Chapter 1001 Attractive but Deadly Flower

These thugs looked around in fear, for they had done many terrible things over the years. They no longer had any desire to force themselves on Vania.

"Ah!" Several people shrieked simultaneously and covered their crotches.

"There's really a ghost!"

Shrouded in a sense of horror, they felt their hair standing on end. In this desolate place, Vania looked somewhat eerie.

"Boss..."

All of them gathered fearfully, not daring to breathe slightly louder.

It was Vania's doing. She had picked up some rocks on the floor and cast them at these men. Since it was just the beginning, she didn't exert much force as she only wanted to teach them a lesson.

While the thugs looked around in shock, she slowly sat up. The ropes around her had already been untied, and the atmosphere was spooky at that moment.

Chapter 1002 Another Group of People

Although Vania was charming, these people stepped backward fearfully.

"What's stopping you from charging forward? It seems like you understand the virtue of respecting women, eh? In that case, I'll make a move first," Vania said teasingly, feeling that these thugs were too timid.

These thugs were terrified deep within. Since we're thugs, there's no way we're virtuous. We're just intimidated by you!

They trod backward as Vania moved forward. When the woman finally stopped in her tracks, they also came to a standstill.

She waved her hand and cast ten rocks at them simultaneously, after which these people fell to their knees.

"Do you think I'm the Genie or something? Why salute me in such a way? I'm worried I won't be able to grant your wishes."

These people felt helpless. Even if you want to grant us wishes, we don't have the guts to accept them.

"Ouch!" The thug suffered another fracture, and he couldn't help but yelp in pain. He was already suffering from his first fracture, and his hand hurt even more now. The thug was worried that he would lose his arm.

"What is it? Did something happen?" Suddenly, Vania's eyes fluttered open as though she had no idea what just happened.

Although her acting was very convincing, the thugs already guessed that it was her doing and were amazed by her accuracy.

"Why is everyone looking so fearful? Am I that scary?" There was no light in her eyes, only an abyss that reminded them of the Grim Reaper.

The thugs agreed in secret, thinking that she was terrifying. Nonetheless, they didn't dare speak their minds.

"We're just a little shaken since this place is rather secluded," the leader said. "It's definitely not because our hands are hurting."

Oh, are they going to film me? I'll have to record a good one for Yvonne, then, Vania thought.

The voices outside the building continued, "She looks beautiful even in pictures. We'll have a treat today."

One man laughed loudly. "I'm afraid you'll need some medical help first."

"Are you looking down on me? I'll show you later what I'm capable of..."

Vania's ears twitched. Based on her senses, she reckoned there might be five men outside, and as their footsteps approached, their voices became clearer too.

"Guys, prepare your cell phones, and don't forget to record everything." The person who gave out the instruction was clearly the leader.

Seeing that everyone was silent, Vania adjusted her posture and raised her brows, asking, "Are you guys afraid?"

"You..." For some reason they didn't understand, the thugs were scared when they saw her like this, and they stammered for a few seconds without completing their sentence.

Amused, Vania flashed them a cruel sneer. "What are you trying to say?"

"Can't you read the room? Naturally, we're all going to have some fun together!" Despite their fear, the thugs still spoke threateningly. Bored by the same old lines, Vania was uninterested and muttered in response before closing her eyes again.

Huh? What is going on? What's up with this woman? The thugs had never met someone who wasn't scared of them at all, and they continued to put up a threatening front. "How dare you! You'd better get down on all fours in our boss' presence!" one shouted, but he sounded a little timid with no trace of confidence at all.

"Cut the crap and let the fun begin!" Vania snapped, sounding more impatient than the thugs.

The door was already kicked to the side, and he walked in with a solemn face. Just the thought that his wife had been captured and brought to such a place made him furious, but he was shocked when he saw the scene within the building.

"My dear," Hanson called, pacing toward her in big strides. On both sides of Vania, a group of men were still hugging each other. "Are you hurt?"

Vania pretended to be shocked. "No, but I was scared when I saw them hurting each other after they barged into the building."

Hanson was pretty sure that his wife was acting suspiciously, but he said tenderly, "Don't be afraid. I'm here now." Then, he turned to the thugs. "Since you've given my wife a scare, you'll have to bear the consequences."

"We did not—" Vania cast a warning glare at them at once, and the thugs swallowed their words. To save their lives, they changed their tune, saying, "It's our fault. Please let us off, sir, and we'll work our butts off to repay you."

As though they had agreed on it, the thugs were begging on their knees. "Please let us off, Mrs. Luke." At that moment, they'd learned to respect her, and they reckoned it would be most appropriate to address her as Mrs. Luke. Sure enough, when Hanson heard it, the look on his face softened a lot.

Nevertheless, Vania still looked scared as she said helplessly, "I did give you my word that I'll let you off, but the one taking you away is my husband. There's nothing I can do about it." She even spread her palms to show her helplessness, and the thugs crumpled on the floor in fear.

That isn't what she said earlier!

Earlier, she agreed that she would let them off if they followed her instructions, but she was washing her hands off them. "Please let us go, Mrs. Luke. We'll be your lackeys from now on and do whatever you tell us to." Scared out of their wits, they had already forgotten the pain in their bodies.

Spreading her palms once more, Vania asked, "But why do I want such dumb subordinates?"

Not only did she abuse them physically, she even humiliated their intelligence, causing them a great blow. However, they succumbed to their survival instincts and continued to plead with her fearfully, setting aside all their pride and begging with all their might.

Chapter 1008 It Depends on Yvonne

Yvonne's grip on the phone tightened, and she tapped on the screen furiously.

'Are you Vania?'

'It doesn't matter who I am. The important thing is that you enjoy that video, Miss Kepler.'

With her phone in her hand, Yvonne gritted her teeth. It's Vania. I'm sure it's her.

She could even imagine Vania's gleeful face, but how could she be so strong and not have a scratch when she faced fifteen men? Also, how did she manage to record a video?

Yvonne destroyed a brand new cup and replied, 'How do you know whether I like it or not?'

The answer from Vania came almost instantly. 'It's alright if you don't like this video because there will be new ones coming up. I'm sure you'll find something you like.'

The thugs' predicaments in the police station could also be recorded and sent to her for viewing. Since she was out to upset Yvonne, she reckoned that she should do a thorough job.

'Save it,' Yvonne replied and exited the application to stop texting Vania. So, she's so capable that she could fight off so many men alone, huh? Then, I'll increase the difficulty level for this b*tch and catch her alive. When the time comes, I'll put her through a living hell!

On the other end, Vania knew that Yvonne had left the chatroom in anger because of her and had a hunch that she was going to be in trouble again soon. Still, she wasn't worried at all. If Yvonne had a hundred ways to get her, she had a hundred and one ways to get out of the situation.

Seeing that she had stopped texting, Hanson said, "Sweetie, in the future, let me handle something as dangerous as this."

Although Vania could easily take care of regular thugs, he wanted to minimize the possibility of an accident.

Vania nodded at him. "What happened today was a little unexpected. I'll give you a heads-up next time." "next time?" he asked, his voice

"Dear," Hanson began in a stern voice. "You shouldn't have such dangerous ideas in your head."

"Oh? Do you think you're amazing because you can read minds?" she grumbled.

"I'm not reading your mind. It's your expression that is too obvious." Filled with confidence, Hanson reckoned that reading the change in her expression was as easy as ABC to him, which left Vania speechless.

When they reached home, he carried her out of the car. "We're home, dear."

Hanson had already thought of the way he was going to show her his love. Regardless, it was a request from his wife, so he had to satisfy her by all means.

However, her eyes turned into golf balls. She wasn't even this afraid when facing the thugs and was sure that he was comparable to all the thugs combined.

Vania tilted her head and supported her chin with her hand, asking, "What do you mean by that?"

"You don't get it?" Hanson raised his brows. "If I'm in your heart, you wouldn't have waded into danger alone. You have to let me take care of such situations." Readjusting his position, he pulled her into his arms and added, "Always remember that you should let a man handle the dangerous situations, and I'm your man."

"But I don't think this is dangerous in any way." Vania gave him a shrug. "You've seen it yourself, too, that their combat power is as good as zero," she commented with confidence because she already knew how it would end from the beginning.

In contrast to her bright confidence, Hanson looked a little sullen. Well aware of his wife's temperament, he was only anxious and worried for a few minutes after he received her text. All he wanted was to see her as quickly as possible.

After that, only then did he realize she put herself in a risky position, which was the terrifying part.

Seeing the unpleasant look on his face, Vania wrapped her arms around his neck and said with a straight face, "Just as you're worried about me being in danger, I'll be worried if you're in danger as well." She didn't want her man to be in danger, just as he didn't want his woman to be in jeopardy.

Hanson chuckled at her words. "It looks like we're a couple who spoils each other."
