cup. "Good tea." Yasenia smiled and then commented, her cup gently rattling against the china. "We've arrived at this place to search for something. We don't really know what it is. However, we know that it is north of this city. Do you know of any landmarks that are considered taboo or any place that's a tomb or perhaps a sealed mountain?"

The grandma and grandpa were somewhat surprised at Yasenia's straightforwardness. After all, what she just told them was quite a private thing. It was clear that Yasenia was looking for something extraordinary, and if they had been greedy people, revealing as much as she did could be dangerous.

The grandma spoke sternly. "Dear, you can't say things like that! What if someone wants to take advantage of you? You need to be careful when revealing such information!"

The dragoness's lips arched gently. "I trust that you, Madam and Sir Dan, are not such people. If you had been anything else but trustworthy, I wouldn't be here enjoying tea with you."

The grandma looked at Yasenia softly and extended her hand, grabbing Yasenia's and patting it gently. "Dear, what's your name?"

"My name is Yasenia, Madam Dan."

The grandma smiled. "That's a beautiful name. Then, Yasenia, since you trust us so much, I will answer." She looked at her husband and asked. "Is that okay, love?"

The grandpa smiled faintly, taking a sip of his drink. "Go ahead. Little Yasenia has proven to be trustworthy as well."

The grandma's smile deepened, her gentle wrinkles crinkling warmly. Her husband was the head of the house, and she, like everyone else, greatly respected him. Though he was always doting and had assured her many times that she could make decisions on her own, she had formed the habit of checking with him long ago—a habit she continued to this day.

Grandma Dan spoke. "North of here, there are a few landmarks, like you said. The [Fulminant Snow Swamp] is one of them. The strange weather there, caused by unnatural causes we are not very aware of, managed to make the temperature astoundingly low while not freezing the dangerous waters of the swamp. The beasts roaming that area are also very powerful."

Yasenia looked at Alaia, who nodded and took a jade scroll to write it down. The grandma smiled, not bothered at all, and she continued. "Then, there is the [Profound Seven Ring Mystic Forest]. A natural formation of trees in a strange circular manner creates a natural formation of illusions. Without a powerful mind and counteracting talismans and formations, don't you dare go there. Understood?"

Yasenia nodded faintly. "I understand. Thanks for the warning, Grandma Dan."

The grandma waved her hand. "No need for thanks!" She added, her tone serious. "There are two more interesting places that are not known to the general public, which is why I asked my husband for permission to tell you, Yasenias."

Yasenias eyes flickered. "I see. May I ask what their names are?"

Grandma Dan nodded, but first, she warned. "Yasenias, you must promise me two things. First, only those in your group will be made aware of these two places. They are hidden for the safety of the public more than anything else. Second, if you ever decide to go, tell us first so that we can tell your group about the dangers there in detail."

Yasenias pondered for a few seconds, and after a few moments, she nodded. "I promise."

Grandma Dan smiled. "A Dragons promise has a lot of weight. Dont you dare break it!"

Yasenias smiled. "I havent broken a single promise Ive verbally made in my life. Be at ease."

Grandpa Dan asked, his bushy white eyebrow-raising. "Oh? Those words felt like the truth. Have you really never broken any promise?"

"Never." Yasenia asserted with conviction.

Grandma Dan nodded. "Thats great. You do justice to your race, Yasenia."

The dragoness smiled. She then waited patiently until Grandma Dan was about to tell her. However, a maid arrived and spoke softly. "Lady Dan, Lord Dan, the Fifth Young Master is back. He is currently being guided here."

Knowing that her grandson was coming, Grandma Dan actually snorted. "What a way to interrupt a Lady. Compared to Little Yasenia, he is a barbarian!"

Grandpa Dants lips gently curved, clearly knowing that his wife already favored Yasenia more than her blood grandson. Not that it required much effort. "This will be quite fun."

"Nainai! Yeye! Ive come with Sister Gong to pay you a visit."

Yasenias and her maids saw how their annoyed but clearly doting faces had changed to a genuinely annoyed face. They had to do their best not to laugh aloud. "She really doesnt like the great-granddaughter of that Gong person, does she?"

Looking over to the entrance, Yasenia saw a handsome young man with luxury brocades walking in confidently. His attitude was forcefully poised, making him seem a little bit silly. However, Yasenia couldnt feel the usual maliciousness of other Young Masters in him, so she attributed it to the young man being a bit... silly but honest.

Meanwhile, when she looked at his accompanying person, her pupils couldnt help but shrink slightly. The woman was gorgeous, her clothes flowing behind her like a cloud and her steps being airy and ethereal. However, her body reeked of the worst of arrogance and narcissism, completely shattering the beautiful image that the woman had created with her otherwise charming appearance.

Yasenias just met her, and the way she carried herself felt like a sinful smear in a beautiful painting. Of course, she was not fast to judge and didnt say anything. However, her senses rarely failed her with these matters.

Grandpa Dan had been observing Yasenia and felt her reaction, making him appreciate her even more. 'She is a really interesting young woman. What a shame that she is already married. If not, I would've supported Dan'er in her attempt to marry her to our silly grandson.'

After entering the room, the pair saw that a group of people was accompanying the elders and looked over. The grandson's face changed to one of pure shock when he saw Yasenia. He thought that he had been looking at flowers all his life, but after seeing Yasenia, those beautiful women were just like grass! The flower was sitting there elegantly, sipping tea with those luscious lips.

On the other hand, the Gong woman's face went from pure arrogance to shock. However, the shock didn't last, as envy and jealousy bubbled in her stomach and rose like bile, making her face poisonous for a single second. She recovered her senses quickly, but it was too late.

Yasenias sharp senses naturally caught the maliciousness, and she glared over, her golden gaze seemingly piercing through space and penetrating deep into the woman's eyes.

Grandma Dan, who also noticed, was about to frown when she saw the Gong girl's face become somewhat pale as she took a step back. 'Ho~?' Looking at Yasenia, she saw that she had already returned to take another sip of the tea. 'Hahaha~, Class incarnate! This is how a truly beautiful woman carries herself!'

"Come and sit, Little Che, Lady Gong. We were about to talk about a few interesting matters." She then smiled at Yasenia. "Also, Little Che might look a lot, but please forgive him. He is a bit young and... Well, healthy. Fufu~."

Dan Che reacted and stuttered. "Nainai! What are you saying!?"

Meanwhile, Yasenia smiled faintly. "I don't mind, Grandma Dan. I am accustomed to receiving gazes of all kinds."

"Great~!" Grandma Dan smiled widely. "Little Che, Miss Yasenia here was asking for nearby landmarks to the north. You've already studied about this with your Master, right? How about you tell her?"

Lady Gong frowned faintly and said. "Lady Dan, while I don't know what kind of person she is, telling people about the two forbidden lands is not something we should do."

Dan Che frowned slightly. Why was she, a junior, lecturing a senior? Dan Che might not be very bright, but he had respect for his elders and family, which were deeply ingrained in him. It was clear that if his grandmother was agreeable to tell her, she had her own considerations. He looked at Lady Gong and said. "Fen'er, if Nainai is telling Lady Yasenia, then she must've thought about it. It is not our place to tell otherwise."

Gong Fen frowned sadly, her willowy eyebrows looking pitiful as they arched. "W-Why are you so harsh? I was just being thoughtful..."

The pitiful act was so well executed and practiced that Yasenia almost rolled her eyes. 'No wonder Dan Che fell for this woman. An actress of the highest caliber.' Noticing the displeased expressions on both elders' faces when Dan Che started feeling guilty, she pondered. 'Hm... I should give them a hand.'

Before Dan Che spoke, Yasenía uttered softly. "You are an educated lady, Miss Gong. You should accept wrongs when you commit them and be graceful about it instead of searching for the pity of others."

When she saw Dan Che pausing to think, Grandma Dan almost cheered. Still, she kept her composure and spoke. "Indeed. I have my considerations. Now, Dun Che, tell her about those two places. Nainai has already explained the previous two."

Dan Che saw Yasenía looking over with a gentle gaze, and his bones softened. 'Oh Heavens. Having such beauty should be a sin! Focus, Dan Che! Don't become an embarrassment!'

"W-Well..."

Dan Che almost slapped his own face. 'I stuttered my first word! I am done for.'

Yasenía spoke, encouraging the young man. "Continue, Young Master Dan."

Dan Che swallowed his embarrassment and coughed. "Sorry for that, Lady Yasenía."

Yasenía nodded. "Don't mind it. We all have our days."

"Ahem. North of our city, our clans hide two forbidden zones from the public's eyes due to their dangerous nature." After managing to speak the first sentence correctly, the rest flowed easily.

"While the two other places you've heard about, the [Fulminant Snow Swamp] and [Profound Seven Ring Mystic Forest], are dangerous, if you are prepared, you can avoid death in the majority of the situations."

Yasenía nodded. "So I heard. What's so different about these two other places?"

Dan Che continued. "Well, the [Deadly Magma Cave] and [Moon Swallowing Mountain] are different because all who enter either don't return or, even if they do, they become crippled and never recover from their expeditions. Yeye- I mean, Grandpa Dan, is one of the few who managed to enter both places and return relatively unscathed. He lost a leg for it, though."

Yasenía hummed. "I see." He looked at Grandpa Dan and smiled. "Senior, you are a Transcendent Realm cultivator, right?"

Grandpa Dan smiled faintly. "Indeed. If you really want to go to those places, you must be accompanied by at least one."

Yasenía sighed. 'Even a Sixth Realm cultivator lost a leg? Those places are beyond what I expected.'
